Palatine penalizes unlicensed firms

Seventh-four Palatine businessmen will get citations from the village today for failing to obtain their 1976 business licenses by the March 31 deadline. Businessmen receiving citations will be required to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court and face court fines and orders to purchase the licenses. The fines range from $25 to $500. Village business license fees range from $35 to $225 and officials said the 85 per cent compliance rate this year for purchasing the licenses was about average.

Special census in Des Plaines

A special census will begin next week to determine if Des Plaines may be eligible for more than $42,000 in additional annual tax revenue. The census is expected to take a week and will cost an estimated $1,470. City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach said four or five persons will be hired as census takers and will be paid 13 cents a name. City officials estimate about 2,000 persons have been added to the city since 1970 when the population was set at 57,239. The additional tax revenue would come from state income and motor fuel taxes and possibly federal revenue funds.

$92,500 for dead woman's kin

The husband and son of Irene Koutros, a Chicago teacher found slain in the Grant Park underground garage in 1973, have been awarded a $92,500 settlement from the Chicago Park District. Chief Probate Court Judge Robert Jerome Dunne has approved the settlement after the United States Fidelity and Guarantee Co. agreed to it. The company insures the park district, which operates the parking lot. Two-thirds of the award was given to the victim's husband, Charles, and the remainder to their son, Demetre, 17. The family is from Somerville, Mass. Mrs. Koutros was slain on July 14, 1973, as she returned to her car following an all-day conference at the Board of Education offices.

Coroner's jury can't find death cause in hanging

A Cook County Coroner's jury has ruled as undetermined the cause of the death of Ronald Markella Jr., who was found hanging at St. Viator High School, Arlington Heights, last month. Deputy Coroner Myron Weigle said Thursday the six-man jury returned the verdict of undetermined because it was unable to conclude if the death was suicide or homicide.

He said Arlington Heights police would be advised they should continue their investigation.

Weigle said he believes it was doubtful the youth committed suicide because the rope used was longer than the distance he would have had to fall to kill himself. In addition, witnesses said the youngster knew nothing about tying knots.

The youth, 14, of 1708 Robbie Ln., Mount Prospect, was found hanging in the school gymnasium March 15.

Here are 4 reasons why Arlington Federal is STRONGEST AND BEST FOR THE NORTHWEST

Arlington Federal is one of the "400," ranking 384th in size among the nation's 5,000 savings and loan associations. We are 16th among the largest savings and loans of the metropolitan Chicago area, a record which is particularly significant when it is realized that we are only 23 years old. Our competitors among Chicago's top 16 were as much as 67 years old when Arlington Federal was founded in Arlington Heights in March 1953.

This record of growth speaks for the reputation that Arlington Federal has earned and for the response of the northwest suburban community to our mission of thrift and development of personal resources.

There are additional reasons why so many savers prefer Arlington Federal. We'd like to mention four here:

- We offer the highest allowable rates of interest.
Almost every financial institution is saying this—banks as well as savings and loans—and if they say so, they do. Savings and loans, of course, are empowered by Federal regulation to offer as much as 5 1/2% more interest than banks can (to encourage investment in housing, one of the nation's major industries, and in home ownership). Even among savings and loans, however, there are differences in this "highest allowable" matter. How much, for example, does an S&L require as minimal deposit for the saver to enjoy the advantages of larger rates of return for certificates of deposit? Some are asking $5,000. At Arlington Federal, the deposit of only $1,000 earns you 7 1/4% annually for a six-year term, 7 1/4% for a four-year term, 6 1/4% for a 2 1/2-year term, 6 1/4% for a one-year term, and 5 1/4% for a 90-day term. Our passbook rate is 5 1/4% and it is compounded daily (more about that below).
- We compute interest for YOUR benefit—not ours.
Did you know that there are some 40 variables in computing the same rate of interest? And that these account for as much as 17 1/2% difference in the interest money you actually receive? This was the finding of a Kansas State University study which showed that in just one of these variables—how interest was computed—there was a difference of almost 68%. Let's show you how this works. At Arlington Federal we compute interest daily from date of deposit to date of withdrawal. Some financial institutions, on the other hand, compute interest by deducting withdrawals from the starting balance of the interest period. To illustrate the difference, let's suppose that you deposit $1,000 on January 1, another $1,000 on February 1, and another $1,000 on March 1. Then on March 31, you withdraw $1,000. How much interest do you get on March 31 from this passbook account paying 5 1/4% annual interest? Using a first-in-first-out (FIFO) method, some institutions cancel the interest on your January 1 deposit and pay you $12.99 in interest for the quarterly period. At Arlington Federal, using day-in-day-out computation, we pay you $24.29 in interest—almost twice as much! As you see, we compute interest for your benefit—not ours.
- Money you deposit here gets invested here.
We think of the northwest suburbs as Arlington Federal Territory. Here is where our roots are and where our future is linked. We don't advertise on television (as do the larger metropolitan institutions) because television is expensive and saturates the entire area, from which these associations draw their funds and where they invest them. Arlington Federal restricts our advertising media to those which serve our area, for greater effectiveness and economy. When you deposit your money with us, it goes back into your own community.
- We have more branches in this area than any other financial institution.
As evidence that the northwest suburban community is best served by Arlington Federal, we have established branches wherever Federal authorities have allowed us. They must look kindly upon us because we have more branches here than any other association. We now range from Mount Prospect to Lake Zurich; we are also in downtown Arlington Heights, north Arlington Heights, and Elk Grove Village—and more branches are coming in Schaumburg, Rolling Meadows, and elsewhere, to serve you still better.

Can you see now why we maintain that we are strongest and best for the Northwest?

Rebels agree to 'trial truce' in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Lebanon's Moslem rebels bowed to U.S., Syrian and Palestinian pressure Thursday and agreed to a 10-day "trial truce" but warned final peace depended on President Suleiman Franjeh's resignation.

Moslem Socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt, whose stubborn opposition to Syrian-negotiated settlements and unyielding insistence on the resignation of Franjeh fueled the latest fighting, said the 27th truce in 11 months would go into effect at noon (4 a.m. CST) Friday.

The temporary truce will suspend the civil war that has claimed more than 15,700 dead and 33,100 wounded in seven fierce rounds of fighting since last April.

The truce would expire at noon Monday, April 12 — one day before the anniversary of the start of the war. Jumblatt said agreement on extension of the cease-fire depended on whether the leftist demands that parliament elect a new president were met.

Jumblatt also demanded parliament begin drafting reforms to strip Maronite Christians of their favored status in Lebanon through secularization of the state.

Jumblatt said his rebel forces would not withdraw from the positions they captured during the latest round of fighting. Rebel Moslem troops overran Beirut's luxury hotel district and captured it from Christians.

Jumblatt said a force of Palestine Liberation Army troops and Palestine Armed Struggle Command guerrillas would join rebel leftist troops of coup leader Brig. Gen. Aziz Ahdab's Beirut army garrison in patrolling the truce.

Jumblatt said the Moslem rebels had renewed the fighting to "force Franjeh's resignation and impose a democratic, secular solution."

"Today, the road is open to these demands and we are ready to offer an opportunity for the implementation of a political solution . . . through a 10-day truce during which time the house will amend the constitution, the current president will resign and a new one will be elected," Jumblatt said.

Diplomatic sources attributed leftist acceptance of the temporary truce to direct intervention by Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat.

The newspaper An Nahar said Arafat had ordered guerrillas to withhold any offensive operations against Christian forces and fire only in self defense.

Syria put further pressure on the leftists to accept the truce with a strong document of "one of the parties" that had complicated the situation by continuing the armed conflict — an obvious reference to Jumblatt's militia group.

The Syrians had already cut off arms supplies to leftist forces and stationed 17,000 troops along the border in a move seen partly as enforcing the weapons boycott and as a threat of possible military intervention.

Seven ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet remained in the eastern Mediterranean, steaming in a holding pattern less than 24 hours from the Lebanese coast.

Guerrillas in Rhodesia will accept Russ, Cuban help to escalate war

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — A Rhodesian black nationalist leader said Thursday his guerrillas would escalate their war against the white supremacist regime with Soviet and Cuban help. Ugandan President Idi Amin accused the CIA of recruiting U.S. and European mercenaries to fight in Rhodesia.

Amin leveled his charges, broadcast by the official Radio Uganda and monitored in Nairobi, during talks with Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the leader of Rhodesia's militant black nationalists.

Muzorewa, in broadcast comments, said his forces were now willing to accept Soviet and Cuban aid to escalate their "armed struggle" against Premier Ian Smith's white minority Government.

According to Radio Uganda, Amin, current chairman of the Organization of African Unity, "condemned the CIA for recruiting mercenaries to fight in Zimbabwe (Rhodesia)" on the side of the Smith regime.

Amin said mercenaries from the United States, Britain and Belgium were fighting in Rhodesia and he appealed to all OAU members to deny these soldiers-of-fortune transit facilities.

Earlier, Muzorewa told a Ugandan audience his black guerrillas had encircled Rhodesia and "the war has already started."

"With assistance from friendly countries such as the Soviet Union and Cuba, the African National Council is in a position to step up the armed struggle," the bishop said in a speech at Makerere University in Kampala, Uganda.

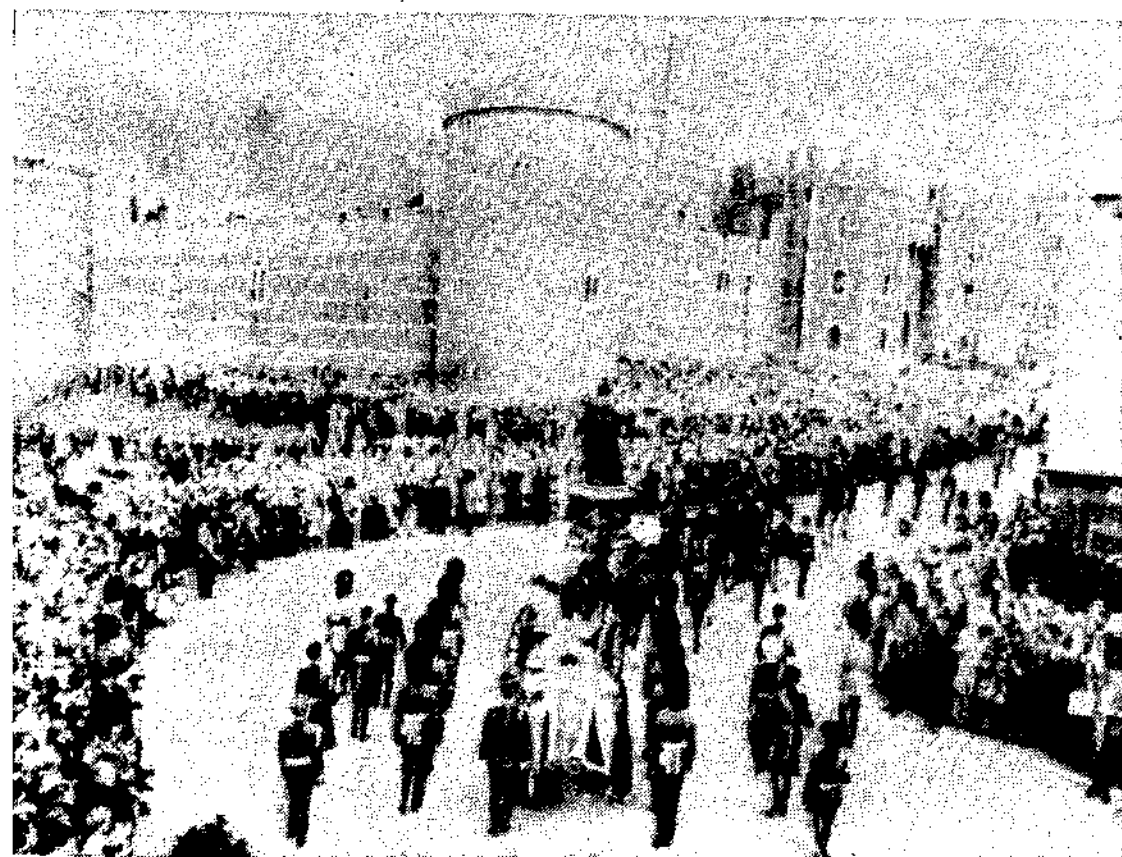

Muzorewa's comments, broadcast by the official Uganda radio, appeared to contradict a statement he made upon his arrival in Uganda Tuesday.

Asked by reporters about possible intervention by Angola-based Cuban troops and Soviet advisors in the Rhodesian conflict, the bishop said then he would seek the help of other African nations before turning to "outside assistance."

About 12,000 Cubans fought alongside the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which, armed with Soviet weapons, defeated two Western-backed factions last January.

The United States has warned the Soviet Union and Cuba not to become involved in Rhodesia's racial struggle.

Uganda radio said Muzorewa reported government losses in the conflict were already "very high" and guerrillas had shot down six government warplanes.

THE COFFIN OF Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, with bearer party of the Coldstream Guards, moves through streets of Windsor, England Thursday during funeral services for the British war hero.

In background is Windsor Castle. After the state funeral, the 88-year-old warrior, who died March 24, was buried in the village of Binsod under a 250-year-old yew tree.

Guns boom as 'Monty' laid to rest

• Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery went to his final rest in a country churchyard Thursday, mourned by a grateful nation and the "Desert Rats" he led to victory over the Nazis in World War II.

Britain bade farewell to its greatest World War II hero with pomp and circumstance in funeral services at St. George's chapel. After the funeral Montgomery's body was borne by five field marshals, an air marshal and an admiral of the fleet to a small churchyard for burial in the shade of a 250-year-old yew tree.

Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth II, led the official mourners at the 500-year-old church in the grounds of Windsor Castle.

Lady Spencer-Churchill, widow of Montgomery's wartime chief, Sir Winston Churchill, also attended the services. A salute of 19 guns boomed over the town as a group of gray-haired North African veterans, the "Desert Rats" who defeated the crack Afrika Korps of Germany's Field Marshal Erwin Rommel and turned the tide toward victory for the Allies, snapped to attention and saluted.

Also nearby stood a dozen veterans of Gurkha units that fought under Montgomery in the Italian campaign, small men from the Himalayas who traditionally have numbered among the British army's fiercest warriors.

• Actor Jason Robards said a role he played on television inspired the $3 million bank robbery in Montreal Tuesday. The robbers copied a recent episode of the television series "The Blue Knight," he said. "It was exactly the same thing I did in the show," he said. The robbers threatened a Brinks truck driver with a 50mm antiaircraft gun and forced him to open the door. Police in Montreal agreed with Robards, saying "It appears the idea of some smart writers in the United States set the pattern."

• U.S. Ambassador Anne Armstrong said an American customs team will be arriving in Northern Ireland soon to check the flow of illegal weapons from the United States to terrorists. The new ambassador to Britain, on a visit to Ulster, also praised the Irish, Texas-style, as a "splendid people" having "true grit."

NATO defenses photographed

MIG too fast for missiles

LONDON (UPI) — Soviet spy planes flying too fast and too high to be intercepted are darting across Europe taking pictures of Western bases and testing NATO's air defenses, the magazine New Scientist said Thursday.

The planes were identified as MIG 25 Foxbats, capable of flying three times the speed of sound at up to 90,000 feet. They are said to be based near Dresden in East Germany and near Gdansk in Poland.

New Scientist said the Western allies have no plane or missile in Europe that can touch the intruder on its nearly once-a-week runs over Britain and other unidentified members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Among the targets for photo runs, the magazine said, are U.S. military installations in Europe, particularly air bases.

Questioned about the report, a NATO spokesman in Brussels said, "We have no reports about any overflights of NATO countries by the MIG25s."

"We know the plane, we know it has been operational for a few years and we know it has been used (in Eastern Europe)," the spokesman said.

According to New Scientist, the spy planes began the runs shortly after they were moved to the forward East German and Polish bases 18 months ago.

"High-altitude MIG 25 aircraft of the Soviet Air Force are making regular reconnaissance and electronic intelligence gathering missions over Britain and other NATO countries," the magazine said.

It said the spy planes' mission is not only to take pictures but to test the West's air defenses and to chart its radar patterns.

British radar has been able to track the intruders, the magazine said, but inaccurately because of jamming devices aboard the MIG, activated by the pilot during its high speed run.

During wartime, the magazine said the MIG's would be used as reconnaissance for long-range bombers.

"The move forward has brought most parts of Britain within range," it said.

Only one attempt has been made to shoot down a MIG 25, the report said, and that was not over Europe but over Israel.

An Israeli Air Force Phantom Jet fired a Sidewinder air-to-air missile at a MIG overflying Tel Aviv, New Scientist said. The missile fell short.

Panel votes $413.7 billion budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Budget Committee Thursday approved a 1977 federal budget $28 billion bigger than President Ford requested to create a million more jobs for unemployed Americans than Ford's proposal.

By a vote of 14 to 10, the panel recommended spending $413.7 billion next year, compared with $395.8 proposed by Ford, and a deficit of $50.6 billion, compared with Ford's proposed deficit of $42.9 billion.

The committee's proposed budget gives Ford nearly all he asked for defense. It calls for more spending than the President proposed on food stamps, veterans, child nutrition, Social Security and health.

It rejects $11 billion in new tax cuts for individuals and businesses proposed by Ford.

At the same time, it rejects his proposed increases in Social Security payroll taxes, which Democrats argued would hit lower income families the hardest.

The panel's budget calls for $363 billion in revenues, compared with $351 billion proposed by Ford.

The committee's proposal is certain to be challenged on the House floor from two directions.

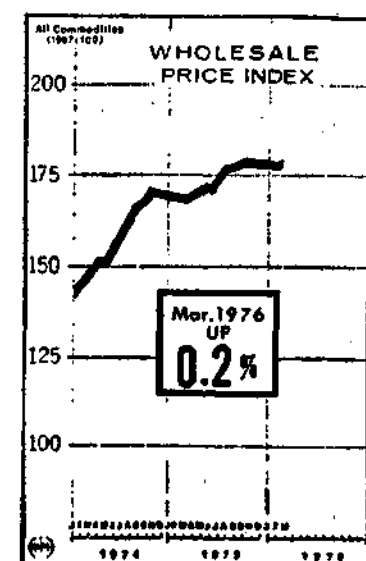

All the panel's eight Republicans voted against it, and they served notice they will seek to restore some of Ford's tax cuts and roll back some of the committee's increases in social spending.

Several Liberal Democrats on the committee wanted even higher spending to create jobs, and some favored less money for defense.

Earlier Thursday the House panel voted 13 to 12 to add $2.2 billion to job-creating programs, bringing the amount it budgets for that purpose to $6 billion. The committee staff said this would create an estimated 1,300,000 more jobs than Ford's proposals.

Rep. Elford A. Cederberg, R-Mich., said the extra money for employment would "head us on our way to another inflationary round" and would throw Congress' efforts at budget control "out the window."

March wholesale prices veer upward

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Wholesale prices veered upward 0.2 per cent in March despite a continued decline in farm prices, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

Although the March figures reversed a recent downward trend, fluctuations in wholesale prices over the past five months have held within a narrow range.

The increase in wholesale prices — which eventually will be passed along to consumers — was caused by a resurgence of inflation among industrial and processed food prices that overshadowed a substantial 1 per cent drop in farm prices.

Prices for industrial goods picked up 0.4 per cent in March after rising a bare 0.1 per cent in February, and processed food costs rose 0.2 per cent — ending a four month-plunge. The drop in farm prices also was less than half as great as in each of the past two months.

The turnaround suggested that inflation might be heating up again after several slack months that prompted President Ford to claim success for his conservative economic policies.

But a Bureau of Labor Statistics expert insisted the figures gave no reason for alarm, saying they offer indications "more or less of stability — at least by recent trends."

The Wholesale Price Index stood at 179.8 in March, an increase of 5.5 per cent over the past year. This means wholesale goods costing $100 in 1967 now cost $179.80.

The reversal in processed foods was caused by rising prices for sugar, dairy products, cereal and bakery products. Meat prices declined, but less than in February.

3 policemen slain in Miami Beach

Three plainclothes Miami Beach policemen, investigating what they thought was a stolen car, were shot to death in a motel parking lot Thursday. Police sealed off all bridges to the resort island and arrested one suspect, who apparently shot himself before his capture. A search for more suspects continued into the night.

Coffee prices hiked 15 cents a pound

General Foods Corp., the nation's largest coffee wholesaler, boosted coffee prices Thursday in a move that should be reflected shortly in grocery retail prices. General Foods raised prices on regular ground coffees by 15 cents a pound. Increases on freeze dried and instant brand ranged from one cent to 2½ cents an ounce, and Max-Pax ground coffee filtering went up 10 cents a can. In a similar pricing action, the Folger's Coffee Co., raised the price of vacuum-packed ground coffee by 15 cents a pound and 2 cents an ounce for instant. The latest price hikes, effective immediately, pushed the wholesale price of Maxwell House, the nation's biggest seller, from $1.74 a pound to $1.89.

Ask funds to beef up convention security

Saying this year's national party conventions could attract terrorists, the administration Thursday urged Congress to approve about $5 million in federal aid to beef up police protection in the convention towns — New York and Kansas City, Mo. Law enforcement officials from both states also asked for a swift approval of funds to finance increased security. "Prior experience indicates, and many law enforcement officials are convinced, that violence-prone individuals could be attracted to these events," said Richard W. Velde, administrator of the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

Reagan to rely heavily on TV

Ronald Reagan plans to rely heavily on television in his bid for the Republican presidential nomination but will continue to campaign personally, a top national aide said Thursday. The initial response to Reagan's first nationally televised address Wednesday — which included an appeal for contributions to keep Reagan's money-starved crusade going — appeared highly enthusiastic according to campaign headquarters in Los Angeles. "The phones have been coming off the hook," a spokeswoman said. "Western Union said we jammed their computer last night."

British pound falls to new low

The British pound sank below $1.90 for the first time in history Thursday, undermined by wildcat strikes crippling the nation's biggest automaker and casting doubt on Britain's ability to achieve economic recovery. Once the world's strongest currency, sterling opened at $1.9130, but, under heavy selling pressure, suffered a three-cent setback to touch $1.8805 at mid-afternoon. Its previous low March 10 was $1.9085.

Walker backs flu shot program

Illinois has become the second state to endorse President Ford's proposal for a federal program to provide vaccine to combat a potential swine flu epidemic next fall.

Gov. Dan Walker announced his support of the plan and Dr. Joyce Lashoff, director of the Illinois Dept. of Public Health, will go to Washington to testify on behalf of a bill that would appropriate $135 million to pay for the vaccine.

The bill is before the subcommittee on health of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

"THE SWINE STRAIN of flu caused millions of deaths throughout the world in 1918. Strong precautionary steps to prevent a similar outbreak are warranted," Walker said.

Dr. Byron Francis, Illinois state epidemiologist, is scheduled to attend a meeting today of health officers from all 50 states at the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Ga.

Health officials will discuss Ford's proposal, the need for a nationwide inoculation program, its feasibility and methods of accomplishing it.

For the past two years, the Illinois Public Health Dept. has been providing flu vaccine for elderly residents. More than 60,000 senior citizens were inoculated in the state against flu in each of the last two years.

THE ONLY OTHER state so far to endorse Ford's proposal is New York.

Doctors are still treating victims of the 1918-19 "Spanish flu," an American Academy of Family Physicians executive said.

Representatives of the 37,000 member academy and the American Medical Assn. told a House health subcommittee they too support President Ford's proposed $135 million mass flu vaccination campaign.

Before testifying, Dr. Herb L. Huffington, president-elect of the academy, said that in his Waterville, Minn., practice he still is treating victims of the last worldwide influenza epidemic.

"WE'VE BEEN TREATING people for years for the after-effects of the 1918 epidemic" of what was then known as "Spanish flu" and now is called "swine influenza," Huffington said.

"There are eight people I am treating now in my southern Minnesota rural practice for Parkinsonism in which the presumption is that most of the cases resulted from the last epidemic."

Parkinson's disease causes muscle rigidity with tremors or twitching. Huffington said 75 to 80 per cent of patients with the disease have had influenza.

ONE REASON family doctors solidly support mass vaccinations against swine flu is its recent appearance among military recruits, "the healthiest group of young people in the country," he said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Thursday urged the government to take advantage of its proposed mass flu vaccination campaign to inoculate children against other diseases at the same time.

Administration health officials demurred on possible safety grounds, saying children under age 5 may not be recommended for routine flu shots.

Kennedy, opening a hearing on the proposal by his Senate health subcommittee, urged speedy action and said:

"The prospect of every American lining up at some point for a flu immunization offers unparalleled opportunities to improve the nation's health in other ways."

Harper, faculty reach deadlock in wage talks

The Harper College faculty and the board of trustees have reached a deadlock in contract negotiations for the 1976-77 school year.

Trustee Robert Rausch, chief board negotiator, said Wednesday he will not meet with the faculty until that group accepts salary ranges set by the board.

Michael Bartos, chief faculty negotiator, said "We interpret that to mean the board is breaking off negotiations."

THE BOARD HAS set the condition that regardless of any negotiated salary increases the maximum ranges set by the board will be enforced, Rausch said. With that condition faculty members whose salary would exceed the maximum range would not receive the full raise.

Bartos said the faculty cannot accept that condition.

"Money is not our concern. It is whether all faculty members get the full raise," Bartos said. "We cannot accept a settlement that does not go to everyone," he said.

Rausch said if the faculty does not accept the enforcement of the salary ranges he will not be in a position to make any counter offers.

Rausch said he will not meet with the faculty negotiators until he makes a report to the board of trustees at next Thursday's board meeting.

Harper's non-union teachers bargain with board members for salary and monetary fringe benefits each year. Faculty members turned down a proposal to unionize last fall.

Negotiations last year ended in a court battle when the board attempted to deny full negotiated raises to 11 faculty members because their salaries would then have exceeded the salary range for their positions. The faculty members won the right to the full raise in June.

In Cember, the Harper board took steps to avoid similar problems this year by approving pay ranges before negotiations began.

The faculty filed suit again in February against the board charging the trustees with bad faith in the current contract talks.

Faculty members objected to the board setting salary ranges before negotiations saying any salary decisions should be made at the bargaining table.

The court ruled in favor of the college board in February, saying the trustees have a right to establish salary ranges. The court also denied the faculty's attempt to make the board negotiate the faculty's salary proposal.

Accident spurs citizens cry for two stop signs

The recent injury of a 5-year-old boy struck by a car while on his way to kindergarten is spurring citizens' calls for the installation of stop signs in two northside neighborhoods.

Residents near Ridge Elementary School and in Virginia Terrace are seeking installation of stop signs at what they believe are two potentially dangerous intersections: Walnut and Elm streets, and Race and Olive streets.

James Johnson and Marilyn Kathian are coordinating the drive around the Ridge school area to prevent a recurrence of last week's accident in which Karl Wahl suffered skull and leg fractures after he was struck near an unprotected intersection by a car driven by a student from nearby Arlington High School.

MRS. KATHIAN SAID petitions are being circulated asking for a four-way stop sign at the Walnut and Elm intersection. She said Walnut Street will carry an increased amount of traffic, and have a greater danger to school age youngsters, when the railroad crossing is opened and motorists begin using Walnut Street to avoid blocked crossings at the two commuter stations in town.

She said the problem will be further aggravated when North Elementary School is closed next year and some of the students begin attending Ridge. "The question is how can we get our children to school and back," she asked.

Johnson will make a presentation to the village board Monday night asking for the signs.

SINCE LAST WEEK'S accident, the village has installed speed and warning signs to alert motorists that they are in a school area. However, village officials oppose a stop sign, saying it is not an effective method to control the traffic.

Further north, John Hosemann said he is being "frustrated in attempts to get a stop sign at Race and Olive streets.

Hosemann, 1345 N. Race St., said the street is appropriately named. He said motorists are using it as an alternative to traffic congestion on nearby Wilke Road.

He said the resulting traffic through a residential area with a number of young children "is going to be bad. It's not funny at all."

HE SAID STOP SIGNS, also opposed by the village for that area, would help break up the flow of traffic.

He has been writing letters and making calls to village officials since last June in an attempt to get the signs, which he said he is willing to pay for.

A letter from Allen J. Sander, village director of engineering, said traffic studies and the "accident experience" at the intersection "does not warrant any type of traffic control device."

Petitions were circulated around the neighborhood, again without the signs being installed.

He wrote to Village Pres. James T. Ryan asking that the signs be installed. Hosemann said the signs could always be removed later if they were found to be ineffective.

Pupils transported on bus with broken speedometer

High School Dist. 214 officials have been sent a letter informing them that Cook County School Bus Inc. has knowingly transported students in a bus which had a broken speedometer.

The letter was sent Thursday by Arlington Heights Village Atty. Ernest Blomquist at the direction of Cook County Associate Judge Milton Solomon.

Judge Solomon called Earl Zimmerman, manager of the bus company, a "menace to the community" when Zimmerman appeared in circuit court March 17.

Zimmerman was subpoenaed to appear before Judge Solomon after Harry Nilsson, a driver for the bus company, appeared in court for speeding 40 in a 25 m.p.h. zone. Nilsson was ticketed in November by Arlington Heights Policeman John Tourtelot when he was enroute to Rolling Meadows High School with approximately 30 students.

Judge Solomon verbally reprimanded Zimmerman when he admitted he permitted Nilsson to operate the bus knowing the speedometer was broken. Zimmerman said he believed Nilsson should have been responsible for the speed of the bus because he was an experienced driver.

The speeding violation against Nilsson was dismissed.

Work on rail crossing to start within a month

THE QUESTION OF whether the village will pay the Chicago and North Western Ry. for right-of-way across the tracks still must be answered. The village is contesting in court the railroad's demand that it pay $15,000 for the right-of-way of the crossing at Ridge and Walnut avenues, which is near completion.

The McKinley Avenue crossing will improve access to eastern Arlington Heights and western Mount Prospect. It is considered important for emergency vehicles traveling north and south in that area because there now is no grade crossing between Central Road in Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights Road — a distance of about two miles.

A 150-foot portion of Wilshire Lane between the alley immediately north-east of Northwest Highway and Carlyle Place will be closed to ease traffic flow when the crossing is completed.

Preschool testing registration set Parents of preschool children in Arlington Heights Dist. 25 who think their preschool child may have a learning or development problem may register for free screening tests in the district.

Parents may register April 5-9 from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. The screenings will be given in May. Two types of screening tests will be offered, one for students who will be age 3 to kindergarten age by Dec. 2, 1976, and one for students with fall birthdays who will enter kindergarten in September 1976.

Dist. 25 has a preschool program for children with learning or development problems of such severity that remediation is necessary to succeed in school. Such children may display one or more of the following characteristics: generally slow development; severe articulation problems; considerable delay in language development; social or behavioral problems; poor or awkward hand and finger control; clumsy or awkward hand and motor movements; considerable hyperactivity.

Classes in the preschool program are arranged according to age and problem, with emphasis on remediation. Classes are limited to 10 children and each class has two teachers qualified in early childhood education. One teacher is a specialist in language and speech and the other in learning disabilities. Weekly classes for parents, and other activities, are held.

TALMAN TALKS ABOUT

How to Get More for Your Money

Even though times have changed a lot in the 54 years since Talman first opened its doors for business, our philosophy of thrift and regular savings is still the key to being able to fill your shopping bag and get more for your money.

Over the years we have helped thousands of people to better afford the necessities and luxuries of life by encouraging them to put aside a certain portion of their paychecks regularly into a Talman savings account. In that way they built up a reserve of cash. And when the time came for a necessary purchase, or sale prices made other purchases attractive, they had the economic freedom to avoid costly interest or carrying charges on what they bought.

Readily available funds in a Talman savings account can make it possible for you, too, to buy what you want or what you need when the price is right. And as you put something aside each week at Talman, you build up buying power and you actually begin to get more for your money right away.

Funds in Talman savings accounts earn from date of deposit, and interest is compounded daily at the highest rates allowed by law.

Plan now to get more for your money. A Talman savings counselor at any one of our seven conveniently located offices can show you how.

8 candidates vie for 3 seats in Dist. 21

There are eight candidates running for three 3-year terms on the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Board of Education in the April 19 election.

The candidates: Incumbents Barbara Farr, Steven Greenberg, Kenneth Rodeck. Newcomers Elaine Bond, Barbara Floyd, James Gallagher, Fred Harms and Linda Sprechman.

Endorsements: Dist. 21 General Caucus. — Farr, Bond and Harms.

The issues: Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 has projected a $1 million deficit in the 1976-77 school year and continuing financial problems in future years.

The board has taken preliminary steps to bring expenditures in line with revenues and avoid a deficit. Cutsback recently approved include eliminating 50 teaching positions, reducing $280,000 in materials and supplies and $350,000 in administrative costs.

Although the basic education program is not affected by the cuts, reduction in administrative costs will affect the district's in-service training, bilingual, and gifted programs.

The board also is investigating holding a referendum for a tax rate increase.

The Dist. 21 teachers' union has protested the staff cuts and a number of parents have attended meetings as well.

New to the district this year are the Parent Advisory Committees, which have been set up in most district schools. The committees are designed to give parents a voice in the operation of their schools.

Sprechman wants a voice

I'm tired of people complaining about issues and not doing anything about it. Basically that's why I'm running for the board. I want to be heard," said Linda B. Sprechman.

It elected "It's going to be me against the world, me against the other board members and Dr. (Supt. Kenneth) Gill," said Mrs. Sprechman, who accused the board of being "yes men to the superintendent when they should become yes men to the community."

The school board forgets why they are there, and who put them where they are. They are an agent of the state representing the people. They're there for the kids," she said.

A former teacher, Mrs. Sprechman, 37, of 318 W. Hackberry Dr., Arlington Heights, would like to see one teacher selected from every school as a representative to the board. She also would like to see parents more informed of what is happening in the district. The board newsletter, "The Grapevine," should include minutes of board meetings and should be a "giant invitation for parents to come out to the board."

On other issues:

• Finances: "A balanced education is a lot more important than a balanced checkbook. As a last resort, I would favor a referendum. I would rather have a raise in taxes than cutbacks in teachers."

• Staff cutbacks: "I disagree with the cutbacks the board has made. I don't think they've proved it's necessary."

"My priorities would be to cut the administration more — I've never seen a district with so many assistants to the assistants, take a look at pay scales other than teachers' pay scales and make cutbacks in materials. I don't think the board is digging deep enough."

• Class size: "The superintendent made an irresponsible statement that class size has no relation to the quality of education. Speaking from experience as a teacher, the maximum class size should be 25."

• School closings: Mrs. Sprechman said it's hard to say hypothetically if she would close a school, however she would be open to it if the situation were presented.

Harms stumps for 'positive action'

Fred D. Harms says he is not a person who sits on the sidelines and criticizes things without knowing the facts. He wants to take positive action about education in Dist. 21, which is why he says he is running for his first term on the school board.

Harms said the school board must have open discussion with community groups and solicit their suggestions on certain matters, such as handling budget deficits. He also said teachers should have an active voice in decisions affecting the district.

Harms, 29, of 207 E. Hackberry Dr., Arlington Heights, is an executive search recruiter.

THE SCHOOLS SHOULD emphasize basic skills — reading, writing and mathematics — but also teach children about interpersonal relationships, Harms said.

"Somebody who is only equipped with basic skills will find life difficult and boring. He must also learn how to get along with people for a fulfilled life," said Harms.

Harms said the district must take a safe but progressive approach to open classrooms and learning centers.

"I'm in favor of exploring the benefits of open classrooms and the most modern progressive teaching techniques on the one hand, but we also must see that kids achieve the basic objectives of reading, writing and getting along with people," he said.

• Finances: Harms said Dist. 21 will eventually have to achieve a balanced budget, but he hopes for the best possible education within the district's financial means. He suggests holding a tax referendum to raise local taxes or increasing borrowing as solutions to a budget crisis.

• Staff cutbacks, class size: Dist. 21 would have lost 11 teachers because of declining enrollments, without budget problems, Harms said. He said an increase in class size from 25 to 27 pupils per class, due to teacher cutbacks, will make only a slight difference.

• Closing schools: Harms said every other alternative should be explored before closing schools, to offset declining enrollments and budget deficits in the district.

• Teachers unions: "The teachers should have a voice that is heard, and if the union provides that, it has its place," Harms said.

Floyd backs 'need for good basics'

A school district "can't consider cutbacks in curriculum — that's the primary concern to kids," said Barbara Parker Floyd, who is running for the Dist. 21 board "because I feel I'm capable of it."

Mrs. Floyd said "good basics are needed — reading, arithmetic, writing. A child has to have those abilities before they can go into anything else."

The candidate would also like to have each child in the district "pledge to the flag every morning, and read a verse from the Bible. A little bit of godliness thrown in wouldn't hurt."

Mrs. Floyd, 37, of 923 Green Ridge Rd., Buffalo Grove, is a former substitute teacher and secretary.

One improvement Mrs. Floyd would like to see in the district is a better lunch program. "I'm a critic of these flash-frozen luncheons they serve. To me that isn't an appropriate lunch for a kid."

Mrs. Floyd, who has been a substitute teacher at the elementary and high school levels, said she has always been active in the communities where she has lived. As a resident of New Jersey, she was president of a PTA unit and worked with the local school board. "I've always had a fondness for children."

The Parent Advisory Councils being established in the district "could be a real beginning" in improving communications between the board and parents. "I suspect the relations between the board and community are not very open. If I'm elected I would let the citizens know that I'm home and available, willing to listen and help."

On other issues:

• Finances: "I think the board should work within the money they do get from the state. I think they can work with a deficit, though, if necessary."

• Staff cuts: "I prefer to see jobs cut in areas not directly involved with kids. I would cut coordinators and have principals coordinate certain areas of the curriculum. I don't think we should cut teachers unless absolutely necessary. I'm also very much against replacing licensed nurses with aides."

• Class size: "A teacher simply can't work with a class that's too large. Primary classes should be close to 20; intermediate grades should be about 23 to 26. You simply can't put 30 to 35 students in a class."

• School closings: "I would rather see a school building close than staff positions cut. A building is only as good as its usage. It can't stand there half used."

• Discipline: "Discipline in the classroom is essential to good learning," said James W. Gallagher, who is running for the Dist. 21 board because he is concerned about the present and future state of the schools.

Gallagher said "Discipline today is not what it was 10 years ago. Kids that disrupt the class shouldn't be there."

The school nurse should promote better eating and sleeping habits to help improve discipline in the classroom, Gallagher said.

Gallagher, 25, of 1008 Woodland Dr., Wheeling, is a senior systems programmer.

GALLAGHER SAID HE believes in a structured school curriculum and he disagrees with the open classroom concept, because children "get an unstructured view of life."

"I take exception with the modern philosophy that a child can't be failed," he said. Basic reading, writing and arithmetic skills should be taught in the lower grades so students can do well in other subject areas in the upper grades, Gallagher said.

Gallagher said the school board needs people from three sectors: The business community, teachers, and people who are up-to-date in their education. As a 25-year-old senior systems programmer who has taught several business seminars, Gallagher said he fulfills those roles.

The candidate said he did not appear before the Dist. 21 General

Caucus for endorsement "because the school board should be independent."

Gallagher said the caucus has charged that he is running for school board as a springboard to other political jobs.

ALTHOUGH HE IS a Republican precinct captain, Gallagher said he is not backed by a political party.

On other issues:

• Finances: "We cannot afford to budget until the state appropriation bill is passed," Gallagher said. He is against borrowing money and said the district has to live with this budget.

• Staff cutbacks: "My first priority would be to rehire teachers if the money was to come in. I don't think I want to cut out any program that directly affects the children. I would prefer to cut three assistant principals to cutting the sports or music programs."

Barbara Floyd

Emphasis needed on basics: Bond

Elaine Bond

Elaine A. Bond believes she has the three ingredients necessary in a good school board member: she is a concerned parent, a high school teacher with an understanding of education, and an active member of local organizations with a knowledge of community problems.

"My main concern is whether the elementary school districts are doing the job they should for our kids to continue to high school. We need a great deal more emphasis on the basics. With the budget problems I hope we don't lose sight of that need," Mrs. Bond said.

Mrs. Bond, 40, of 810 W. Tanglewood Dr., Arlington Heights, is a business education teacher in High School Dist. 214.

Mrs. Bond said she wants to continue the good communications between the board and community and would like to see Parent Advisory Committees established in each of the district schools. "It's very important parents exercise their primary right and have some say in their child's education."

On other issues:

• Finances: "I see us as being financially sound compared to neighboring districts. I would prefer to borrow rather than cut teachers."

• Staff cuts: "I prefer to see jobs cut in areas not directly involved with kids. I would cut coordinators and have principals coordinate certain areas of the curriculum. I don't think we should cut teachers unless absolutely necessary. I'm also very much against replacing licensed nurses with aides."

Raise level of education: Rodeck

Kenneth Rodeck is running for a second term on the Dist. 21 board because "I really like it. I think I'm doing a good job and I think I will continue to do a good job."

Looking back on his three years, the current board president said he has asked a lot of questions and gotten a lot of answers. "I stirred an interest with the administration and other board members."

Rodeck, 36, of 1117 Sarasota, Wheeling, is a civil engineer.

One of his goals is to "get the general education level based on testing as high as we possibly can. You have to measure goals in terms of results."

Rodeck defends the board against charges that it is a rubber stamp for the administration. "It may appear that we rubber stamp a lot of administrative recommendations. But we have a very good administration of a caliber far above any other district in the area. When they come up with a recommendation it is generally very well thought out. It is generally very good and if it is we approve it."

Rodeck also believes the board has been open with the community. "I like a very informal atmosphere on the board. People who come to board meetings don't have to wait three hours to speak. I think that's good and I want it to continue."

On other issues:

• Finance: "I would feel safer to be in a balanced situation than a deficit. There is no one particular answer."

• Staff cutbacks: "I feel terrible about it but I don't think it will materially hurt the district. The teacher cutbacks are not signed, sealed and delivered at this point. Budget cuts are very tough. The first thing to look at is staff, not programs. You have to think in terms of 1½ people doing the job of two."

• Class size: "The increase won't hurt the operation of the district. There is no magic number. You can have 1-to-1 or 1-to-40 or anywhere in between."

• School closings: "It's a sheer numbers situation. The district can operate for a number of years without closing schools by shifting boundaries. We really haven't overbuilt. I don't think closing schools will be necessary in this district."

Farr has wide background

Barbara Farr has viewed education from the perspective of a student, parent, teacher and school board member, all in the past year.

Mrs. Farr, who is running for her first full term on the Dist. 21 Board, recently received her Ph.D. in British history from the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle, where she also served as a history instructor.

Mrs. Farr, 49, of 60 E. Jeffrey Ave., Wheeling, was appointed to the Dist. 21 board in July to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Edwin Smith. She is a historian and college instructor.

ALTHOUGH MRS. FARR said "it takes at least six months for a board member to find out what's going on," she is especially proud of two motions she has authored since her appointment to the board.

The establishment of Parent Advisory Councils in Dist. 21 schools and the creation of an after-school day care center at Stevenson School are two board actions which Mrs. Farr said she actively supported.

Barbara Farr

Mrs. Farr said her experience teaching on the university level has shown her how students' communications skills have declined.

The schools should emphasize basic communications skills — conveying ideas in writing and speech and analyzing information, Mrs. Farr said.

Mrs. Farr said the Parent Advisory Councils will help improve communications between the school board and local citizens.

"THE PARENT coordinating council will be an answer to that problem, since people can get together and verbalize their complaints at these meetings," Mrs. Farr said.

• Finances: Mrs. Farr said she agrees with the budget cutbacks the board has made. Taxes are already high in Dist. 21 and the public does not want a tax referendum as a means of raising additional revenue for the district, she said. Mrs. Farr said she would not be willing to work with a deficit budget now, but possibly in the future. She said she does not want the district to go into debt and she will be "fiscally conservative."

• Staff cutbacks: Mrs. Farr says she is hesitant about cutting teachers, but the board has also made cuts in the administrative staff.

• Class size: Mrs. Farr said teachers who are concerned about having two or three more students in a class (because of increased pupil-teacher ratios) "will have to put in a little more time and effort." Large classes also will have teacher aides, she said.

Gallagher urges basics, discipline in classrooms

"Discipline in the classroom is essential to good learning," said James W. Gallagher, who is running for the Dist. 21 board because he is concerned about the present and future state of the schools.

Gallagher said "Discipline today is not what it was 10 years ago. Kids that disrupt the class shouldn't be there."

The school nurse should promote better eating and sleeping habits to help improve discipline in the classroom, Gallagher said.

Gallagher, 25, of 1008 Woodland Dr., Wheeling, is a senior systems programmer.

GALLAGHER SAID HE believes in a structured school curriculum and he disagrees with the open classroom concept, because children "get an unstructured view of life."

"I take exception with the modern philosophy that a child can't be failed," he said. Basic reading, writing and arithmetic skills should be taught in the lower grades so students can do well in other subject areas in the upper grades, Gallagher said.

Gallagher said the school board needs people from three sectors: The business community, teachers, and people who are up-to-date in their education. As a 25-year-old senior systems programmer who has taught several business seminars, Gallagher said he fulfills those roles.

The candidate said he did not appear before the Dist. 21 General

James Gallagher

Caucus for endorsement "because the school board should be independent."

Gallagher said the caucus has charged that he is running for school board as a springboard to other political jobs.

ALTHOUGH HE IS a Republican precinct captain, Gallagher said he is not backed by a political party.

On other issues:

• Finances: "We cannot afford to budget until the state appropriation bill is passed," Gallagher said. He is against borrowing money and said the district has to live with this budget.

• Staff cutbacks: "My first priority would be to rehire teachers if the money was to come in. I don't think I want to cut out any program that directly affects the children. I would prefer to cut three assistant principals to cutting the sports or music programs."

lead Greenberg to think "maybe someone's been listening to the things I've been talking about."

Greenberg failed to receive caucus endorsement this year because of what the caucus called his absentee record. Greenberg admits he was absent during his first year on the board because of business demands, but says his position has changed.

"I was absent five times in the last year and was late on occasion. This is a continuing problem, but not as large a problem as in the past," Greenberg said.

The candidate said 60 per cent of the time he spends on school district business is outside of board meetings. "I spend time with the administration getting background, with principals, at Parent Advisory Committee meetings. That is all time spent on district business."

Greenberg also defends the board against charges that it is a rubber stamp for the administration. "We don't always agree, but we work out our problems together. It's creative cooperation," he said.

ON OTHER issues:

• Finances: "If a district is growing rapidly, if they know the financial picture will increase dramatically I can see deficit spending. These factors today are unknown and we must work within a balanced budget," Greenberg said a referendum for a tax rate increase would only bring in $600,000 and would not cover projected deficits. "I would anticipate a polling on the citizenry before we'd try for a referendum," he said.

• Staff cutbacks: "I (originally) voted against the cutbacks because I wanted a contingency plan to rehire teachers that are being released. (The contingency was later approved by the board.) We have no alternative to cutting staff as revenue declines."

Labor strife, oil law worry investors

Stocks fall off despite rally try

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices fell in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange Thursday when a late rally attempt failed to overcome investor concerns about labor strife and controversial oil legislation.

Blue-chip investors sprang into action for a while during the afternoon, apparently on news that warring factions in Lebanon agreed to a 10-day ceasefire on the condition a new president would be elected in that time.

A small 0.2 per cent increase in wholesale prices, which the White House said indicated "stability," also sparked some buying. But there was general disappointment over the Commerce Dept. report that February building outlays fell 1.3 per cent because of a large drop in public construction.

AS A RESULT, the Dow Jones industrial average, which fluctuated throughout the day, lost 5.35 points to 994.10. A 7.32-point winner Wednesday, it was up about a point at the outset, off more than seven in the early afternoon and off only two later.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.55 to 102.24, the NYSE common stock index slipped 0.26 to 54.54 and the average price of an NYSE common share decreased 16 cents.

Investor uncertainty showed in the market's breadth figures. Declines topped advances, 825 to 585, among the 1,832 issues crossing the tape. But there were 422 unchanged issues.

Volume totaled only 17,910,000 shares, compared with 17,520,000 traded Wednesday. The slackening in the trading pace during the past month demonstrated the market's indecisiveness.

Investors were encouraged by the Labor Department's report wholesale prices rose only 0.2 per cent in March.

Prices closed lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share declined by four cents. Volume totaled 2,690,000 shares, compared with 2,880,000 traded Wednesday.

Bell amends DA plan, asks ICC for approval

Illinois Bell Telephone Co. Thursday asked the Illinois Commerce Commission to allow an amended directory assistance customer billing plan starting in mid-1977.

The Bell plan includes some of the features ordered by the ICC Feb. 4. Every residential customer would be allowed six calls to directory assistance and a 30-cent directory assistance credit per month.

For each directory assistance call in addition to six per month, a customer would pay 10 cents. Exceptions, for which no charge will be levied, include:

- Coin phone calls, and those at hospitals, hotels and home phones of physically handicapped persons unable to use the directory.
- Numbers which, at the customer's request, are not listed in the directory or with directory assistance.
- Numbers which, at the customer's request, are listed only in directory assistance.

Numbers outside a customer's own area code.

THE FEB. 4 ORDER would have excluded charges for new listings and requests for which the operator finds no listings. The most recent Bell request does not have these exceptions.

Bell said the new proposal was offered because "without this modification the net cost of the charging plan would exceed the cost of directory assistance service with no charging."

The utility also seeks a 30-cent-a-month rate for customers who request a semi-private directory service. It includes numbers not listed in the directory, but available for operators.

Bell will continue to provide directories at no charge to customers.

Thompson gets aid, not vote of UAW official Johnston

Republican gubernatorial candidate James Thompson has picked up the help — but not the vote — of an active supporter of his opponent, Sec. of State Michael Howlett.

Thompson announced at a fund-raising dinner Wednesday he was appointing Robert Johnston, Northwest regional director of the United Auto Workers Union, and two other men to head a task force to study reorganization of state government.

Johnston has been a prominent Howlett supporter since long before the March 16 primary and is an elected delegate to the Democratic National Convention from the 12th Congressional District pledged to former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter.

Thursday, he was explaining his position on the Thompson task force to his fellow Democrats, including fellow Carter delegates from the 12th district.

JOHNSTON SAID he still supports Howlett, that Thompson has never asked for his vote and that he believes the reorganization study will benefit "good government" regardless of who is elected governor.

Thompson said in announcing the task force Wednesday that if Howlett defeats him in the November election he will turn the results of the reorganization study over to him. He also said no member of the task force will play any part in his own gubernatorial campaign.

Lucille "Jackie" Gallagher, one of Johnston's five fellow Carter delegates for the 12th District, expressed surprise at Thompson's announcement Thursday, but after talking with Johnston, said she could understand it.

The government reorganization, she said, "does parallel what Carter stands for" and said she doesn't view Johnston's action as a defection from Democratic ranks.

She also said she does not expect the action to affect the standing of the 12th District Democratic convention delegates with leaders of the Illinois delegation, including Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley.

The way we see it

Facts needed from board

The Stevenson High School Dist. 125 Board of Education owes its community in Lake County a full explanation for the abrupt resignation of Supt. Harold Banser.

Such resignations are touchy matters, and we do not expect the board to air "dirty linen" or damage the personal reputation of Banser.

In this case, however, an explanation is needed. The community and at least some school officials who serve under Banser are upset by the forced resignation of the man who has served as superintendent for 11 of his 17 years with the district.

It has been suggested that one reason for Banser's departure is that district test scores are not high enough, even though they are above the national average. The public deserves that information, so it can make its own judgment on the wisdom of the board's action.

If there are other reasons for forcing Banser's departure, the public deserves to know them, too. The public must judge the decision of its elected officials, for they serve at the pleasure of the voters of Dist. 125.

The board also should begin planning immediately for an open and public method of picking Banser's successor.

Dist. 125's community is badly divided and alienated from the board. A new superintendent's job will be very difficult unless the board moves quickly to prevent an even deeper split.

It is not enough to say, as one board member did Monday night, that the board "understands the feelings" of those who are upset by Banser's departure. The board owes the public more than "understanding"; it owes an explanation.

We need to know all about nuclear safety

Nuclear power has become an often unnoticed fact of life to most Illinois residents. But just as we have come to depend on it, we as surely deserve to know the risks involved in its use.

The Illinois Safe Power Bill, slated for introduction in the General Assembly by State Rep. Richard Mugalian, D-Palatine, could close the gap in the public's nuclear power know-how.

The bill would create an 11-member committee to evaluate the safety, health and environmental aspects of nuclear energy.

A public report of the committee's findings would be required by January 1979; to provide time for study, it would establish a five-year moratorium on nuclear power plant development in Illinois.

As Mugalian points out, Illinois residents have a special interest in nuclear power because we have more nuclear plants than any other state. Our air and water could be contaminated should an accident occur in the production, transportation and storage of nuclear fuel. It is time for a full study of any risks involved in nuclear power.

Resign, eh? I want an accounting of everyone's actions!

Court parking annoys him

Mount Prospect had no serious parking problems up to the end of the 1950s. There was curb parking along Rte. 83, angle parking on Northwest Highway, and parallel parking on Rte. 83 between Rte. 14 and Busse Avenue. There was never a lack of parking spaces between 83 west to Central Road on Prospect Avenue. Rand Road was still a delight to weekenders making an exodus to the country.

Today it is bumper-to-bumper parking all over the village. Decreased speed limits and a shortage of commuter and shopper parking are evidenced. An increase in "no parking" signs, two-hour parking limits, one-way streets, left-hand-turn bays and widening of intersections are a few of the many changes. Alas, it is not enough. Our interplanetary megapolis is enmeshed with wall-to-wall four-wheeled pieces of steel, chrome, plastic and glass.

Now take a close look at the parking situation with respect to village government properties, employees, the fire and police building and the new village hall. How many parking stalls are available between the two buildings? How many policemen, firemen and employees on each shift must come by car? How many official visitors come everyday on business? To this over-burdened sarcophagus of macadam and asphalt we add the coup de grace: court!

Court, I would like to, have these questions answered. How many days a week do we have court? How many hours per day? How many cases per day average? How many cases are local traffic violations? How many cases are for misdemeanors or felonies involving local citizens? How many are civil cases involving local residents? How many misdemeanors and felonies perpetrated by non-residents? How many state traffic violations are tried?

Multiply the above facts by one to two persons per car, and you have an awful lot of cars. Don't forget an attorney for the defendant and plaintiff, witnesses, judge, bailiff, clerks, arresting officers, a bondsman or two and the court reporter. Where do the people park?

Now where do you think this mass ingress of motorized mayhem goes? They park on the side streets in the residential areas, and this is not fair to the residents. They themselves cannot park out front or have visitors.

Fence post letters to the editor

Letters must be signed, and no letters will be published anonymously. Letters in excess of 300 words are subject to condensation. Direct your mail to The Herald Fence Post, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

They have just as much right to the streets as do the residents who do not live close to the court. They also park in the parking lot behind my place of business and prevent my customers from coming in to do business with me.

A further hardship is the nature of my business. My clients are either elderly or those recently discharged from hospitals. Many enter in wheelchairs or are on crutches. They simply cannot walk two blocks to get to my shop.

Where else do these cars park? I'll tell you, in the two-hour-only parking areas on the business streets. The state police park in the private parking lot behind my store and in the two-hour parking zones on the side streets. The Mount Prospect State Bank parking lot is getting its fair share of this too. It has created parking facilities throughout the years to accommodate customers. These are costly facilities and weren't intended as overflow parking areas for court use.

This is the year of our nation's Bicentennial, and it is going to be celebrated in many ways. I am celebrating by applying the beliefs that created the Declaration of Independence; the use of Article I, the Bill of Rights. The last lines of which read "or the right of the people to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

'Real issue: individual learning'

Regarding the current debate over "alternative education" in Dist. 59, the executive board of the School Community Council feel that many issues have been raised which are irrelevant to the real needs of our children. We think that the debate is founded on a false premise, namely that academically oriented programs are not already available to every child in the district who could benefit from them.

It is our opinion that the real issue is the inability of at least some of our schools to recognize and cater for individual learning differences in children's ability to absorb and retain knowledge. For instance, a child who possesses an adequate I.Q. and a stable home environment does not necessarily have good self-discipline. It is the feeling of many parents that such children need just as much direction from their teachers as culturally deprived children and that many do not get this extra help.

The executive board of the council feel that the term "alternative education" is misleading and should be replaced by a phrase such as "optimum education." We urge the board of education to turn their attention to the problem of ensuring that each and every child in Dist. 59 receives optimum instruction according to his or her particular needs. Until this is done there will always be frustration on the part of the parents of the so-called "average child."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 2 — Army private David How recorded that an enlisted man from a Capt. Farrington's company was given 30 lashes for stealing a cheese. American troops occupied the fort on Bunker Hill. In New York, troops were becoming openly disgruntled over their not being paid.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter.

The morning star is Venus.

The evening stars are Mercury, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

French novelist Emile Zola was born April 2, 1840.

On this day in history:

In 1792, Congress passed legislation authorizing the mint to coin money, all to be inscribed with the Latin words "E Pluribus Unum" — a motto meaning "Out of Many, One."

In 1917, President Woodrow Wilson asked Congress for a declaration of war against Germany.

In 1932, Charles Lindbergh left $50,000 in bills in a New York City cemetery in hopes of regaining his kidnapped son. Bruno Hauptmann subsequently was found guilty of kidnapping and murdering the Lindbergh child. He was executed.

In 1974, French President Georges Pompidou died at the age of 62.

'He's promoted the IEA'

Why is Roy Makela, a nine-year school board member of Maine Township High School Dist. 207, running for a fourth term? Mr. Makela had said he would not run again. What or who caused him to change his mind at the last minute? What interest does Mr. Makela represent?

Mr. Makela has done more than any one person to promote the organization of the Illinois Education Association in Maine Township. His hostility to teachers, the negotiating process, contracts and his parroting the anti-IEA line of the Illinois Association of School Boards has resulted in ever-increasing IEA membership in Maine Township. Three more years and Mr. Makela may well give us a first in Maine Township, a high school teachers' strike.

The School Board Nominating Caucus did not endorse Mr. Makela. No man should be endorsed for a school board position when he does not know what a contract is. In defense of his opposition to a contract for teachers, he declared that he had no need for contracts in his business.

Nine years are enough. We do not need or want a teacher strike in Maine Township. The citizens of Maine Township should do themselves a favor and retire Mr. Makela on election day, April 10.

TV violence scored

Re: Mary Ann Ignarski's letter of March 24 to the Fence Post.

She said it well, and I'm sure there are many of us out here who want to be heard. Because of the very poor selection of programs, we are doing a lot more reading in this household. We feel very strongly that the present emphasis of giving viewers crime/violence shows to watch for our "pleasure" will surely do much damage to the values of people in all age brackets. What sad times we live in; so little value is placed on a life, except our own life.

Thanks, Mary Ann

Folksingers trek on out to the country

by JOE SWICKARD

What are three high school teachers from Elgin doing in Cary? Running Harry Hope's, a successful night spot with top flight entertainment, that's what.

Ray Goettsch and Jim and Sandy Buckheit have taken the clubhouse of a condominium development in rural Cary and turned it into "the place in the country" for the best in contemporary folk music, jazz and blues.

Since the trio of young teachers opened the club around Thanksgiving 1974, they have attracted such performers as Michal Urbaniak, Megan McDonough, Muddy Waters, John Klemmer, Steve Goodman, Corky Siegel and Jim Schwall. The word went from Steve Goodman to Bob Gibson to Jim Post that Harry Hope's is "a good room to play in," explained Goettsch.

The show room is the upstairs of the ski chalet-like building on Cary Road between Routes 14 and 31. About 200 people are seated comfortably around the stage for an intimate seating between artist and audience.

The performers and the hospitality of the flannel and jeans set have spawned a mailing list of 3,000 names collected from Elgin into Indiana, Rolling Meadows, Palatine and Arlington Heights provide many of the regulars for the club that the owners admit was "totally spontaneous."

THE THREE OF them were sitting around a club one night and asked why couldn't they do something themselves. Drawing upon their experience in summer theater, they knew the club house was empty and a little theater group had made an unsuccessful go of it there.

A bar and game room downstairs and music up provided "low key atmosphere" that made it go, said Sandy Buckheit. She said business is improving each month and "hopefully," it can reach the point where the club would become a full-time job instead of nights and weekends for the teachers.

If the audience is loyal, so are performers.

"They come and they really like it," she said. "It's nice and they don't have to fight a nolsy saloon-type atmosphere to be heard."

Although drinks are served during the shows, the orders are taken and delivered quietly by waitresses including Mrs. Buckheit. Since they do serve liquor, the lifeblood of most clubs, they require stringent identification checks when acts with the younger crowds appear.

Because they tend to steer away from hard rock groups, the crowd control troubles that have been the bane of many other clubs and concert areas have not surfaced at Harry Hope's. But the minors are not excluded entirely. Special matinees, without liquor, give the kids a taste of the music without the other offerings.

HARRY HOPE'S HAS built a loyal following as exemplified by a recent week night performance of Martin Mull and Corky Siegel. One would expect, and rightly so, the first performance to be sold out, but 10 p.m. arrived and the folks were still lining up to get in for the second show — on a Wednesday night no less.

Mrs. Buckheit said there are still growing pains associated with the club but, "We want to keep the same atmosphere. It works and it's not contrived. It's all grown out of the business and the people."

She said: "It really works."

And it does.

chronicle recent American history

The American poster, which came into its own in the early 1960s, bridged the gap between popular and fine arts and provided a social and artistic chronicle of recent United States history.

A major poster exhibition, "Images of an Era: the American Poster 1945-1975," opened Thursday for one month at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry.

The traveling display, made possible by a grant from Mobil Oil Corp., contains more than 200 American posters illustrating the events and concerns of the nation from 1945 to present day.

The exhibition, in documenting these turbulent years, groups the works around several points of interest including cities, environment, ethnic minorities, film/theater/rock concerts, political campaigns, product and service advertising, public health and student posters.

BECAUSE THE '60s began an exceptionally creative period of American poster design, the majority of the posters are of recent vintage. Only 30 date from 1945 to 1960 when American posters were still strongly influenced by those of Europe.

The posters on display have been gathered from designers, advertising agencies, educational institutions, cultural centers, museums, campaign committees and protest groups.

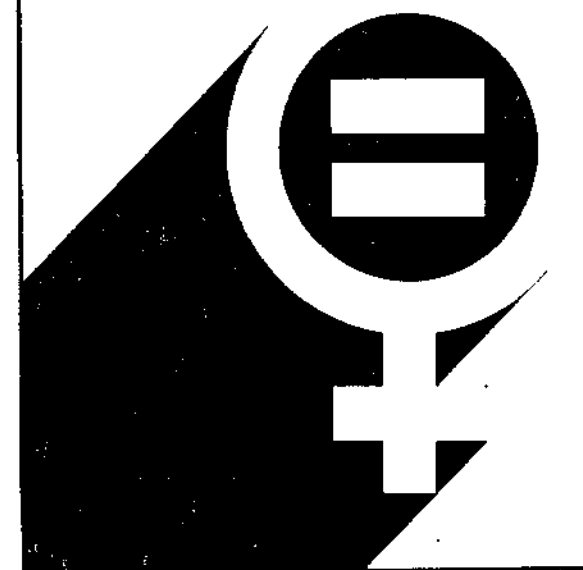

Among the more well-known artists and designers included in the show are Saul Bass, Ivan Chermayeff, Christo, Jasper Johns, Leo Lionni, Roy Lichtenstein, Herbert Matter, Peter Max, Georgia O'Keeffe, Ben Shahn, Frank Stella and Tomi Ungerer.

Organized by the National Collection of Fine Arts, Smithsonian Institution, the exhibition was put together by Margaret Cogswell, deputy chief of NCFA's Office of Exhibitions Abroad, and John Garrigan, graphic design consultant to the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

In the catalog Ms. Cogswell writes "Building on European influences during the fifties, graphic designers in particular found an authentic American voice during the sixties. They have been producing striking work ever since. However, it is both the sophisticated articulation of gifted and accomplished artists and designers, and the rough, deeply felt, often anonymous expression in posters — those most earthbound of the visual communicators.

"WHETHER CREATED on commission in the calm of a designer's studio or scrawled on the street or in a print room in a last-ditch effort to make oneself heard, posters are authentic images of an era. They are signposts which tell us much about where we have been. Who did them, how and why, furnish clues as to where we are going."

The exhibition includes a 12-minute slide program tracing the development of the American poster from the mid-1800s to the present. In honor of the Bicentennial, Mobil has commissioned an additional 13 original posters, "America: the Third Century," which also will be on display. The artists in this new series include Robert Rauschenberg, Roy Lichtenstein and James Rosenquist.

Rock stars' solo albums: some are good, some bad

Sooner or later, it seems, every rock and roller gets the itch to do a solo album — no matter how successful his "home" band is. Very often the results are abject failures, although there have been notable successes, such as Rod Stewart.

Very often, too, especially with the "bigger" names, the solo album becomes an all-star session. Among a batch of new solo albums, two of these "all-stars" show the extremes — the very good and the very bad — of solo album making. Bill Wyman, the Rolling Stones' bassist, fails with his second solo effort, "Stone Alone" (Rolling Stones), while former Montrose lead singer Sammy Hagar turns in an excellent rock album with "Nine on a Ten Scale" (Capitol).

Wyman's problem is that he lacks a good singing voice and, as long as he insists on handling the lead chores by himself, the musical help of Dallas Taylor, Danny Kortchmar, the Tower of Power horns, Ruth and Bonnie Pointer, Van Morrison, Joe Walsh, Al Kooper, Dr. John, Ronnie Wood and others will go for naught. His best two singing tries are aping Louis Armstrong on "No More Foolin'" and using the ensemble mostly for singing the oldie, "If You Wanna Be Happy."

THE ALBUM ALSO is hurt by weak song writing. Wyman wrote nine of the 12 and none is more than ordinary. Thus, you have to force yourself to listen to the album so you can catch the few good musical moments, partially supplied by Walsh and Morrison.

Hagar, on the other hand, is a good rock singer and the louder the better. He, too, writes most of his album's songs, but there are fine new ones contributed by Van Morrison ("Flamingos Fly") and Robert Welch ("Chuna"). Hagar also makes an eight-minute mid-tempo rocker out of Donovan's 10-year-old song, "Young Girl Blues."

Of the Hagar-penned material (mostly cowritten with producer John Carter), the semi-autobiographical "Keep On Rockin'" and "Silver Lights," which alternates heavy metal with a melodic chorus, stand out.

THE ALL-STAR contributors include Dallas Smith, Aynsley Dunbar, Jerry Shuley of Humble Pie, Jim Hopper formerly of Steely Dan, Jerry Corbetta the Tower of Power horns and Venetta Fields. Hagar plays a strong guitar, something he was unable to do with Montrose.

Other recent solo efforts: • "I've Got Time" by Allan Clarke (Asylum). This second American solo release by the Hollies' lead singer is richly textured — too much so on a few of the songs — and leaves the over-all impression of a very romantic album. Clarke wrote none of the songs this time. Instead picking songs by Bruce Springsteen, Janis Ian, Melissa Manchester-Carole Bayer Sager, Rod Taylor and Dan Fogelberg, among others.

The ballads work best, with "The Long Way," "Sunrise" and "If You

by Tom Von Malder

Think You Know How To Love Me" particularly beautiful. The album closes with an unusual (for a rock album) orchestral medley of the songs.

• "Take No Prisoners" by David Byron (Mercury). This sounds like a lost Uriah Heep album, with the group's lead singer aided by guitarist Mick Box on all songs and drummer Lee Kerslake on six. John Wetton and Ken Hensley also make appearances.

With co-Heepsters helping him write six of the 10 songs, it is no wonder that "Man Full of Yesterdays" and "Silver White Man" sound like the band. The surprise is that "Midnight Flyer," which has the same sound and is the best thing on the album despite an annoyingly fake studio wind noise, was not written by any of the Heepsters.

Byron's vocals are mixed, with "Love Song" very bad and the bluesy "Sweet Rock N' Roll" and "Stop (Think What You're Doing)" good.

• "The Dream Weaver" by Gary Wright (Warner Bros.). The founder of the now defunct and generally overlooked Spooky Tooth is finally becoming a star on the strength of the dreamy title song. The album, which generally is better than the single, is all keyboard music with the exception of drums throughout and a guitar on one song. "Much Higher" is a good rocker and "Made To Love You" is a fine ballad.

Soundings

PAUL McCARTNEY AND WINGS have just released "Wings At the Speed of Sound," their fifth album. The new ROLLING STONES album, "Black and Blue," is due any day, as are "I" by PATRICK MORAZ of Yes, "Ramshackled" by ALAN WHITE of Yes, a second live J. GEILS BAND called "Blow Your Face Out" and HERBIE MANN'S "Surprises."

In the area: ROY CLARK, Tuesday through April 11 at Mill Run; RAVI SHANKAR, Saturday at the Auditorium; LYNARD SKYNYRD, MON. TROSE AND OUTLAWS, tonight at the International Amphitheatre; MARTIN MULL, Saturday and Sunday at Rat-so's; and pianist VLADIMIR ASHKENAZY, Sunday at Orchestra Hall.

Top composer of musicals raises curtain on his life

"MUSICAL STAGES"
BY RICHARD RODGERS
Random House $12.50

Richard Rodgers, whose new Broadway musical "Rex" about Henry VIII is scheduled to open in April, raises the curtain for a view behind "Musical Stages."

Composer of more than a thousand songs, including those in "Oklahoma," "South Pacific," and "The King and I," Richard Rodgers struggled through seven years and 11 amateur musicals with Larry Hart to break onto the professional stage.

"We were treated to the demoralizing sound of doors being slammed in our faces." The butter and egg men who bankrolled stage ventures didn't listen until 1925 at a benefit performance in the prestigious Garrick Theatre in New York.

A college friend invited Rodgers to write the score for "Garrick Gaieties." Earlier that very day, Rodgers had dejectedly considered going into the baby underwear business.

RICHARD RODGERS recalls the opening performance. "Though I couldn't see the people sitting in the dark behind me, I could actually feel the warmth and enthusiasm on the back of my neck."

From that success, and on through 25 musicals and nine movies, the public came to know Rodgers and Hart as one word, Rodgersandhart.

A two-man composing team is difficult to operate when one is absent, late or hung over. Larry had a habit of vanishing. It became worse as years passed by.

Once Larry was bundled up and put into Doctors Hospital for a drying out treatment. The score of "By Jupiter" was written in a hospital room complete with rented Steinway. Only after the score was completed did the doctor discharge Larry.

Seeing no hope for improvement, long-suffering Rodgers broke with Hart and teamed up with old friend Oscar Hammerstein in 1943 to do the landmark musical "Oklahoma."

Sam Goldwyn asked to meet Rodgers after a performance.

The book stall

"This is such a wonderful show," he bubbled. "I just had to see you and give you some advice. You know what you should do next?"

"What?"

"Shoot yourself!"

FOLLOWING A successful musical with another successful musical has been the pleasant worry of Rodgers for five decades.

"The greatest gratification allowed anyone is to be able to gather a large group of people under one roof and through words and music impel them to feel something deeply and strongly within themselves," he says.

The creation of successful musicals with Oscar Hammerstein differed greatly from Larry Hart.

"I'll write the words and you'll write the music," Oscar said. "If that's all right with you, I prefer it that way. You won't hear from me until I have a finished lyric."

Melodies always came quickly to Rodgers, and he was spared the "endless hours I formerly had to spend as nurse" to Hart.

Keeping the shows alive and fresh is as important as the opening night. Producer Josh Logan feared that Londonites would not accept "South Pacific" in its original successful form. He rearranged the show. Rodgers didn't like it.

AT THE END OF the dress rehearsal, Mary Martin, whose profanity comes out as "Oh, Plop" and "He's a son of a bear," called Rodgers and Josh to her dressing room.

She was crying hysterically. She wouldn't open in "South Pacific" unless it was put back in its original form.

Between sobs and cries, Josh gave

Bob Bahr, Exalted Ruler of the Arlington Heights Elks asks you to SAY "YES" TO THE CALL

Within a few days your phone may ring and a pleasant voice you hear will be a member of the Arlington Heights Elks or one of their high school or college helpers. They will be asking you to help sponsor some of the less fortunate children in the area to their annual presentation of the International All Star Circus.

SAY "YES"

We take great pride in bringing to our area the International All Star Circus — one of the greatest fun filled 90 minutes ever for your family pleasure. Additionally, we are looking forward to providing an opportunity for the less fortunate children in the area to participate — at no expense to themselves or their schools — in the traditionally wholesome American experience of enjoying a circus performance. Your help to defray the cost of these admissions would be greatly appreciated by our organization — and more important — by hundreds of children who would not ordinarily have this opportunity.

SO PLEASE SAY "YES"

Just put your name on the Special passes which will be mailed to you and return them with your check. A group of deserving children in our community can attend the circus with your compliments. The big show will be held at the Wheeling High School Gymnasium on Sunday, June 13 at 3 P.M.

WE THANK YOU FOR YOUR SUPPORT!

In "Musical Stages" readers will meet equally colorful Florenz Ziegfeld, Irving Berlin, Cole Porter, Noel Coward and Billy Rose, whose lives and careers brighten what can be described as the Age of Rodgers.

Although there are no records or tapes accompanying this autobiography, Rodgers provides in "Musical Stages" the heartwarming sound of music.

Seafood spot gets OK for 'family night out'

The words "informal" and "family priced" are appreciated by Northwest suburbanites who can seldom afford to eat out.

Add to them "speedy service" and you have the newest Chicagoland Red Lobster Restaurant, located in Schaumburg.

Visiting such a seafood spot on a Friday night is the best test, and this nationally known restaurant chain did produce under pressure.

The waiting room was filled, mostly with families, at 6 p.m. Each group had a number because the restaurant takes no reservations. The person in charge reassured newcomers that despite the crowd there would be only a 15-minute wait. It took even less than that to be seated.

Featuring: The Red Lobster

BESIDES THE relatively short delay, we were equally surprised with the speedy service. Our entrees arrived approximately 20 minutes after our orders were taken.

Our party tried three of the five appetizers and soups offered. The crab meat cocktail, $1.49, received the most approving remarks, thanks to the zesty sauce.

The seafood gumbo, 65 cents, was "thick and full bodied" as the menu promised, but tasted like canned soup rather than homemade. The clam chowder, 55 cents, New England style, was adequate.

Two in our group ordered the rock lobster tail, $7.49, one the shrimp Lotiche, $2.79, and another the broiled Fisherman's Plate, $5.49. The lobster and plate dinners include choice of cole slaw or salad and potato.

THE ONLY complaint was that one of the lobster tails was undercooked and tough as a result.

The Fisherman's Plate received the biggest raves. It features a lobster tail with ample portions of sea bass, shrimp, scallops, deviled crab and hush puppies. The latter two items were especially delicious. None of the platter assortment tasted "fishy," denoting the fish was either fresh or freshly thawed.

There were many other seafood dinners as well as a "Landlubber" (steak) section and a "Tot's Galley." The latter (for children 10 years and under) offered a choice of fried chicken, shrimp, oysters, deviled crab cakes, flounder or hamburger patty with cole slaw and potato, 99 cents.

THE DECOR is just what you would expect from a medium-priced family restaurant. From its brick-tiled floor to its artificial fisherman's motif on the walls, the Red Lobster ranks a notch below the atmosphere of, say, a Mr. Steak.

But the Red Lobster lives up to its billing in price, service and informality.

Also, the restaurant offers a carry-out service for many of its fried food entrees.

Schaumburg's Red Lobster is located one block south of the Woodfield Shopping Center and one block north of Higgins Road on Mall Drive.

Story of 'President's Men' gripping powerful movie

by DAVID DUGAS
(A review)

How does one condense the Carl Bernstein-Bob Woodward book "All the President's Men," about their part in unraveling Watergate, into a 138-minute movie? With talent, patience and sheer technical brilliance, elements all clearly evident in this dazzling and hypnotically fascinating picture.

Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman combine precisely the right amounts of awe and grit as Washington Post reporters Woodward and Bernstein. And they are supported by an enormous and outstanding cast.

The real stars, however, are director Alan J. Pakula, scriptwriter William Goldman and Redford, in his uncredited role as executive producer and originator of the project.

Together they have taken the inherently complex and static story (with its well-known outcome) and made it a gripping, powerful time bomb of a film.

THERE ARE OMISSIONS, of course. And the action stops short of the Senate hearings, the White House tapes and the revelation of Richard Nixon's role in the cover-up. But that's all summed up at the climax by teleprinter bulletins with the impact of a firing squad.

The picture's intensely realistic look and feel is heightened by television footage, used to great (and now ironic) effect: a swipe at the press by then-Vice President Agnew; Rep. Gerald Ford announcing to his party's convention the nomination of Nixon for a second term; the Nixon inauguration.

Among the cast principals, all flawless, are Jason Robards as the Post's executive editor Ben Bradlee; Martin Balsam and Jack Warden as senior editors; Hal Holbrook as the shadowy, never identified informant Deep Throat; and Jane Alexander as a bookkeeper at Nixon campaign headquarters.

The Warner Brothers release is raged (PG) despite the non-deletion of several expletives.

(United Press International)

ROBERT REDFORD plays Post reporter Bob Woodward and Dustin Hoffman is reporter Carl Bernstein in "All the President's Men." The celebrated movie opens at the Esquire Theatre, Chicago, Friday, April 9.

HORACE VANDERGELDER (Ken Portney) learns the fine points of courtship from DOLLY LEVI (Eileen Bonen) in Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker" to be staged April 8-11 by Harper College Studio Theatre. This is the third production of the season for the college group.

'Matchmaker' in rehearsal

The third production of the season by Harper College Studio Theatre, Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker," will be staged April 8-11 in the Television Studio, F Building, in Palatine.

The comedy farce is set in the 1890s and tells the story of Dolly Levi, the matchmaker, who tries to find a suitable bride for a certain wealthy merchant of Yonkers, N. Y., Horace Vandergelder.

Playing the role of Horace Vandergelder is Ken Portney, Palatine. Eileen Bonen, Mount Prospect, has been cast as Dolly Levi.

Other Harper students appearing in the play are Larry Reinwald and Mary Lynn Snyder, both of Northbrook; Mary Kay Wilson, Hoffman Estates; Larry Nepodahl and Gail Wiebe, both of Elk Grove Village.

Exhibit by area artist at bank

Several works of Schaumburg artist Robert L. Freeman are on display today and Saturday in the lobby of Suburban National Bank of Woodfield. They may be viewed during banking hours on the main floor of the Executive Office Plaza, 600 Woodfir.

The bank recently helped sponsor Freeman's participation in the American Painters in Paris exhibition. He was one of five Illinois artists whose works were selected for the international exhibit, considered the largest show of American painters ever held outside the United States.

Among his paintings on view at the bank is a mural commemorating the 20-year history of Schaumburg, which will eventually be hung in the village hall.

Freeman will be present at the bank Saturday to talk to visitors about his works and painting techniques.

ALSO ROB PRITTS, Barrington; Sheila Breiter, Rolling Meadows; Ron Sylvan and Vince Grace, both of Buffalo Grove; and Rob Tangen, Palatine.

Working back stage for the production is Joan Wood, Mount Prospect, a first-year fashion design student who is designing and creating the costumes.

Barry Taylor, Wheeling, is technical director and Keith Knutilla, also of Wheeling, is stage manager for the production. In charge of set construction is Cindy McCloughan, Elk Grove Village.

Students interested in working on any crews for the play should contact Keith Knutilla at 397-3000, ext. 448.

"The Matchmaker" is under the direction of Harper speech and theater instructor, Mary Jo Willis.

Charlie Dickinson
SPORTS WRITER

"Writing is what I like to do most and right now reporting sporting news is the most enjoyable writing I can do for The Herald. The challenge is in finding new ways to describe the sporting events that happen every day."

Charlie Dickinson covers the sports scene for Elk Grove and Conant High Schools as well as Harper College. He is also the tennis and gymnastics editor. Charlie says that watching tennis has improved his game but he's still limited to skinning the cat in gymnastics.

A graduate of the University of Kentucky, Charlie received his bachelor of arts degree in journalism in 1973. While in college, Charlie won a Sigma Delta Chi feature writing award.

Charlie began his career with The Herald in 1974 as a sports writer, but he has tried his hand at many jobs including gardening and cooking.

Charlie, who lists table hockey, reading and writing among his hobbies, is the U.S. open table hockey defending champion — in the celebrity doubles division.

'Dirtwater Fox' is nice reprieve

There are some movies that come off better than they really are just because you're ready for them.

"The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox," a rollicking, good time comedy-western with wide-eyed winsome Goldie Hawn and witty George Segal in the two leading roles, is just such a movie.

It's decidedly hokum, hard to swallow, but you have to laugh in spite of yourself because it's such a refreshing change of pace from all the grim Academy Award-winning films that have been monopolizing the attention of late.

GOING FROM "Taxi Driver" to "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox" is like following up a heavy meal with chocolate mousse. It's good to taste something light and fluffy. And with Goldie Hawn in the forefront, how can you miss?

Several outlaws do get shot — as old westerns used to do it — no blood and guts splash over the screen. In fact, it's one of the few movies I've viewed recently where I didn't have to close my eyes at least once.

Produced, directed and co-written by Melvin Frank, "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox" is part western-adventure story, part spoof (it falls way short of Mel Brooks), and part love story involving a spitfire of a chorus girl, Amanda, and a good-natured, card-playing scoundrel named Charlie Malloy.

SHE ASPIRES to nobility, hence Duchess. He's better known as Dirtwater Fox.

The two, played by Hawn and Segal, first meet up in a saloon on the Barbary Coast. Goldie in tattered stockings and a gaudy, kewpie doll costume adorned with plastic fruit, bursts out on stage to sing with great gusto, "Don't Touch Me Plums." This adds to the talents of Miss Hawn, who has never professionally sung or danced before.

But Amanda (stage named Bluebird) yearns to move up the social

by Genie Campbell

ladder, sees a chance to do so, and borrows some of Malloy's ill-gotten cash to help herself along. When he discovers the loss, there ensues a battle of wits as they combine their troubles on a perilous trip from San Francisco to Salt Lake City.

THE FILM is really Goldie's hour to shine though Segal's portrayal of a happy-go-lucky gambler-con man does not go unnoticed. It suits his personality just fine. His dry humor is so trite at times, it's actually funny. Who else could carry it off? And for that matter, who would guess that Segal had to be taught to ride a horse?

And that brings up the other star of the show — Black Jack, Malloy's tried and true steed. He's the first animal to steal a good many of the scenes since "Benji" made it big.

Unfortunately the breath-taking Colorado terrain where the film was shot is not up to snuff for faulty lighting. But one gets used to that too.

And though "The Duchess and Dirtwater Fox" is old-fashioned with respect to violence, the language is right up to today's four-lettered verbiage excluding the big one. But Goldie has such an innocent way of saying just about anything, it's easy to laugh — as I said, in spite of yourself.

GOLDIE HAWN as a San Francisco chorus girl, puts her best foot forward for Charlie Malloy played by George Segal, in "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox," a 20th Century-Fox movie.

Chronic head pain may be from tension

I need some advice on the problem of chronic head pain. All on the left side for approximately two years. The pains are in the temple, around the eye, in back of the eye, in back of the ear and in back of the head (on the left side). The pains shift in location and vary in intensity and duration. There is no discernible pattern.

An eye doctor told me that were not caused by my eyes. An internist took X-rays and indicated everything was negative. An ear, nose and throat specialist gave me an ambiguous answer and prescribed some pain pills which I am not interested in. My objective is some suitable corrective treatment.

Each doctor has told me "What it is not" but none have told me "what it is," and what I should be doing to correct the condition. I would not have been worse off if I had been living in a jungle a thousand miles away from the nearest doctor. I would appreciate your advice as to where I should go in order to have this problem diagnosed correctly, and where a suitable corrective treatment would be prescribed.

You are not as bad off as you think. One of the first steps in resolving the problem of a headache is to eliminate a number of medical disorders that may cause headaches. This certainly includes disorders of the ear, nose and throat. Since your eyes, ears, nose and throat have all been examined and they are apparently not the cause of your headache and X rays presumably of your skull are negative, a lot of important medical conditions which could cause headache have already been eliminated.

Since your headaches have no persistent pattern and are in various locations, they are probably muscular headaches, sometimes called tension headaches. The outer surface of the skull is covered with muscles. These can contract and cause pain like any muscle cramp.

Why do you have muscle spasm type headaches? The most common cause is the stress and strain of life. It's the way your psyche tells you that you are overtaxing it and not making an appropriate adjustment to your own environment. Review your own life's situation to see how much tension you have. Many such headaches are associated with mild forms of anxiety and depression. Pain relieving medicines or aspirins provide temporary relief but do not get at the basic problem which is you and your life situations. See a neurologist. If he also tells you that he doesn't find any cause for your headaches, ask him if some psychiatric counseling would help. If he agrees in reviewing your case that your stresses and strains and adjustments to them are the problem, it could be that one of the medicines used as an anti-depressant (amitriptyline) would be useful.

Meanwhile, heat, relaxation and gentle massage of the muscular area involved at the time you have a headache may help you control them. Try to identify and eliminate or at least control the major stress factors in your life.

Headaches occur in about 90 per cent of the population. Those who want more information about them can send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 2-9, Headache: Man's Most Common Pain. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Home treatment only for inexpensive fur

Dear Dorothy: I have an inexpensive but pretty pair of slippers (made in Korea) which are marked "rabbit fur upper, balance man-made materials." No other instructions. Since the fur is mostly white, I wonder if it can be cleaned. Any ideas? — Janet Bettex

Make a fairly dry paste of white cornmeal and dry-cleaning solvent, rub in, let dry, then brush off. The vacuum cleaner should be a great help here. It may be necessary to repeat the treatment. This simple treatment is not recommended for expensive furs — they should go to a professional fur cleaner.

Dear Dorothy: Tell your spouse he is fortunate that he can afford expensive cuts of meat. I get mad every time I read about his complaints about "chuck." I can afford steak, but by choice I request chuck for certain dishes.

Anyway, here is another hint regarding beans and the reduction of the status-forming qualities. Soak in cold water with a chopped medium onion overnight — covered. Discard the liquid. Rinse with cold water and proceed to add liquid and cook. — Jean Clark

Give his nibs a small break. He has several good points. Sure, his prejudices (like scolding chuck) get in his way sometimes. You have to put up with some nonsense in all of them. Thanks for the counsel on cooking beans.

Dear Dorothy: Regarding unexcavated areas under homes causing dampness, we had such a problem — brought on by a half-finished basement. Laid a plastic film over the dirt and weighted it down with clumps of earth to keep it in place. It worked so well we've since had the problem of too little humidity in cold weather. — Richard Gottbrath

Ask Andy

Tomato worms are moth larvae

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's Yearbook of Science and the Future to Clifton Safe, 12, of Woodlake, Calif., for his question:

WHERE DO TOMATO WORMS COME FROM?

Nowadays many economy-minded people are planting home gardens. And somehow vegetables that you have grown yourself taste much better than those purchased at the supermarket. Although a garden takes lots of care, with weeding and watering and all, it is well worth the effort. But a great number of nature's creatures hold the idea that you planted your garden just for them!

The tomato worms and their relatives belong to the insect group that includes the butterflies and moths. In truth they are the larval forms of a particular group of moths called sphinx or hawk moths. And beautiful moths they are. With a wingspan that may be wider than four inches, they may be seen during the early-morning hours sipping nectar from flowers in your garden.

The caterpillar form of these lovely moths, however, is something else. They grow to be four inches or more in length and as big around as a man's finger. To people who raise tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, potatoes or tobacco, they probably seem to be all mouth and stomach. But Andy has mixed feelings about these beautiful eating machines, and tends to treat them like misguided youngsters.

In the wild, these gigantic caterpillars help to pollinate tubular flowers such as the jimson weed and nicotiana, causing these plants to seed. As a result these plants produce foliage upon which future generations feed. In the garden, however, they are a pest and should be treated as such. Generally they are easy enough to find and destroy. If they occur in great numbers, it may be necessary to spray them with insecticide.

The tomato hornworm and the tobacco hornworm are often confused. They both dine on tomatoes or tobacco, and the adult moths are similar in appearance. Both caterpillars have a large, wicked-looking horn on the last segment of their bodies. This horn is the easiest way to identify them. The tomato hornworm has a green horn and is generally found in northern climates. The tobacco hornworm has a near-red horn and southern climates suit him best.

Adult moths lay their eggs on host plants. About a month later the larvae, or caterpillars, hatch and begin feeding. The larvae eat until nature's signal tells them to stop. At this time they drop to the ground, dig themselves in and quietly turn into beautiful adult moths.

Andy sincerely hopes that Clifton's garden is not visited by tomato hornworms this year. But if that happens, just remember, it's your garden and you have the right to say who reaps its benefits. If the adult moth pays you a visit, look her squarely in the eye and tell her she is welcome but her offspring have got to go.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Jeff Hunt, 12, of Lansing, Mich., for his question:

HOW MANY MOONS DOES JUPITER HAVE?

If you lived on the planet Jupiter, you could really boast about moonlit nights. While our earth has but one lovely moon, Jupiter has 13. These 13 satellites orbit around Jupiter, which is the undisputed king of the sun's planet family. Four are so large and bright they could easily be seen without a telescope were the planet itself not so brilliant.

In 1610 Galileo discovered them with his first telescope, which explains why they are known as the Galileon satellites. Ganymede and Callisto, the two largest, have diameters greater than the planet Mercury. Another is larger than our earth moon, and Europa is only slightly smaller.

Living on Jupiter would enable you to brag about your planet size, too. It has a diameter of 88,700 miles, and its mass is 318 times that of the earth. Actually, living conditions on Jupiter would not be too comfortable. Most astronomers believe this king of the planets is a huge ball of hot liquid with no solid surface at all. They speculate its temperature soars higher than 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

Do you have a question of ASK ANDY? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to ASK ANDY in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 680, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60068. Entries open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Comedy rates high in ABC lineup

by JOAN HANAUER

ABC, which guessed very right this year and presented a serious challenge to CBS as No. 1 in the Nielsen ratings, next fall with downgraded law and order in favor of comedy and variety.

Nine shows have been scratched — "Marcus Welby," "Harry O," "Swiss Family Robinson," "On The Rocks," "The Rookies," "S.W.A.T.," "Good Heavens," "Almost Anything Goes" and "D'Angelo-Superstar."

Most of the new schedule is straight replacement, except that "Starsky and Hutch" will move to Saturday night, which traditionally is disaster night for ABC.

HERE'S A rundown on the new slots in the ABC fall schedule:

- Sunday, 6-7 p.m., "The Bill Cosby Show," with Cosby in an audience-oriented variety.
- Monday, 7-8 p.m., "Captain and Tennille," a husband-and-wife team, who will combine music and comedy.
- Tuesday, 8-8:30 p.m., "The Nancy Walker Show," starring Miss Walker in a Norman Lear-developed comedy series about a woman trying to fill three roles — as professional talent agent, mother to a prodigiously pre-creating daughter, and wife of a recently retired naval officer.
- Tuesday, 8:30-9 p.m., "The Tony Randall Show," with talented Tony as a judge muddling through domestically.
- Tuesday, 9-10 p.m., ABC will continue either "Rich Man, Poor Man" or "Family."
- Wednesday, 9-10 p.m., "Charlie's Angels," the detective show about three female private eyes.
- Thursday, 9-10 p.m., "Most Wanted," starring Robert Stack as a homicide detective.
- Saturday, 7:30-8 p.m., "Mr. T and Tina," a comedy about a widowed Japanese businessman living in Chicago with a scatterbrained American governess for his children.
- Saturday, 9-10 p.m., "Feather and Father," with Harold Gould as a one-time conman, who uses his dubious talents to help his daughter, Stefanie Powers, a defense attorney.

Zadtwitz best of old timers

Any vote as to the best 80-year-old bridge player in the world would elect Waldemar von Zedtwitz unanimously.

Waldy has been around a long time. He is responsible, more than anyone else, for the success of the American Contract Bridge League. He has won almost every title there is and, in addition, must be known today as the great gentleman of bridge.

Playing in six notrump, Waldy counted 11 easy tricks: three spades, two in each red suit and four clubs. The 12th trick could come on a diamond finesse or a squeeze. Waldy worked out a squeeze that meant he would pick up the queen of diamonds in either hand.

He won the first heart, knocked out the ace of clubs, won a second heart and cashed three spades. He then noted that since West could only stop spades and East only hearts there was an automatic squeeze.

He just ran his clubs. One diamond went from dummy on the fourth club and on the fifth club, West had to come down to two diamonds to hold a spade, the last spade was thrown from dummy and, since East had to hold a heart, dummy's three diamonds had to be good.

Newest television sport just what we don't need

Jack Dempsey hovered over Jess Willard at Toledo in 1919, and refused to go to the farthest neutral corner. But he didn't chop Willard in the back of the neck with the blade of his hand.

Prize fighters soak their hands in brine. They punch heavy bags. But they don't soak their hands in buckshot. Or break tiles with the edge of their palms to turn them into guillotines.

Man has fought with his fists since the dawn of history. He has wrestled since he stood upright or since he had to subdue animals for food. But, wherever he has turned the activity into "sport," he has tried to modify the mayhem. He donned gloves, defined hitting areas, outlawed (not always successfully) such homicidal refinements as rabbit-punching, eye-gouging, lace-cutting, or kidney punching.

But they have now legalized in this country a form of mugging known as "full-contact karate." English translation: manslaughter. The rules are the same as they are in Central Park — assault with intent to commit murder.

At a time when society is taking a second look at the ethic of permitting two guys to punch each other senseless with gloved fists, they have added another dimension. A guy now has four ways to give you a subdural hemorrhage — on television.

Karate and kung fu (the Chinese version) are all the rage now. In between acid trips, some film actors have popularized the art form. The karate chop which paralyzes the spinal cord has replaced the uppercut on the barroom staple. You can't kill bulls or stick pigs in this country. People, they don't care about.

Karate heretofore has been a popular mime, a kind of Kabuki dancing, in this country. In which the practitioners were expected to pull their punches or lightly dust their opponents' faces or necks with simulated attacks. This is a useful technique for movie fights or for guys asked to fight Primo Carnera in the old days. But it doesn't sell in the open market. Not enough blood.

In 1974, a group of promoters banded together and formed something called the Professional Karate Assn., a full-contact form of the sport with five divisions.

At the Hilton Hotel in Las Vegas, Bill Wallace, of Memphis, the middleweight champion of this new pugilistic form, defended his title against Jim Echollas. The fight was televised nationally in 28 markets.

The karate contestants wear a form of open-work gloves and a form of earth shoes. Still, knockouts have been scored by Wallace with kicks to the stomach, the head and the heart.

Presumably, for an encore, they'll cut to Central Park to cover the activities of a few unranked brown belt professionals competing in winner-take-all matches that the Wide World of Sports missed.

Jack the Ripper was born too soon. Television would have turned his specialty into a sport and released a chorus girl a night in Hyde Park fog with a timer, to see if he could break his old record and by how much.

If full-contact karate goes over, look for javelin-catching — in handcuffs — to follow.

Prospect girls take lead in Paddock Trophy battle

Associate Sports Editor

A new leader has emerged from the winter sports season.

The Prospect girls' athletic program now leads the Paddock Trophy standings two-thirds of the way through the 1975-76 sports season.

The Paddock Trophy, symbol of varsity sports supremacy in the Mid-Suburban League, came into being last fall. Similar to the boys' Paddock Cup, the trophy will go to the league's top sports school at the end of the spring season.

Prospect trailed leading Arlington in average points, 13.33 to 12.33, after the fall sports season. But one very strong showing in the winter moved the Prospect Knights into first place.

The Knights' volleyball team won the MSL South Division title, finishing second in the league showdown to Hersey. That effort gave them 12 points.

Prospect finished well in bowling, placing sixth and earning eight points. The Knights were ninth in basketball, capturing five more points.

Meanwhile, Arlington's best showing came in bowling with a fifth place (nine points). The Cardinals were eighth in volleyball (six) and 10th in basketball (four).

So combining the efforts in both the fall and the winter, Prospect averaged 10.33 points with Arlington second at 9.83.

Making the most impressive climb during the winter season was Forest View. The Falcons jumped from 10th to third.

A MSL title in bowling, a third place in volleyball and a fourth in basketball led this spectacular surge. Forest View went from an average point total of 6.00 in the fall to a fall-winter average of 8.83.

The Falcons flew past Fremd, dropping the Vikings from third to fourth place. Fremd won basketball, but a ninth in bowling and a tie for 12th in volleyball proved costly, leaving the Vikings with an 8.70 average.

Hersey's won the volleyball title. However, an eighth in basketball and a 12th in bowling dropped it from fourth to fifth in the over-all standings with 8.58 points.

Also among the leaders is Buffalo Grove. The Bison were third in bowling, fifth in volleyball and sixth in basketball. That consistent effort moved them into sixth place with an 8.33 average.

The winner of the trophy will be determined early in June. Champions will have to be crowned in badminton, track and field, gymnastics and softball.

The Paddock Trophy will be presented to the winning athletic department at the school's awards banquet.

If a school should win the trophy three straight years, it will be retired and a new one will be purchased. It could happen for it has occurred twice in the history of the Paddock Cup.

More than half the MSL schools must participate in a sport before it can be included in the over-all point total. Ten sports will be used to determine the 1975-76 champion — archery, tennis, swimming, basketball, bowling, volleyball, badminton, track and field, softball and gymnastics.

Points are awarded according to a school's finish in each sport. Fourteen points go to the league champ, 12 for second, 11 for third best record, et cetera. The total points then are divided by the number of sports each school actually participates in on a varsity level.

Will state's finest preps leave state -- again?

Bob Frisk
Sports Editor

The sequence took only a few seconds, but it was significant.

Indiana's Jim Wisman took the ball out-of-bounds in the NCAA basketball championship Monday night and passed to Quinn Buckner.

Buckner moved across the center line and made a move on Rickey Green of Michigan. As he darted to his right, he shot a pass underneath. The pass was intended for Scott May but was picked off by Michigan's Johnny Robinson.

The flow of action quickly moved the other way.

What was so significant? This was the biggest college game of the season, and for those few seconds the basketball was touched by four of the 10 players on the floor. All four played their high school basketball in Illinois.

This should come as no surprise to anyone who follows schoolboy basketball in this state, but it does make you think a little.

I didn't know whether I should be proud or angry, proud because the Illinois boys did so well under so much pressure or angry because they were playing for schools outside the state.

Michigan started only one home-grown product — Wayman Britt from Flint. Green and Robinson are from Chicago, Steve Grote is from Cincinnati, and Phil Hubbard is from Canton, Ohio.

Indiana's co-captains this year were May, from Sandusky, Ohio, and Buckner, from Phoenix, Ill. However, the Hoosiers started three Indiana high school products and three great ones — Kent Benson, Bobby Wilkerson and Tom Abernethy.

The success of Indiana and Michigan shows just how much these schools have been able to capitalize in the 1970s on recruiting deficiencies at such state universities as Illinois and Ohio State.

There are strong coaching moves being made to counter these recruiting journeys across the borders, but Indiana and Michigan have established such strong lines of communication that it will be difficult to keep them from landing the Illinois or Ohio blue-chippers.

Since Illinois last recruited an Indiana player, for example, Bobby Knight of the Hoosiers has signed eight Illinoisans. Of course, the uncertain coaching situation and other problems at Illinois helped open the doors for Knight, but it still remains a fact that schools in the state are having trouble landing the "most wanted," the youngsters who can turn programs around and bring the crowds in.

Derek Holcomb of Peoria Richwoods, the best big man in Illinois and a franchise-saver or builder, has decided to go to Indiana to keep the rich from getting poor.

"I hope the people at Bradley and Illinois won't hold it against me," said Holcomb.

"Derek wanted to join an established winner," said his high school coach Wayne Hammerton.

So much for the pioneering spirit. Glen Grunwald, the superstar from East Leyden who is coveted by every major school in the country, has said he doesn't want to go to a have-nothing school as a savior and be expected to turn things around. He did indicate recently, however, that a school doesn't have to be a super-power, merely respectable.

Holcomb and Grunwald are two examples why the state of Illinois features possibly its finest major-college talent in history.

"There are 30 or 40 major college prospects in the state this year," said Lou Henson, first year coach at the University of Illinois.

"Jay Shidler (Lawrenceville) is the best guard I've ever seen," said Tex Winter, coach at Northwestern. "Glen Grunwald is exceptional. I don't know if Illinois ever had a guard and a forward the same year of that caliber. It's a bumper crop."

"Iowa will produce one or two major college players," said Lute Olson, Iowa's head man. "Illinois will produce a minimum of 25, and there are undoubtedly some sleepers I'm unaware of. Conservatively speaking, 10 of these Illinois preps could play prominent roles in the Big 10 next year."

You're talking about income in excess of $1 million over the next four years if one of the state schools could land one or two superstars, build a winning program and start playing to capacity crowds.

TV has sweetened the pot, and that makes a winning basketball program even more rewarding. Big 10 schools received more than $15,000 each from the NCAA coverage (Indiana and Michigan landed $77,000 plus), and the tournament, worth $2.5 million this year, will jump to $4 million in 1977.

DePaul made some great strides with its NCAA appearance, but there has to be a stronger pitch made by all the state schools to keep the super kids "home," and not traveling all over the country.

After watching Lawrenceville's Shidler put on his incredible shooting show in the Class A tournament, Larry Stewart, a Champaign radio man, said, "Outgoing Gov. Dan Walker should declare Shidler a 'natural resource' and bind him to the state university. If that doesn't work, Walker should look into 'disaster area' provisions in light of Illinois' recent misfortunes with the state's premier players."

It's not only happening in Illinois. "Year after year, it's the same thing here," said Jim Williams, head coach at Colorado State University. "Our best high school players wind up at UCLA or Southern Cal or Vanderbilt."

"At one time, I considered asking the governor of Colorado to intervene, to try and persuade these kids to stay in the state," Williams said. "After they get out of college, most of them are going to come back here to live, but for some reason they want to go to college out of state."

Williams understands how the absence of basketball tradition at Colorado universities may be one factor in the loss of students to other schools, but he said there has to be another reason.

"In the years that I've been in Colorado, I've found that Utah kids, for example, are fiercely loyal to the Utah schools. The same thing is true in Kansas; Kansas boys want to go to Kansas universities. That loyalty doesn't exist in Colorado."

You're not alone, Jim Williams. That loyalty doesn't seem to exist in Illinois either as the big ones keep getting away.

Will there be a change this year? The first major announcement — Peoria's Holcomb to Indiana — sounded like the same old story.

Yes, the best Illinois talent is capable of competing with anyone at the national championship level.

The best Illinois talent is playing for Indiana and Michigan and Marquette and...

Les Zikes of Palatine topped 1,383 pins in the final qualifying Thursday to lead 24 qualifiers into head-to-head matches of the $80,000 Miller Open bowling tournament.

Defending champion Dave Davis and leading money winner Earl Anthony failed to make the cut.

Zikes had an 18-game total of 4,010, a 222 average, and 58 pins ahead of Cliff McNeely at 3,952. Rounding out the top five were: Louie Moore, 3,948; Leroy Langager, 3,941 and Dave Soutar, the leader after two rounds Wednesday, with 3,940.

It was a rewarding recovery for Zikes, who entered Thursday's round in fourth place. It strengthened his bid for regaining eligibility for the Firestone Tournament of Champions after being bumped two weeks ago by Paul Moser, when the latter won the U.S. Open.

It's OK to dunk now

Dunking will be permitted at high school and college basketball games next year in the United States and Canada for the first time in 10 years.

"The feeling was that it's been strongly recommended by college coaches the last four or five years," said John E. Carpenter, of Rider College in Trenton, N.J., newly elected chairman of the National Basketball Rules Committee.

Carpenter said today the rules committee, which governs all amateur basketball in this country and Canada, passed the resolution during its two-day annual meetings, which ended Wednesday, by a "comfortable margin."

He said dunking will be permitted during the game, but will be prohibited during warmups under penalty of technical foul.

The committee had outlawed dunking prior to the 1966-67 season. "The problem was with the equipment," Carpenter said. "But we found that the equipment damage happened prior to the games, not during. There were few cases where it happened during the game."

He said the other argument against dunking was that it would give teams with tall players an unfair advantage. "When you get into a position to dunk," Carpenter said, "You're probably going to make the basket anyway."

Bonham sharp, Cubs win

Bill Bonham allowed Oakland only three hits in 5 2/3 innings, and Oscar Zamora and Mike Garman backed him up with hitless relief Thursday to pitch the Chicago Cubs to a 4-1 exhibition victory over the Oakland A's in Scottsdale.

Zamora followed Bonham in the sixth inning and went 2 1/3 innings, then Garman pitched the final inning of hitless ball. It was the Cubs' sixth win in eight games and third in a row.

"We're beyond where we thought we might be after the late spring start," Manager Jim Marshall said. "I'm very happy with the progress we've made."

Sox lose to Reds, 3-2

The Cincinnati Reds, scoring all of their runs in the first inning, went on to beat the Chicago White Sox 3-2 Thursday as Jack Bingham, Mac Scarce and Joe Henderson teamed up for a seven-hitter.

A walk to Pete Rose and singles by Ken Griffey, Joe Morgan, and George Foster gave the Reds their three runs off White Sox knuckleballer Wilbur Wood in the first inning.

Bingham, in his most impressive outing of the spring, restricted the White Sox to four hits in the six innings he pitched.

A single by Cleon Jones, Jim Spencer's double and a fielder's choice gave the White Sox their first run in the fifth inning. A walk, an infield hit and errors by Morgan and Doug Flynn gave the White Sox their final run in the ninth before Bucky Dent hit into game-ending double play.

Kuhn nixes AL expansion

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, saying he could no longer ignore baseball's failure to provide a franchise for Washington, Thursday refused to sanction the American League's planned expansion to Toronto in 1977 unless some provision is made for games in the nation's capital city.

Kuhn questioned whether the AL's plan for expansion into Toronto is permissible since it failed to make any provision for baseball in Washington.

The commissioner has maintained for nearly five years that the return of baseball to Washington was essential to the long-term interests of the game. He has also publicly taken the position that Washington should be given priority in the event of expansion or transfer of franchises.

American League President Lee MacPhail, however, indicated he would defy the commissioner when he said in a prepared statement, "The American League intends to go forward with its plans for Toronto."

In response to MacPhail's statement, Kuhn said he was ready to sit down with the AL president immediately in an endeavor to work the matter out. He believed that seven days should be sufficient time.

Jabbar is MVP again

Los Angeles' 7-4 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, playing under a handicap of centering for a new team this season, won his fourth National Basketball Association MVP honor Thursday in one of the closest balloting held in the 22-year history of the Podoloff Award.

Jabbar, acquired by the Lakers in a preseason trade with Milwaukee, received 400 points to 393 for second place Bob McAdoo of the Buffalo Braves. Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics collected 378 points for third place.

The three brilliant pro centers received 69.7 per cent of the votes cast by 188 league players.

Names in the news...

The confused and complicated Andy Messersmith affair moved into the office of baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn Thursday afternoon, with the New York Yankees claiming Messersmith's agent signed a written contractual agreement and Messersmith contending that no binding deal had been made. . . . Michigan State basketball star Terry Furlow was named the Spartans' MVP Thursday after leading the Big Ten in scoring for the second straight year. . . .

Veteran Gay Brewer fired a 66 to tie Jim Weichers for the first-round lead in the Greater Greensboro Open. . . . The Green Bay Packers have signed 10 free agents, including former Chicago Bear rushing leader Ken Grandberry and another ex-Bear, running back, Cliff Taylor. . . . The Cincinnati Bengals traded wide receiver Charlie Joiner to San Diego for defensive end Coy Bacon. . . .

Tim Shaw, world record holder in the 400-meter freestyle, failed to qualify Thursday for the finals in the 1976 AAU Indoor Long-course Swimming Championships.

Arlington High School grad Paul Splittorff pitched seven strong innings as the Kansas City Royals beat the New York Yankees, 4-3, in an exhibition game Thursday. The big lefty scattered six hits and yielded just one earned run.

It doesn't hurt to look beautiful.

Depilation. The cosmetic approach to removing hair without pain. Depilation is the newest thing to happen in hair removal in the last 45 years. It uses no needles, no wax, no special electronic lasers. It uses only the hair not the skin and in seconds the hair is removed.

Hawks, Kings, Pistons take titles

The Schaumburg Athletic Assoc. boys' basketball leagues ended their season as the division leaders battled in playoff games.

In the ABA minor instructional league for eight- and nine-year olds the Hawks (West), led by Larry Peterson's 11 points, defeated the Floridians (East) 14-10. Floridian Dave Anzalone paced his team with four points as Hawk defense held Greg Charvat, the league's top scorer, to only two. Matt Johnson and Tom Sechter contributed two each in the losing cause, while Bobby McCue sank two and Tim McCullah one to round out the Hawks' scoring.

After a disappointing 1-9 season last year, the Hawks led their division all the way this season, finishing with an 8-2 record. The Floridians, who finished in a tie for first last year only to lose the playoff game, paced their division again this season with a 7-3 record.

The league's top scorers in regular season play were Charvat, 67 points; Jeff Harris (Lions), 58; Steve Somogyi (Cougars), 46; Michael Ptak (Spurs), 45; and Jeff Mies (Stars) and Joe Scarnato (Pacers), 43 each.

A surprising upset in the ABA major league for 10- and 11-year olds saw the undefeated Bulls (East) fall to the West division leader Kings 23-19. The Kings, 9-1 in regular season play, sparked defensively as they stopped two of the league's top scorers, holding Kim McDermott to only six points and Kevin Kendall to five. Four points each for Mark McConnell and Ray Ritchie completed the scoring for the Bulls, a team which came into the playoffs averaging 39 a game. Kenny Travis led the scoring for the Kings with nine points, followed by Mark Staniak with eight, Buddy Swanson, four and Scott Bryans, two.

A three-way race for top scorer in the league was won by Kendall who knocked in 141 points during regular season play. Close at his heels were Greg Miller (Rockets) who finished the season with 139 and Mike Wallner (Travelers), with 138. Rounding out the top five were McDermott with 92 points and Staniak with 81.

Height was the name of the game in the 12- and 13-year olds' league playoff as the taller Pistons of the NBA West romped over the East division champion Bulls 61-32. Offensively the Pistons outdid themselves, scoring well above their 37.5 season average, as Rich Murovski led the way with 24 points and Tracy Wehrheim sank 22. Other Piston scorers were Mike Callahan, Brian Coyle and Danny Jacobson, four each; Dean Miller, two; and Brian Peterson, one.

Quickness and expert ball handling enabled the Bulls' Lenny Lamberti to break through Piston defenses for nine points; Ian Brown brought in eight and Eddie Swanson, six. The NBA leading scorer, Rich Coursey, was held to five points, while Dave Amulitis and Ben Lawson each shot for two. The Bulls wound up regular season play with a 7-3 record while the Pistons tallied 9-1.

The NBA top five scorers this season were Coursey, 167 points; Doug Allen (Lakers), 155; Joe D'Ambrosio (Celtics), 140; Greg Bullit (Lakers), 138; and Danny Burkett (Jazz), 131.

Trophies will be awarded to the winning teams at the sixth annual basketball banquet April 5. The event, featuring a chicken dinner, will take place in the Conant High School cafeteria, 700 E. Cougar Trail, Hoffman Estates, beginning at 6:15 p.m. Tickets will be available at the door at a cost of $2.00 per person or $8.00 per family.

Many track stars emerge from Mid-Suburban indoor

by ART MUGALIAN
Actions and reactions from Wednesday's Mid-Suburban League indoor track meet at Buffalo Grove:

Although there were some well-directed complaints from a handful of coaches and runners, the meet ran smoothly and an overflow crowd was handled adequately, much to the credit of Bison coach Joe Scarpino.

But the 146-yard cement oval at Buffalo Grove left several athletes talking to themselves and cursing the man who first brought track indoors.

"The straightaways are so short and it's really hard to keep from slipping," said one athlete who, like nearly everyone else, is anxiously awaiting the outdoor season when spikes will replace flats as the basic mode of footwear.

"Our track is 14 yards shorter than Elk Grove or Wheeling," said Scarpino, "but the lanes are wider and we don't have any beams or supports to get in the way."

Scarpino praised the coaches, athletes and student-helpers and gave a special kudo to the ROTC and chorale group that performed during a ceremonial opening.

The cramped turns and slippery conditions may have contributed to a couple of mishaps, although for the most part the complaints were aimed at indoor track in general.

Schaumburg sophomore Jeff Ways was leading in the final heat of the 440 when he took a tumble on the last curve. Running in the inside lane, Ways appeared to catch a cone marker with his left foot. He didn't get up until after the race was over, then spent much of the rest of the night resetting the cones so they wouldn't interfere with anyone else.

Ways, a lanky speedster who ran the 100 and the low hurdles as a freshman, was consoled after the race by Forest View's 880 champ, Steve Schellenberger, who won the indoor and outdoor 410 last year.

"He's going to be the one to watch in the next couple of years," Schellenberger said of the Schaumburg sophomore.

Jim Vartanian, Schellenberger's hurdling teammate, surprised a lot of people, including his own coach, when he won the 50-yard dash in a photo-finish ahead of Rick Sutton of Rolling Meadows. Forest View coach Bill Mohrmann had figured his senior standout for no better than a third in the sprint.

"I was more psyched up for the 50 than I was for the highs," said Vartanian, who still managed to set conference records in both the highs and lows.

Vartanian's best test, however, came in the lows when he beat Elk Grove's Dave King, the defending indoor champion.

"All I could think about in the finals was last year when I caught the last hurdle with my foot," said Vartanian, who was second to King in 1975.

It was the first time the Forest View hurdler had ever beaten King in the lows in a major meet, and he broke the league record with a :06.1 in the process.

Almost as remarkable was the performance of King, who was hurdling in competition for the first time since suffering a serious injury in January. The Elk Grove senior edged Vartanian in the prelims Wednesday, setting a conference mark of :06.1 that stood until the finals.

Sophomore Joe Shields, who won the frosh-soph two-mile Tuesday, probably would have broken the conference F-S record of 10:06, but he and the rest of the field mistakenly ran just 23 laps instead of 24. Shields' time for 23 laps was 9:41.

The varsity two-mile went to Forest View junior Darryl Robinson, who locked up with soph Mark Smith of Prospect in an exciting battle of tactics. Smith darted into the lead with two and a half laps to go, but Robinson took it back almost immediately and won by more than seven seconds.

Robinson, who "ran smart," according to Mohrmann, also picked up a victory in the mile to become the first MSL runner to sweep the mile/two-mile double indoors.

The fact that Forest View won the meet came as anything but a surprise to most observers, but the margin of victory — nearly 20 points — was a shocker. Injuries to Schellenberger and Mike Harvey, who accounted for 17 points between them, were supposed to weaken the Falcons.

Travelers II wins Lattot cage invite

The Lattot Travelers II, sponsored by Lattot Chevrolet and serving as the host team for the second annual Lattot Invitational Basketball Tournament, defeated a very good and well-coached St. Raymond team, 51-47, to capture the championship last weekend at Thomas grade school.

It was championship play from the opening buzzer as the score was tied at the end of the first quarter, 11-all, at the end of the half 23-all, and the end of the third quarter, 39-all.

The Travelers II, the seventh grade entry representing the Arlington Heights Youth Basketball Assn., demonstrated tremendous poise in winning the title. Both teams played a fantastic game considering the pressure of the contest and stars were many. The Travelers got great individual efforts from the entire team throughout the tournament, and especially from Johnson with 47 points in three games and Vasquez with a total of 35 points in three games.

The Travelers defeated St. Joseph of Wilmette, 56-51, behind the hot shooting of Johnson with 13, Vasquez 12, Lilberg 10 and Flores 9 points, to move into the semifinals. They defeated a good St. James team, 54-47, to qualify for the big game behind Johnson's 18 points. Flores hit for 12 points and Vasquez hit 11. The game's high point man was Harrison of St. James with 23. In the championship game, St. Raymond fell as Johnson pumped in 16 and Vasquez hit for 12. St. Raymond received good scoring from Magnus 14, Keady 12 and Brady 12 in a losing cause. The Lattot Travelers placed Johnson, Carlos and Vasquez on the all-tourney team with honorable mention going to Flores.

From campuses nationwide

—Hersey High School quarterback Scott Topczewski has decided to play his college football at the University of Evansville (Ind.)

Topczewski, a strong passer at 6-2 and 180-pounds, has earned All-Conference recognition twice and has been named to All-Area and All-State teams.

—Mike DeLaBruere, from Arlington Heights, ran a leg on the Valparaiso University distance medley relay team that set a new VU track team record of 10:21.7.

—Baseball has moved back into the college spotlight and the Herald area has contributed several outstanding performers.

Kankakee Community College stumbled on a spring trip through Florida, losing eight of 12 games, but Wheeling product George Kuage could hardly be blamed.

The big blond, one of the top players on the KCC basketball team, finished the 1975 season — with a .342 batting average.

Kuage rapped out 13 hits in 38 at bats, including a home run, a triple, two doubles and 10 RBIs.

Sophomore outfielder Ken Butzen, a graduate of Forest View, was named Player of the Week at Western Illinois University. Butzen leads the team in hitting with a .429 mark as well as being the top all-around player on his coach's game performance chart.

Northern Illinois University will open its baseball season Saturday and Bruce Frase and Bill Harrison from Arlington Heights will start at short-stop and third base respectively.

Indiana State University took a spring trip of their own and came home with a 5-3 record, one of the best starts in ISU history. Jeff Brisson, a graduate of Fremd, leads the Sycamores batting charts with a .417 average.

The Western Illinois University gymnastics team improved their NCAA Division II finish from tenth in 1975 to eighth this season.

Contributing to the rise was Steve Kluow, a freshman from Schaumburg, who finished 29th in the all-around with a score of 48.45. Dean Kolts, of Des Plaines, was 33rd.

Specialists helping the Bulldogs were Dave Peterson of Wheeling (side horse — 7.35), Ward Wittmeyer of Arlington Heights (vaulting — 7.85) and Gary Pagano of Wheeling (high bar — 5.70).

Jeff Cleveland, former Arlington High School basketball player, has been voted by his teammates to receive the "Hustle Award" from the University of Wisconsin-Stout cage team.

The award is given each year to the player who "night after night in practice and in games, is an inspiration to his teammates with his hustle and determination."

Cleveland led the squad in rebounds with 150 and averaged 11 points a game.

—Al Black, from Prospect High School, was the only freshman on the Illinois Wesleyan basketball team to receive a varsity letter.

The 6-3 Black played in 17 games during Wesleyan's 23-7 campaign and hit .548 from the field and .750 from the line.

ROSELLE, ILL. 529-5551

'Right up the middle' makes Reds even tougher

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — "If you think we were good last year," says the ever enthusiastic Sparky Anderson, manager of the world champion Cincinnati Reds, "wait til this year. There's no reason why we shouldn't be as good or better, and the reason is right up the middle."

The "right up the middle" that Sparky Anderson boasts about is, in fact, perhaps the finest quartet at their respective positions in all of baseball: Catcher Johnny Bench, second baseman Joe Morgan, shortstop Dave Concepcion and center fielder Cesar Geronimo.

Bench hit 28 homers and drove in 110 runs; Morgan won the National League most valuable player award after batting .327 with 107 runs scored and 97 RBIs; Concepcion hit 274 and finished second in fielding among NL shortstops, while Geronimo was probably the best defensive outfielder in baseball.

Add to that the hustle, hits and enthusiasm of Pete Rose at third, the RBI power of Tony Perez at first and the blooming promise of Ken Griffey and George Foster flanking Geronimo in the outfield, and you have the nucleus of another world championship team.

Another plus for the Reds this year is that they go into the season knowing that Gary Nolan's arm is sound and that bullpen youngsters Rawley Eastwick and Will McEnaney can do the job. A year ago, Nolan was a big question mark, having been out of baseball for practically two years. He wound up 15-9 Eastwick and McEnaney, meanwhile, did so well in so many clutch pitching assignments, the Reds felt they could afford to deal away their longtime bullpen king, Clay Carroll, to the Chicago White Sox.

STRENGTHS: There are few places on this team that aren't strong. Quality, both offensively and defensively, at every position. Speed and power are abundant. Bullpen is superb.

WEAKNESSES: Second line starting pitching behind ace Don Gullett (15-4, 2.42 ERA) is still suspect. Nolan must do it again and Jack Billingham (15-10) must continue to astound his critics or else Anderson could have an unexpected major problem here.

NEW FACES: Handyman Bob Bailey, from Montreal, outfielder Mike Lum, from Atlanta, add even more bench strength. Reliever Rich Hinton, acquired in the Carroll trade, could make the team as fourth bullpen man.

OUTLOOK: Only a pitching collapse could prevent the Reds from repeating in their division. Once again, they look like the team to beat for everything. Anderson has good reason to be enthusiastic.

Larger gasoline tanks usually hold from 18 to 26 gallons of gas, which is drawn by a pump into a filter-tipped fuel pickup. From there the gas goes through the fuel line. A float mechanism and sensor register the fuel level by means of a wire to the dashboard gauge. Vapor pipes carry fumes to a nearby vapor separator, and a baffle keeps the fuel from sloshing. The fuel that eventually reaches the cylinders is a misty vapor usually composed of about 15 parts of air for every part of gasoline.

HELPFUL HINT

Fuel injection allows efficient combustion with a minimum of wasted fuel.

To Fans Forum:

After witnessing NBC-TV's coverage of the semifinals and final games of the NCAA, I've come to one conclusion — Curt Gowdy must go! Anyone who paid any attention to his play-by-play or comments had to be upset with the way Gowdy handled himself during such a prestigious event. Granted, he is a veteran of many sports events, but his time seems to have passed.

Gowdy made so many mistakes in the UCLA-Indiana game that I think I could have done better. He had the score wrong, blew names of the more famous starters and never seemed totally prepared for such a big game. In the finals, Gowdy had no business being there. He should have been replaced by Bill Packer, who does an outstanding color job while working with Dick Enberg. The Enberg-Packer combo is the only one NBC should have had working. Gowdy should stick to non-live events like the American Sportsman.

THANKS FROM DE PAUL

Dear Herald

The 1975-76 basketball season was DePaul University's best in 12 years. Our participation in the National Collegiate Athletic Assn tournament was a happy and fitting climax to a successful year and augurs even better things to come in the immediate future.

While Coach Ray Meyer and his Blue Demons certainly merited extensive coverage based on their accomplishments, I couldn't help but notice that the perceptiveness, fairness and accuracy of your reporting complemented the efforts of our players, coaches and the members of our athletic staff. In this regard, I believe that I reflect the sentiments of the entire university community: students, faculty, alumni and administrators.

I would like to take this opportunity to extend my personal thanks to you, not simply for making the public aware of DePaul's athletic achievements, but rather for maintaining the Chicago tradition of adhering to the highest of journalistic standards.

(Rev.) John R. Cortelyou, C.M.

PRO TRACK A JOKE

Fans Forum:

Watching the Vitalis ITA pro track meet on television the other night, I realized that the biggest sports fiasco of all time was not Make That Spare. Fifty dollars for fourth place (in a field of four) in the two-mile run is a great incentive — especially for me and my overweight brother who had nothing better to do on a Saturday night.

'Super senior' talent meets at River Trails

One of the most impressive fields of "super senior" tennis talent ever to congregate in Chicagoland will be on view this weekend (April 2-4) at River Trails Tennis Center, Mount Prospect.

The occasion is the annual Leonard Noonan Memorial 60-and-over tournament. One of the entrants is the area's only current adult national champion, 70-year-old Bill Jones of Glenview. Two others are the defending doubles titleholders, former Davis Cup star George Lott of Chicago and Clare Riessen of Evanston.

Still others are defending singles champion Tommie Walker of Chicago; last year's runner-up, Ray Ames of the host club, and two newcomers to this age group — Marion Rice of Indianapolis, current Western 55 doubles titlist, and Irv Converse of Aurora, former Western 55 singles champion.

"Super senior" is a term for senior players 60 years of age and up. There's a national "super senior" circuit covering the 60, 65, 70 and 75 age groups. The U S Tennis Association ranks men through 75 and women through 50. Jones is currently national 70-and-over champion on both clay and grass.

The River Trails tourney, one of 35 sanctioned and monitored by the Chicago District Tennis Association during the 1975-76 indoor season, will be spread over two weekends. Singles play will begin at 1 p.m. Friday (April 2), with doubles following on Saturday. Semifinals and finals will be played on weekend of April 10-11.

Dist. 15 to host volleyball tourney

Dist. 15 will host its third annual Eighth Grade Volleyball Invitational Tournament Saturday at Carl Sandburg Junior High, 2600 Martin Lane, Rolling Meadows.

Action starts at 9:30 a.m. and will continue until 1 p.m. Dist. 15 teams involved will be Carl Sandburg, Palatine Hills, Plum Grove and Winston Park. Others competing will be Barrington Middle School, St. Colette of Rolling Meadows, Holmes and River Trails and Mount Prospect. River Trails is the defending champion.

Saturday's four best teams will compete in the finals after school Wednesday, April 7, at Sandburg.

of Klehm's Nursery

Many flowering shrubs and trees will do more than just add beauty to your grounds in spring and summer. The showy flowers in the spring are the first of the benefits, then in summer there is cooling, rich foliage. Comes fall and winter many have foliage that adds bright color to the landscape plus berries that will attract and feed birds. An important advantage the birds bring, in addition to the joy of having them around, is that they do an effective job in eating many of the bugs and insects that prey on plants.

By planting balled in burlap plants early you will be able to have all their beauty this spring and not have to wait for another spring. So, when you shop for a beautiful addition to your landscaping keep these plants in mind.

High on the list of shrubs are the Viburnums. In this family a favorite is the Highbush Cranberry with white flowers in spring and scarlet fall berries. The berries hang on far into the winter and are especially attractive to Bluebirds, Cardinals and Brown Thrashers. Other Viburnums have berries in red, black, blue and blue-black and attract as many as 35 bird species. Honeysuckle, an early blooming shrub, bears red berries in early summer. Humming birds, Cedar Waxwings, Thrushes and Robins are fond of Honeysuckle berries.

Coloneaster not only has bright red tempting berries but also adds fall color as the shiny foliage turns to red and orange. We don't often think of Boston Ivy as anything but green but actually its foliage becomes brilliant in the fall. And in the winter, it has masses of blue-black berries, that are favorites of Chickadees. Beautiful Dogwoods from July through autumn, lead in the numbers parade by appealing to 93 species of birds. Buddleia has tiny fragrant flowers that not only are attractive to birds but also to butterflies — hence its common name, Butterfly Bush. Barberry shrubs are very hardy, make excellent hedges, have glorious fall color and bear red berries for bird food. A delightful addition is the distinctive Russian Olive. It is a rugged, silvery plant with gnarled trunks. It has tiny yellow flowers and in late summer bears sweet yellow berries that birds love.

Other beautiful additions are the Mountain Ash and the Washington Hawthorn. The Ash is a graceful tree that has clusters of orange-red berries in August. The Hawthorn is a very hardy bush form plant and will have very colorful red fruits.

If there is one plant that should be a must it is the flowering Crabapple. Few plants have so much to offer, are so easy to grow and come in such a wide range of blossom colors. Whatever your favorite color from pure white to deep red and everything in-between, there is a Crabapple for you. In spring they are clouds of delicate color and even the small varieties are luxuriously covered with foliage in summer. In the fall there are 44 different bird species that are attracted by the berries that come in red, yellow or purple. Crabapples can be planted as a beautiful specimen or put in a small group for a thing of fabulous beauty. Be sure to pay special note to the Zumi variety.

Klehm's 72 page 1976 Planting Guide is now available and can be picked up, free of charge, at the nursery. It is packed with interesting horticultural information and useful landscaping hints.

THE ZUMI Calocarpa Crabapple. It's light pink buds open to a clear white. This tree is wide spreading and will grow from 12 to 15 feet tall.

Clean up garden debris

If you neglected to clean up garden debris last fall, do it now, says Roscoe Randell, University of Illinois Extension entomologist.

Many plant pests are carried over each year in refuse. Removing old plant parts, leaves and other material from the garden helps control many insect problems that could occur during the gardening season, adds Randell.

Two common garden insect pests are the European Corn Borer and Common Stalk Borer. The European Corn Borer usually harms sweet corn, tomatoes, potatoes, green beans and peppers. It winters in plant stubble left in the garden forming a cocoon in spring. Moths emerge in June to lay eggs on new plants large enough for stalk penetration by the hatching borers.

The Common Stalk Borer also has a wide range of hosts. During winter, the eggs live on grasses and refuse. In May, they hatch into small caterpillars. Growing to 1½ inches long, the caterpillars bore into garden plants that have large stalks.

Artificial light can mix-up plants

A COMPACT do-it-yourself redwood garden shelter has a convenient work counter and cabinets for gardening and power tools, garbage cans, hoses and fertilizer. A sliding door on children's wagon wheels completely encloses and locks work and storage areas. You can design and build your own garden center using rugged, economical garden grades of redwood.

Build a garden shelter

Once you decide to build a redwood garden shelter, pay a visit to your local lumber dealer. He'll help you decide what grades and sizes of redwood you'll need, and perhaps give you some construction tips. Ask for economical garden grades of redwood, and keep in mind that heartwood grades must be used for any application in or on the ground.

Check the thicknesses, widths and lengths of your lumber. Widths and thicknesses are slightly less than nominal sizes because lumber is reduced when planed in the mill. Lengths are often longer than nominal.

Lumber purchases for a good-sized project need careful planning, and as with any large home project, allow two to three weeks from order to delivery time.

Remember that top quality nails and hardware may cost extra, but they far outlast cheaper materials. Your dealer can also give advice on brands and applications of finishes for stains or paint.

Plant inexpensive gardens

There's no need to invest a lot of money in wood, pottery or metal when inexpensive, strong, lightweight, rust and rotproof plastic containers are available. Two-gallon sizes are good for growing groups of two or three small-frame flowers or vegetables. Four-gallon sizes can accommodate larger flowers and medium sized vegetables. Shallow seven-gallon tubs — the size used for bathing babies, or soaking feet — are just right for individual plants of eggplant, squash, melons, or other large vegetables. Twenty-gallon plastic garbage cans can accommodate two plants of large-vined tomatoes. Drainage and aeration can be improved by drilling 3/8 inch holes in the bottom and side walls of plastic containers, on six inch centers.

Another option is compressed fiber containers — these grayish-brown buckets, baskets and tubs are used for growing trees and shrubs; contact your local nurseryman for supplies. But be forewarned, only large, well stocked garden centers carry fiber containers in the four to 15-gallon sizes you will be needing. The type with waxed or asphalted bottoms will last for two to three growing seasons. They are lightweight and have holes for drainage.

Bluegrass is cool season crop

Bluegrasses are a cool season crop. They therefore do best in the spring and fall in DuPage County. Bluegrasses are light green to dark green depending on variety and growing conditions.

For a fairly good quality turf with a moderate amount of work, bluegrasses should be fertilized about three times a year (and watered when needed) . . . about every five to seven days on our clay soils if we haven't received an inch of rain in that period).

When watering, apply an inch of surface water. This should soak in and go four to six inches deep. Water before mid-afternoon so that the grass blades dry off before evening in order to help keep disease problems at a minimum. Bluegrasses should also be mowed between 1 1/2 to three inches in

by BILL MEACHEM

Old Mother Nature has a lot of tricks up her sleeve when it comes to man-made changes in her environment. And her reactions to artificial light are among them.

I can read a newspaper on my front steps at midnight with no other light except from a street light that is on the other side of the street!

The new lights that were installed this year are great for night driving and walking the dog. But I wonder what affect they will have on plants — trees, shrubs, flowers and vegetables.

I am sure that folks trying to grow certain plants right under these lights will be in some trouble. Although I have not heard too many complaints as yet, I do expect some. A few weird things have happened to my plants but I can't blame them yet on the new lights because we've had some unusual weather this year.

But for instance, it could be possible for some street lights, and you can include in this category all those new lights found around brightly lit shopping centers, parking lots etc., to prevent chrysanthemums from blooming. These plants will only bloom when the days are short and nights long. I'm sure that with some of these new powerful street lights the plants can't tell whether it is night or day. If they think it is still daytime at midnight, they won't bloom.

Poinsettias are another plant that only flowers when the days are short. I advise people to keep plants out of artificial light to help them bloom in winter. A plant sitting on a window getting strong street light also may be affected.

Recently I heard of some shrubs that have been affected by street lights. The tall hedge buckthorn is noted as one of the best leaf-dropping hedges we have. It's dense and hardy to 50 degrees below zero. But many are dying because in street light they keep growing late in the fall, causing soft growth that is invaded by diseases and pests.

Two other northern plants affected by street lights are birch and catalpa. When growth of any plant is affected by outside means, it is an invitation to insects and diseases which seem to prey on the weaker plants.

We should, therefore, take good care of our plants. Innocent looking insects can carry diseases. Spray as soon as you see any pests. A pass with an aerosol on a few bugs on one stem could be the means of keeping that plant from getting a fatal disease.

Weeds aren't always bad

Despite its bad reputation, a weed can be an attractive plant. Webster defines a weed as "any plant growing uncultivated, useless or troublesome, offensive or hurtful." Actually, a weed is nothing more than a plant that is out of place. If you wanted to grow dandelions, and a rose bush sprouted in their midst, it would be a weed.

From early times, man has found many uses for weeds ranging from food to medicines. Plantain, for instance was once used to bring bad spirits out of a person's body. Today it serves a similar purpose. Picture the gardener who has carefully cultivated his lawn only to be confronted by spreading masses of plantain.

For some people, weeds are a good sign. When a sod grower or golf course designer looks for new land, he often seeks ground covered with a good growth of weeds. This signifies that the land is fertile, and he knows that once he has overcome the weeds, good grass will grow.

Most weeds fall into two categories: grassy and broadleaf. With rare exception, you'll know a weed when you see one. Here are some that bear close attention when you find them growing in your lawn.

Crab grass — the No. 1 despoiler of lawns spreads crablike over the soil. Leaves are up to 1/4 in. wide, turning reddish or purplish when the plant matures. It sends up six-inch long, seed-laden stalks.

Plantain — There are two kinds. One has wide ribbed leaves that grow close to the ground. It shoots up short, slender stalks with tiny close-clustered flowers. The other is narrow-leaved and has tall, slender stems with small, dark brown flower heads.

Dandelion — Speckles the grass with bright, yellow flowers. When it goes to seed, white, fragile seeds are scattered far and wide.

Chickweed — Sprawls haphazardly over the ground; may grow as much as one foot in diameter. Has tiny oval leaves on crooked stalks.

Thistle has beautiful, round purple flower heads; leaves are prickly.

Spring A Rama at Woodfield

Spring A Rama, a display on the Grand Court at Woodfield Shopping Center through Saturday, will supply ideas on the best ways to keep your lawn green and weed free as well as ideas for a family vacation this summer.

Displaying information will be the Wisconsin campgrounds; Ontana Lake Manchester, just north of the Wisconsin Dells; Tempo 21, the lawn beautiful people; Century Rain Aid Corporation (irrigation specialists), and Weber Barbecue.

THERE IS a new BlueBird Lawn Comber available for the homeowner's spring lawn sweeping chores. The catcher-equipped BlueBird is built for rugged use and features a heavy duty eight cubic foot foldable polypropylene catcher, separate platform of light but strong A.B.S., unilever height adjustment and rotor disengaging clutch. The separate platform stays attached to the machine when you empty the catcher, making a light load to lift. The new BlueBird comber is available for rental at Suburban Rental Co., Arlington Heights.

'Immediate action' urged in air safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pilots and flight controllers tend to ignore storms near the ground they would dodge in the air. Sometimes the results are catastrophic, a federal safety board said Thursday.

Citing four landing approach crashes that killed 246 people, the National Transportation Safety Board said some corrective steps have been taken by the Federal Aviation Administration but many recommendations have been ignored.

"More positive and more immediate actions are necessary," the board said.

It recommended that the FAA adopt 14 specific measures, from more pilot and controller training to installation of equipment to warn of dangerous turbulence near airports.

IT ALSO REVIVED a 1974 recommendation, rejected then by the FAA but favored by the Professional Air Traffic Control Organization, that controllers be allowed to deny landing or takeoff clearances because of storms.

The board's action was prompted by the Eastern Air Lines Boeing 727 crash at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport that killed 113 persons last June 24. The jet, pushed down by storm winds, hit the runway approach lights.

The board noted that pilots detour at least 20 miles around storm cells at cruising altitude, and said that in landing "there appears to be a tendency . . . to let the desire for an uninterrupted flow of traffic interfere with an objective evaluation of the hazard potential of approaches through or under thunderstorms.

"Consequently, approaches are being conducted through these hazardous conditions during what is perhaps the most critical phase of flight."

THE BOARD recommended new storm research and the prompt development of equipment to measure storm violence within 6 miles of major runways and show wind direction and speed within one mile of runways.

Until then, it said, the FAA should require lighted windsocks about 1,000 feet from the end of major runways and instruments to measure surface wind speed at the end of runways.

The board said problems similar to those at JFK were found in a 1972 crash at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., of an Eastern Air Lines DC9 that injured three persons; the 1973 crash at St. Louis of an Ozark Air Lines FH27 that killed 37; and the 1974 crash at Pago Pago, Samoa, of a Pan Am Boeing 707 that killed 96.

Option to buy site for historical society urged

Des Plaines City Council committee will recommend the city take out an option to purchase a site at 791 Graceland Ave. for $135,000 for use by the Des Plaines Historical Society.

The society now is located in the old Kinder House, 777 Lee St., but has been told it must vacate the property later this year to make way for a new drive-in facility for the Des Plaines Federal Savings and Loan Assn.

If the site is purchased by the city, the historical society plans to move the Kinder House to the property.

MAYOR HERBERT H. Behrel estimates it will cost the city and historical society at least $210,000 to purchase the land, excavate and install a foundation and move the Kinder House to the property.

The city council's buildings, grounds and parking lots committee, he said, will recommend the city take out an option and put down earnest money for the site, but will stop short of recommending the purchase of the building. The option would be for 90 days.

"We want a little time to decide how we're going to pay for this thing because we've got financing problems," Behrel said. "The question is how do we raise the balance of the money without taking it out of the coffers of the city? That's something that will have to be discussed."

Historical society officials have said they would hold fundraisers to obtain some of the needed money, but Behrel said they could not raise the money without help. He said soliciting donations may be one way of raising some of the money.

RICHARD WELCH, historical society museum director, said he considered applying for a federal grant to pay for the project, but that none are available at this time.

He said although there is a question of how the property and relocation costs will be paid, he is pleased at the committee's recommendation.

"I'm just very happy that they're finally moving on this," he said. "We're interested in finding a permanent home for the historical society."

In recommending the city take out an option on the Graceland Avenue property, which is owned by William L. Kunkel and Co., 734 Lee St., the committee has rejected two other sites they had considered for use by the historical society.

The other sites were the old post office, Graceland Avenue and Ellinwood Street, and the old city hall, Miner Street and Graceland Avenue. Welch said any of the sites would be acceptable to the historical society.

Behrel said he believes a majority of aldermen now favor razing the old city hall to provide additional parking for the Des Plaines Civic Center.

The old structure, built in 1937, has been the subject of controversy for more than a year because some officials and residents favor its demolition, while others want it preserved for use as a historical museum and community center.

Truckers here roll; talks go on

by LEA TONKIN

Chicago area truck drivers are expected to stay on the job today as contract talks continue in Arlington Heights between Teamster union negotiators and industry negotiators.

Labor Sec. William J. Usery Jr., continuing his efforts to reach a national contract agreement, said Thursday that "the time is fast approaching to make a decision on the Taft-Hartley Act." Under Taft-Hartley the President can call for an 80-day cooling off period to halt the strike.

"There still are some wide differences of opinion. I assume if we don't reach an agreement we're in for several days of strikes, but it could change at any time," Usery said. "The overriding issue will soon become to protect the American public."

THE 400,000 TEAMSTERS represented at Arlington Heights haul 60 per cent of the nation's manufactured goods. The auto, steel, beer, bread, food and gasoline industries were likely to be immediately affected.

There was speculation Usery might leave today, bringing an effective end to the current talks and opening the way to federal action.

Meanwhile, an auto industry spokesman said Thursday that a prolonged strike would force a complete shutdown of the auto industry within a week, idling more than 700,000 workers in the United States and Canada.

Interruption of raw materials, particularly steel, and some of the 15,000 parts needed to assemble a modern automobile was felt immediately at some operations. The major effects, however, would not be felt until Monday.

THE STATES OF Michigan and Ohio would be hardest hit by auto plant shutdowns. More than 350,000 auto workers are employed in Michigan and another 125,000 work in Ohio facilities.

Industry analysts warned that a lengthy strike could cripple the industry's slow recovery from a two-year slump.

Automakers plan to build more than 2.4 million cars in the April-June quarter — the most since 1973 — to meet the strengthening spring demand for new cars.

'Body and Soul' film at Oakton Friday

"Body and Soul," the 1947 film starring John Garfield and Lili Palmer, will be shown Friday by the Oakton Community College Film Society.

The film, one in a series funded by Oakton's Board of Student Affairs, will begin at 8:15 p.m. in Building 6 on campus, 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove. Admission is free to students. A 50-cent donation is asked of others.

Don't get too smug—a big snowfall is still possible

by JILL BETTNER

The capricious whims of the biggest prankster of them all — Old Man Winter — has taught most Northwest suburbanites never to be too smug when the first signs of spring appear.

Like a temperamental star not content to see the curtain come down after a commanding three- or four-month run, he often blusters back for just one more moment of glory and captures center stage with an unexpected blizzard — the bigger the better.

It was exactly one year ago today a sudden and violent storm dumped nearly a foot of white stuff on the Northwest suburbs, snarling traffic and stranding hundreds in offices and shopping centers overnight. Four died as a result of the storm.

IF THE WEATHER HOLDS, with

temperatures hovering around the lower 40s, the odds are that we'll have nothing worse than rain and a few flurries this spring. However, even the forecasters for the National Weather Service refuse to guarantee we won't have at least one more white whopper.

"I wouldn't wager anything on that," said forecaster James Buchanan. "It's really hard to tell. In April, we can still get one or two snows. It would have to get a little bit colder and we would need a low pressure area moving through the Chicago area."

Buchanan said there is no snow in the forecast for at least the next four days, but that's about as far ahead as the agency can predict.

The weather service was right on the button last year with advance warnings of the April 2 storm that started about noontime and steadily gained momentum the rest of the afternoon.

TRAVELERS AT O'Hare Airport slept curled up on benches or stretched out on the floor in the terminals. It was more than 24 hours before the airport, closed for only the third time in history, was back in full operation again.

Besides mere inconvenience, however, the storm also caused its share of tragedy. In Wheeling, a three-year-old boy wandered outside at the height of the storm while his brother slept. Hours later the boy was dead of exposure. He was just one of four area persons whose deaths were directly attributed to the blizzard.

The National Weather Service called the blizzard the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967, when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

The Great Storm of '67 was one of those once-in-a-lifetime experiences. Almost everyone affected by the big snow remembers where he was and what he was doing when it hit — and tells his experience every time it snows.

With a little luck during the rest of the fickle month of April, maybe all the out-of-town friends and relatives who know our tales by heart won't have to listen to them again until next fall.

Aftermath of the storm last April 2. Will there be an encore?

Ice cream parlor builder urged to meet residents

The developer of a proposed ice cream parlor and restaurant at 802 W. Lincoln Ave., Des Plaines, has been asked to meet with residents of the area in an attempt to eliminate their objections to the project.

Ald Joseph Szabo, Ist. chairman of the city council's municipal development committee, said officials met with the Friendly Ice Cream Corp., Wilbraham, Mass., but decided to make no recommendation until a representative of the firm meets with the objectors.

"We told them to go back to the people and try to make peace," he said. "I think there are several things they could do that might make it more attractive to the residents. It's a nice building, it looks residential."

Kenneth G. Meyer, attorney for the developer, was unavailable Thursday to comment on when the company would meet with residents.

IN PETITIONS signed by 121 persons, residents said the ice cream parlor and restaurant will create traffic congestion, decrease property values, attract rodents, create additional noise and be a general nuisance.

Residents said they are not opposed to the commercial zoning of the property, but believe there already are too many restaurants in the area. The property is at the northeast corner of Lincoln Avenue and Elmhurst Road.

Michael Richardson, city director of planning and zoning, said the property already has the proper zoning, but that a special-use permit is needed in order to operate a restaurant.

The plan commission and zoning board of appeals in reports to the city council recommended the request be denied. Officials said besides causing an increase in traffic, they believe the project does not meet the city's special-use requirements.

Experimental theater talk

Experimental theater in Chicago is the topic of Friday's session of the "Who is Chicago?" artists' lecture-performance series at Oakton Community College.

Members of the Wisdom Bridge Theater Co. will perform selected scenes from their current production, "The Wizard of ID," and discuss Chicago's climate for experimental theater from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in Building 3, Room 308 on the Oakton campus, 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove.

All sessions are open to the public. For information, call 967-5120, ext. 244.

Clearbrook benefit

Clearbrook Center of Rolling Meadows will sponsor a dinner dance April 24 at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel. Cocktails will be served at 5:30 p.m., dinner at 7:30 p.m. and the dance will follow. The Rolling Meadows Jazz Band will perform.

Tickets are $20 a person, with proceeds going to the center. Call 255-0120 for information.

City census next week of annexed land

Des Plaines will begin a special census next week of recently-annexed areas that is expected to make the city eligible for more than $42,000 annually in additional tax revenue.

City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach said the special census probably will begin Tuesday after officials from the U.S. Census Bureau test and train prospective census takers. The census, which will cost an estimated $1,470, is expected to take about a week.

Mrs. Rohrbach said four or five of the 10 persons that applied will be hired as census takers. They will be paid 13 cents a name.

CITY OFFICIALS estimate the city has added about 2,000 residents since the 1970 census when the city's population was 57,239.

Most of the city's additional population is in a residential area near Oakton and Elmhurst roads, several apartment complexes near Elmhurst and Algonquin roads, two trailer parks on Rand Road and a trailer park near Mount Prospect and Higgins roads.

The additional funds would come to the city in the form of state income taxes, state motor fuel taxes and possibly federal revenue-sharing funds. The funds are disbursed to the city based on its population. The population figures, however, must be verified by a federal census.

City Comptroller Duane Bletz said if the population is verified, the city would receive about $21,000 in additional state income tax and about $21,000 in motor fuel taxes.

Mrs. Rohrbach said if the census goes as planned, the results should be available by July.

City officials rejected a proposal to delay the census until the summer so that college students home for vacation could be counted. Michael Richardson, city director of planning and zoning, said the effect of students would be minimal.

Something very fishy about area's Suburban Aquarists

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Most people who love fish go to extremes. They either gush over Friday fish fry specials or resort to raising something like 10,000 exotic pet fish.

Then there are people like Troy Benson, who does both.

Benson is president of the Suburban Aquarists Society, a Mount Prospect-based group of about 100 area residents, many of whom are fanatics about raising and breeding fish, and most of them have no reservations about eating fish as part of a regular diet.

SOME OF THE more enthusiastic members name each of their pet fish and talk to them when it's feeding or tank-cleaning time. Others display their prize pets in odd-shaped fish bowls built into coffee tables, lamps or room dividers.

The organization, started in 1961, has become a focal point for those with a diversified interest in fish collections.

Most of Benson's 10,000 pet fish, for instance, are angel and catfish which are kept in about 25 tanks placed throughout the first floor of his home. One of the largest tanks holds 160 gallons of water and is 8 feet long and 2 feet high, he said.

It's a chore raising that many fish — feeding them two to five times each day (depending on the kind of fish), cleaning the water every day, and completely cleaning the tanks every six months.

SOMETIMES THE tanks burst from the pressure and both fish and water end up on the living room floor, he said. It is a necessity to constantly watch the tanks, the water and the fish for a change in conditions or a change in their health.

So why even bother with the hobby? Why not just raise one or two common goldfish in a bowl and be satisfied?

"It's a challenge to grow and breed them. It's a good hobby and it's fun for the kids. I came home one day about 20 years ago from a fishing trip with some live fish and tried to keep them going for a while," Benson said.

"When they got too big, I just got some little ones and one thing led to another. I guess they make quiet, easy going pets," he said.

AND IF THERE'S one thing Benson knows for sure about fish after all this, it's that they are anything but dumb.

"You can train a fish to do tricks. I hold food out over their tanks and they jump out of the water, even over a stick or through a hoop, to grab it," Benson said.

"They can see me coming down the stairs into the room to feed them," he said. "They stick their noses to the glass and wag their fins back and forth wildly. They know what's going on."

Benson is hardly alone in his doting over fish. Fish lovers from the Northwest suburbs, Chicago, as far northwest as Rockford and as far southwest as Downers Grove, meet monthly to exchange tales.

THE GROUP meets every fourth Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Mount Prospect Country Club, 600 S. See-Gwen Ave., and requests a family membership of $10 a year ($8 for senior and $4 for junior members).

A lecture or movie pertaining to fish is always followed by the auctioning of members' fish at the monthly events.

The society offers a host of year-round social activities which include an area-wide fish auction that usually attracts more than 200 persons and provides an exchange of at least 3,000 fish, Benson said.

Most of the members exchange fish and work together on breeding techniques. Others merely study fish without every raising any.

MEMBERS WHO raise or breed fish can spend from about $80 to several thousands of dollars in one year for supplies and equipment, he said.

"A fish can cost you from about 10 cents for the common, domestic goldfish to about $300,000 for an Oriental Koi fish that has identical scale patterns on either of its sides," Benson said.

It can be a hobby or it can be a full-time job, but it is tied with photography as the most popular pastime in this country today, he said.

The hobby is as pleasurable for senior citizens as it is for teens whose interest can eventually lead them to a lifetime profession.

KEITH PETERSON, 15, of Des Plaines, said he has filled 12 tanks with fish in four years, and plans to major in ichthyology, the study of fish, in college.

He can identify everything from a quick reproducing guppy to a Lion fish with poisonous spines. He can tell you if a fish is cannibalistic or if its life expectancy is 10 or 20 years.

What Keith can't explain as easily is why he dreams about working in a Florida fish farm, researching and breeding fish.

"I just enjoy studying them," Keith said. "I think it's just one way of studying life and what is going on in the world around us. I guess it's what ever turns you on."

Eight seeking 3 seats on Oakton board

Eight candidates are running for three 3-year seats on the Oakton Community College board.

THE CANDIDATES: Incumbents Paul Gilson, Raymond Hartstein and Thomas Flynn. Newcomers John J. Prochaska III, Janet Juckett, Stanley Harris, Bruce M. Friedman, and Ira Charles Feldman.

ENDORSEMENTS: None.

THE ISSUES: Oakton Community College, now in its sixth year, is preparing to build a permanent campus in Des Plaines, the far western corner of the district. The issue has been raised whether Oakton needs to acquire a second permanent campus for the eastern end of the district or if it should continue to operate satellite learning centers in churches and schools throughout the district.

Last month, North Shore high school districts defeated a referendum to establish a community college for that area. The question has been raised whether Oakton should encourage these districts to annex.

During the March primary campaign, Gov. Daniel Walker challenged the role of the community college, saying they were padding enrollments by offering too many "frill" courses such as cooking, painting and seminars. He also said colleges should prepare for the declining enrollment that has already hit some secondary schools.

In the area of curriculum, questions have been raised about Oakton's "no fail" method of grading and its "cluster concept" — where teachers are grouped according to teaching methods rather than subject areas. There are four clusters ranging from independent study to a more traditional structured classroom approach.

The Oakton faculty has chosen not to have tenure and teachers are paid on a merit basis, based on evaluations from students, other teachers, and administrators — a system some say needs to be changed.

Feldman seeks to unify board

Ira Charles Feldman wants the Oakton Community College Board of Trustees to lose its polarization by township and become a unified board devoted to a single goal — the good of the college students.

"To divide the board on a township basis inevitably is to the loss of both townships," he said. "I would hope the other candidates and board members will be mature enough to realize the problems are the same for both."

Feldman, 28, of 1425 Ashland Ave., Des Plaines, is an attorney.

Feldman views Oakton as "a grassroots institution for learning. I hope it can handle both the baccalaureate candidate as well as the vocational education students." He said he prefers to stress the vocational education programs because that is the

Ira Charles Feldman

"shift in society today. Oakton should accommodate that change."

He said he also believes in "a structured education. Students coming in need guidance with latitude."

On other issues:

• Adult education. "The community college, as a grassroots movement, should offer many diversified courses."

• Enrollment. He said the current enrollment growth "reflects greater confidence of the community" in the Oakton programs. He said the current planning is "well considered" and Oakton is "not overextending itself."

• Satellite campus. "The Des Plaines campus should be the hub of the wheel and the satellites, the spokes. There's a certain identity function the college should serve." He said the satellite sites should be set up similar to the adult education program with classes held in convenient locations in addition to the central campus.

Friedman: structured program needed

A more structured program at Oakton Community College is the goal of Bruce Friedman, board of trustees candidate.

"I am concerned about a trend in education where I see a breakdown in structure. I still feel the need for some structure. Students should have some say about their curriculum, but the administration should provide guidance and pose limitations for students."

Friedman, 29, of 6852 Kilbourn, Lincolnwood, is a lawyer with Crowley, Barrett and Karaba, Chicago.

HE SAID A community college has a different role than a four-year university.

"The community college should turn out people who can contribute to the community," he said.

Friedman said he believes the college should fill a gap for students who can't afford to go to a four-year university or don't want a straight academic program.

"I feel the vocational education area is an area that will become increasingly important. Churning people out with liberal arts education without roles for them to fill is not an efficient use of our resources," he said.

On other issues:

• Adult education: Friedman supports the continuing education curriculum. "We must offer courses to those seeking further education."

Those out in the job market are the ones supporting the school."

• Enrollment: He said the college should "use prudence so we don't overbuild," but he foresees Oakton having the type of declining enrollment hitting elementary and high school districts because of the number of adults enrolled.

• Satellite campuses: "I don't think an eastern site for the sake of an eastern site is good. We should expand on the site we have." He said if the school must expand onto a second campus, it should be in the eastern section of the district. "Niles East High School would be a reasonable spot for that," he said. Friedman said the Des Plaines campus should be the center of Oakton activities because "students will find a certain identity in the central campus." He would keep adult education at the scattered sites currently used.

Hartstein hopes to nurture growth

The desire to help Oakton Community College continue to grow and provide maximum services to residents convinced Raymond Hartstein to seek a third 3-year term on the board.

"I would hate to have our school go down the drain after we've put so much effort into building a healthy base," he said.

Hartstein, 55, of 4639 Elm Ter., Skokie, is director of personnel and industrial relations for Brunswick Corp.

He said the board needs experienced members who can deal with the problems of constructing a permanent campus, applying for state funding and changing state limitations on the type of programs offered.

HE ALSO WOULD like to see Oakton become part of "a total educational system," and views "every institution related to the other from elementary school through college."

"We have to realize that the person in elementary school will soon be in college," he said. "To know where we are going as far as programs, enrollment and finances are concerned, we must have articulation and better communication between the districts."

He also wants Oakton to become "a total cultural center. In the North suburbs we have to build a focal point for culture."

On other issues:

• Adult Education. "Our student body is changing, which means we must change our curriculum and methods of teaching. We have to be flexible, adaptable and alert to the needs of the community." He said Oakton has an obligation to offer courses for all members of the community.

• Enrollment. The number of high school students entering Oakton has been increasing every year since Oakton opened, Hartstein said. "The college costs are so prohibitive today, that more than 50 per cent of students enrolled in college in Illinois are in community colleges. Our college reaches all ages, all types of persons, all occupations, all incomes." He said this enrollment is going to continue to increase as more adults, senior citizens and women enroll.

• Satellite campus. "We have to provide additional satellite campuses right now. I visualize eventually that the permanent campus will be crowded." He said a second campus might be set up in addition to the class centers throughout the Oakton area. He also favors using empty schools in the area for classes.

• Annexation of the North Shore area. "We're open to talk to anybody" from that area, he said. "The citizens of the area must take the action, not us."

Flynn: 2nd site a must

Tom Flynn is seeking a second term on the Oakton Community College Board of Trustees to ensure the construction of the permanent campus, which he fears might be jeopardized by a new board.

"There is a question about that site again," Flynn said, referring to the permanent campus in Des Plaines. He said he is concerned that if the make-up of the board changes and a large number of members are elected from the eastern end of the district, the board might vote to drop its construction plans.

Flynn, 40, of 8223 Oconto, Niles, is an attorney.

FLYNN VIEWS community colleges as "the most important segment of higher education in the State of Illinois."

He said the expansion of the college programs during the past seven years is "excellent." Flynn said he is pleased with the progress of the vocational education programs at Oakton.

Flynn said the college has done well considering its current quarters "in a factory."

On other issues:

• Adult education. He said the adult continuing education program is needed.

"It is necessary. The people have a right to that type of service," he said.

Thomas Flynn

He said he pushed for the expansion of the foreign language program to include Polish, Hebrew and Italian because it reflects the ethnic background of the community, and is pleased with its success.

• Enrollment. He said enrollment will continue to increase because more students are using the college to get their first two years of higher education. He said it also serves as a training ground for people whose "professions are drying up." Flynn also said the women's education programs will continue to grow.

"I envision our student population doubling in a couple of years, which will mean we will outgrow our Des Plaines campus."

• Satellite campuses. Flynn would like Oakton to set up "many scattered sites to reach people where they are comfortable. I strongly urge considering Niles East High School as a classroom facility."

• North Shore annexation. I don't think it is any of our business to go and solicit their business. The people there did not want to join Oakton."

• Grading system. "I trust the teachers enough to say they should have a choice" of failing a student. "Failure used responsibly is a good tool." However, Flynn supported the current system that permits students to retake a course rather than fail because all students cannot complete a course in three months."

Harris sites experience

Stanley Harris views his background as a former junior college student and teacher as an asset as he tries for a position on the Oakton Community College Board of Trustees.

As president of the Placement Assn. of Community colleges and Employers of Illinois, he said he has "had to stick my nose into the whole community college system."

Harris, 60, of 6956 N. Kolmar, Lincolnwood, approves of the current administration, but has some "reservations about what I have seen."

He said the administration is trying to give students a voice about how the school is run, but he questions if students want that role.

He also criticized the "permissiveness" he sees in Oakton's administration.

He would like to implement a stronger guidance system for students.

On other issues:

• Adult Education: Harris says part of Oakton's strength lies in its adult education program. "Something like MONACEP (Maine, Oakton, Niles, Adult and Continuing Education Program) has to carry its own weight. A school also has a much better chance to develop a good relationship with the community" if it offers a variety of courses beyond straight academics. "Oakton is trying as fast as it can to offer the programs we want."

• Enrollment: "The part-time student is the big element now and they certainly will expand" the enrollment. He said because of this trend "it's near impossible to project the number of older people who are returning to school," unlike the elementary and high school districts that "can more accurately project their future enrollment."

• Satellite campuses: "There is no question that Oakton must go this way." He said he does not envision a complete second campus, but rather a second location with a substantial number of offerings. The biggest detriment to having a second full campus is finding a site that is large enough, he said.

• Annexation of the North Shore area: "Oakton has been courting that area for many years without success. I don't think we should seek it — make them beg." He said if the North Shore does annex, it would provide Oakton with several sites for a second campus.

• Grading system: Harris agrees with the current system that permits a student who is failing a course to satisfactorily complete the class work. "What's the value of passing on a failure" in a student's records, he said.

Harris supervisor of public relations and training for Teletype Corp., Skokie.

Juckett wants equal representation

"I have a definite interest in community colleges. They are playing a more important role than ever," said Janet Juckett, Oakton Community College Board of Trustees candidate.

She said the current board "representation is unbalanced. It's a 5-to-2 ratio to the eastern end of the district." Mrs. Juckett, 44, of 1823 W. Crescent, Park Ridge, said she wants to bring representation onto the board from the district's western end.

She said the top priority for a community college is the two-year student headed to a four-year school.

"We definitely need to help these kids in their first two years," she said.

Mrs. Juckett said the Des Plaines campus site is "very good. I think that we have — or will have — transportation there."

On other issues, Mrs. Juckett said:

• Adult Education. "A vocational education program is extremely important. Senior citizens and housewives also like to continue their education."

• Enrollment: "I don't see the junior college declining in enrollment. I think there will be more people going back to school, more 40-to 50-year-olds looking for extra training," which will make up for any decline in students attending their first two years of college at Oakton.

• Satellite campus: "There should be limited satellite campuses. I realize the (Des Plaines) site is at the western end of the district. Satellite campuses are certainly something very worthwhile. It would enhance the community college because it would reach more people."

• North Shore annexation: "I don't feel this is such a good idea. I think it would put an extreme burden on what we already have. If they want a community college they should do as we have done and strike out on their own."

• Grading system. She thinks Oakton should drop the "no-fail" system. "The fact you can never fail at anything is ridiculous. Out in the world people fail and have to pick up to carry on. I feel competition is everywhere."

I can be helpful: Gilson

"I think during the next three years, the board is in a crucial position of building a $20 million campus. I have experience for this," said Paul Gilson as he tries for a third 3-year term on the Oakton Community College Board of Trustees.

Gilson said his background as an engineer and government employee is an "essential" element for the board. He also served as chairman of the site committee in selecting the permanent campus site in Des Plaines.

Gilson, 52, of 7541 N. Keystone, Skokie, is director of the Energy Conservation Program, Federal Energy Administration-Midwest Region.

"The site was not my first choice," he said. "The community deserves a central site. But we fought grueling battles" to get a site. "I'm proud I got the board to accept this site."

On other issues, Gilson said:

• Adult Education: The adult and continuing education program is "essential" because it fulfills the needs of many in the community. He said this area will grow as more adults "take on the responsibility of updating" their education in their field. "Whatever the community needs, we should offer."

• Enrollment: "We'll always be crammed to the gills. The average age of our students is growing higher every year. We're attracting people. He said the women's program is growing as well as programs geared to the working community. Gilson said the number of students coming to Oakton for their first two years of college also is growing as "more can't afford to leave home."

• Satellite campus: "I am trying to locate centers throughout the district" for holding classes other than the Des Plaines campus. "Niles East High School is very improbable as a second campus because it has no parking. The college also is dedicated to giving classes where the community wants them." He said he does not "see the need to build a complete second campus because of all the education facilities available."

Building cash top need: Prochaska

John J. Prochaska III is trying for the fourth time to gain a seat on the Oakton Community College Board of Trustees. He ran unsuccessfully for a board position in the last three campaigns.

Prochaska, 31, 504 N. Redfield Ct., Park Ridge, refused to be interviewed by The Herald.

In a press release, he said he wants to make sure state government funds its "73 per cent obligation of capital construction" towards the Des Plaines permanent campus. The Illinois Capital Development Board has discussed withholding $1.7 million in construction funds already approved for the college. College officials are negotiating to have the money reinstated.

HE SAID A satellite campus program also should be developed in Niles Township through "renting facilities that are not expected to be fully utilized."

Prochaska also supports having high school seniors enroll in Oakton academic programs to receive advanced placement when they enter college.

"The stress on vocational education at Oakton should be tempered to include an adequate base for future career education," he said. "Graduating Oakton students should be encouraged to learn while they earn."

Prochaska is an adult supervisor for the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, a certified public accountant and a certified internal auditor.

'Immediate action' urged in air safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pilots and flight controllers tend to ignore storms near the ground they would dodge in the air. Sometimes the results are catastrophic, a federal safety board said Thursday.

Citing four landing approach crashes that killed 246 people, the National Transportation Safety Board said some corrective steps have been taken by the Federal Aviation Administration but many recommendations have been ignored.

"More positive and more immediate actions are necessary," the board said.

It recommended that the FAA adopt 14 specific measures, from more pilot and controller training to installation of equipment to warn of dangerous turbulence near airports.

IT ALSO REVIVED a 1974 recommendation, rejected then by the FAA but favored by the Professional Air Traffic Control Organization, that controllers be allowed to deny landing or takeoff clearances because of storms.

The board's action was prompted by the Eastern Air Lines Boeing 727 crash at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport that killed 113 persons last June 24. The jet, pushed down by storm winds, hit the runway approach lights.

The board noted that pilots detour at least 20 miles around storm cells at cruising altitude, and said that in landing "there appears to be a tendency . . . to let the desire for an uninterrupted flow of traffic interfere with an objective evaluation of the hazard potential of approaches through or under thunderstorms.

"Consequently, approaches are being conducted through these hazardous conditions during what is perhaps the most critical phase of flight."

THE BOARD recommended new storm research and the prompt development of equipment to measure storm violence within 6 miles of major runways and show wind direction and speed within one mile of runways.

Until then, it said, the FAA should require lighted windsocks about 1,000 feet from the end of major runways and instruments to measure surface wind speed at the end of runways.

The board said problems similar to those at JFK were found in a 1972 crash at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., of an Eastern Air Lines DC9 that injured three persons; the 1973 crash at St. Louis of an Ozark Air Lines FH27 that killed 37; and the 1974 crash at Pago Pago, Samoa, of a Pan Am Boeing 707 that killed 96.

Parks want 'gift' code, but won't pay lawsuit fees

Wheeling Park District officials have asked village trustees to reconsider a decision to drop a proposed village ordinance requiring developers to make land and cash donations to park and school districts.

Village trustees said they will drop plans for the ordinance unless park and school districts agree to pay any resulting legal fees. In a letter to village officials, Park District Atty. Roger Bjorvik said although the park board wants the ordinance, it cannot agree to pay the costs of any possible lawsuits resulting from the new law.

Bjorvik said "it would be impossible" for the park district to pay legal fees when park officials would have "absolutely no control over the decision" on whether to take part in a lawsuit. He said several communities in the Chicago area have passed or considered passing similar ordinances without that requirement.

"IT HAS APPARENTLY been thought that it is the municipality's function to provide the planning expertise and the techniques for the preservation of space in the community in connection with future development," he said.

Bjorvik said a similar ordinance passed by the City of Naperville is being challenged by developers in the 2nd District Illinois Appellate Court, Elgin.

"If the case is upheld, then all similar ordinances would be valid and most likely would not be attacked by developers. If the (Illinois) Supreme Court reverses the decision then necessarily all similar ordinances would be unconstitutional and would most likely be repealed," he said.

The proposed Wheeling ordinance would require developers to donate 5.5 acres for recreational purposes for every 1,000 persons brought into the village. The ordinance would also require cash or land donations to school districts, based on the number of pupils who would live in the new developments.

Parks and Wheeling-Butte Grove Dist. 21 officials said they would be willing to pay court costs on any lawsuits up to only the value of the property involved. The village wants assurances that the districts will support legal battles, no matter what the costs.

Village Atty. John Burke has told village trustees they should be prepared for lawsuits if the ordinance is approved.

Taxi operator urges village to add cab licenses

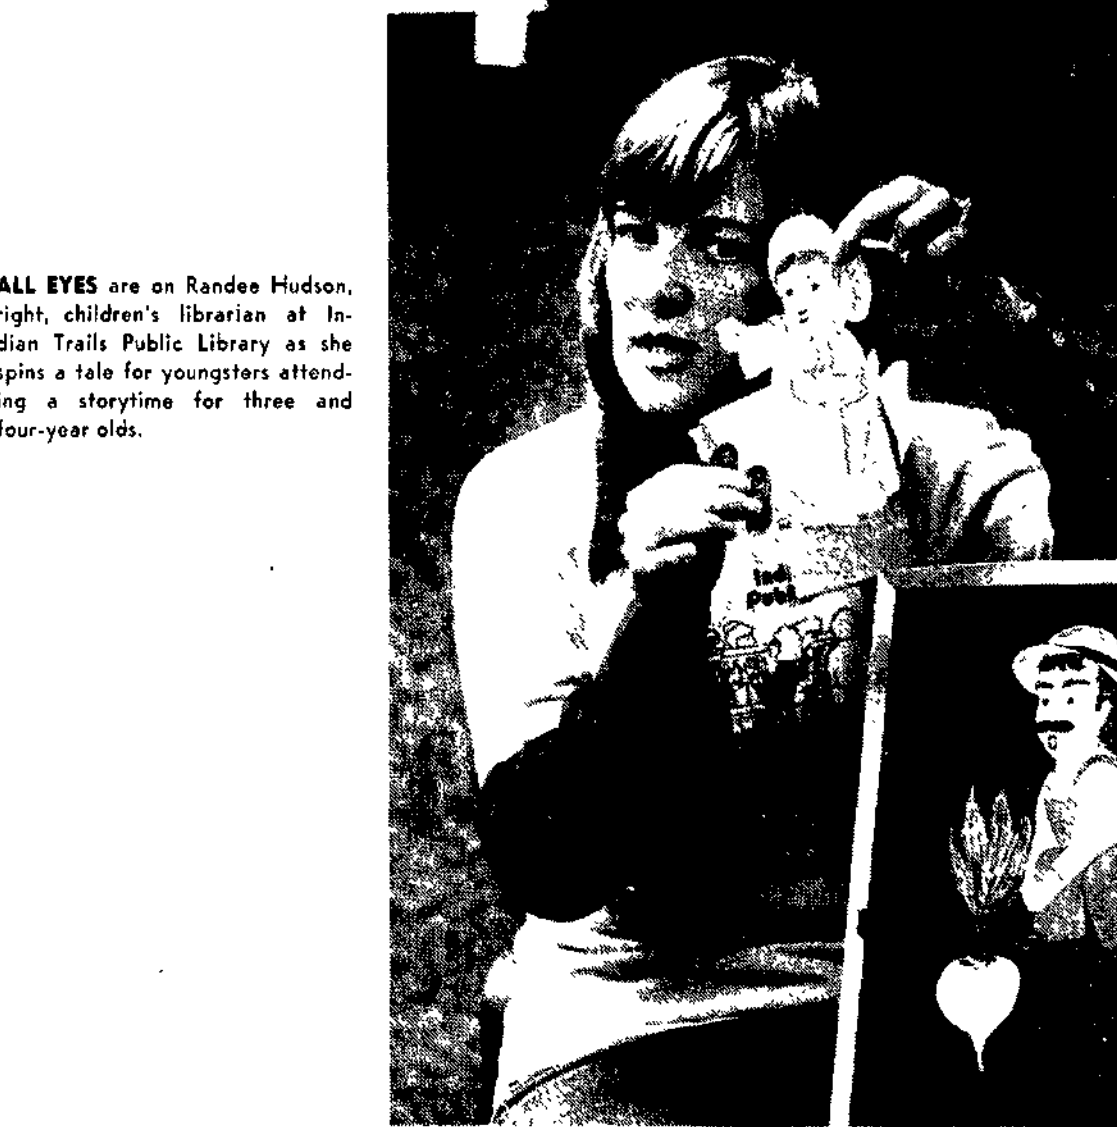

The owner of a taxi company seeking to operate in Wheeling has urged village officials to increase the number of taxi licenses to give "residents a better shake."

James Beck, a co-owner of American Taxi Co., Glenview, Tuesday said that a second cab company in the village would improve taxi service for residents.

"If we thought residents were receiving good taxi service, we wouldn't bother to come in here," he said.

Beck said his company would like to operate three cabs on a full-time basis in the village. The village currently issues five taxi licenses, which are held by one firm, the Wheeling Village Cab Co.

ROBERT BIRKS, owner of Wheeling Village Cab, said he disputed (Continued on Page 5)

by LEA TONKIN

Chicago area truck drivers are expected to stay on the job today as contract talks continue in Arlington Heights between Teamster union negotiators and industry negotiators.

Labor Sec. William J. Usery Jr., continuing his efforts to reach a national contract agreement, said Thursday that "the time is fast approaching to make a decision on the Taft-Hartley Act." Under Taft-Hartley the President can call for an 80-day cooling off period to halt the strike.

"There still are some wide differences of opinion. I assume if we don't reach an agreement we're in for several days of strikes, but it could change at any time," Usery said. "The overriding issue will soon become to protect the American public."

THE 400,000 TEAMSTERS represented at Arlington Heights haul 60 per cent of the nation's manufactured goods. The auto, steel, beer, bread, food and gasoline industries were likely to be immediately affected.

There was speculation Usery might leave today, bringing an effective end to the current talks and opening the way to federal action.

Meanwhile, an auto industry spokesman said Thursday that a prolonged strike would force a complete shutdown of the auto industry within a week, idling more than 700,000 workers in the United States and Canada.

Interruption of raw materials, particularly steel, and some of the 15,000 parts needed to assemble a modern automobile was felt immediately at some operations. The major effects, however, would not be felt until Monday.

THE STATES OF Michigan and Ohio would be hardest hit by auto plant shutdowns. More than 350,000 auto workers are employed in Michigan and another 125,000 work in Ohio facilities.

Industry analysts warned that a lengthy strike could cripple the industry's slow recovery from a two-year slump.

Automakers plan to build more than 2.4 million cars in the April-June quarter — the most since 1973 — to meet the strengthening spring demand for new cars.

Don't get too smug—a big snowfall is still possible

by JILL BETTNER

The capricious whims of the biggest prankster of them all — Old Man Winter — has taught most Northwest suburbanites never to be too smug when the first signs of spring appear.

Like a temperamental star not content to see the curtain come down after a commanding three- or four-month run, he often blusters back for just one more moment of glory and captures center stage with an unexpected blizzard — the bigger the better.

It was exactly one year ago today a sudden and violent storm dumped nearly a foot of white stuff on the Northwest suburbs, snarling traffic and stranding hundreds in offices and shopping centers overnight. Four died as a result of the storm.

IF THE WEATHER HOLDS, with

temperatures hovering around the lower 40s, the odds are that we'll have nothing worse than rain and a few flurries this spring. However, even the forecasters for the National Weather Service refuse to guarantee we won't have at least one more white whopper.

"I wouldn't wager anything on that," said forecaster James Buchanan. "It's really hard to tell. In April, we can still get one or two snows. It would have to get a little bit colder and we would need a low pressure area moving through the Chicago area."

Buchanan said there is no snow in the forecast for at least the next four days, but that's about as far ahead as the agency can predict.

The weather service was right on the button last year with advance warnings of the April 2 storm that started about noon and steadily gained momentum the rest of the afternoon.

TRAVELERS AT O'Hare Airport slept curled up on benches or stretched out on the floor in the terminals. It was more than 24 hours before the airport, closed for only the third time in history, was back in full operation again.

Besides mere inconvenience, however, the storm also caused its share of tragedy. In Wheeling, a three-year-old boy wandered outside at the height of the storm while his brother slept. Hours later the boy was dead of exposure. He was just one of four area persons whose deaths were directly attributed to the blizzard.

The National Weather Service called the blizzard the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967, when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

The Great Storm of '67 was one of those once-in-a-lifetime experiences. Almost everyone affected by the big snow remembers where he was and what he was doing when it hit — and tells his experience every time it snows.

With a little luck during the rest of the fickle month of April, maybe all the out-of-town friends and relatives who know our tales by heart won't have to listen to them again until next fall.

Aftermath of the storm last April 2. Will there be an encore?

Township nixes funds for Bicentennial fest

The Wheeling Township Board of Auditors has turned down a request from Wheeling for $2,500 to fund village Bicentennial projects for the coming year.

Village officials said they would seek the $2,500 in township funds, originally donated to the Wheeling High School band for a trip to Brazil. The trip was later cancelled.

Township auditors decided to return the $2,500 to the township's general operating fund rather than give it to Wheeling, because the village recently had to purchase $7,646 of unsold tickets to Wheeling Bicentennial Night at the Medinah Shrine Circus. In fact, township officials laughed at the request.

WHEELING VILLAGE Trustee William Hein said he was "sorry to hear" about the township board's decision.

"If they base their conclusion on the circus ticket sales, that's their prerogative. I still feel the village is entitled to the money," he said.

HEIN SAID THE money had been

"earmarked" for the Wheeling High School Band and he thought the township "would try and help us out because we're trying to do something for the bicentennial."

"As far as I know, the village has never asked for money before. The township did give money to Prospect Heights and I don't see why they can't do the same for Wheeling," he said. Wheeling Township recently donated $1,000 to the Prospect Heights Bicentennial Commission.

Wheeling officials are seeking money to help fund Bicentennial projects in the upcoming year. The village board recently approved a $6,000 budget for the Bicentennial commission to pay for the June 20 Bicentennial parade and the July 4 fireworks display.

Funds for both projects originally were allocated in the commission's 1976 budget. The budget was depleted when the village was forced to purchase $7,646 worth of circus tickets to fulfill a commitment made by the commission.

Beck's statements about poor taxi service in the village. He said his taxis make between 200 and 300 runs a day in Wheeling with a response time of 10 to 15 minutes, "depending on the day."

Birks said he began service in Wheeling in 1968 when the "only other cab company left."

"We went on for years not making any money. The profit is not that great in the cab business and we're just now getting to the point where some money might be made," he said.

Birks said he believes it's "unfair" to allow a second taxi service in the village.

"We've worked to give the village good service. If Wheeling wants additional cabs, we'll give them what they need," he said.

TRUSTEE Otis L. Hedlund said a proposed village ordinance for licensing of taxi cabs sets no limits on the number of companies or cabs allowed to operate in the village. A current board resolution restricts taxi operation to one company and seven cabs. Hedlund said he is "not sure seven is the number of cabs we want to limit the village to."

Trustee John Cole said he has "no objection to more than one cab company operating in the village."

"I don't see where the number of cabs is a problem. The companies won't operate them if they're empty half the time," he said.

The proposed taxi ordinance will be discussed further at the April meeting of the judiciary and purchasing committee.

Health unit changes bylaws in attempt for recognition

The proposed private tri-county Health Systems Agency board of directors has adopted seven bylaw changes suggested by medical societies in an effort to be officially designated by April 9.

The three counties of Lake, Kane and McHenry have been grouped as a health service planning region by the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare. HEW officials are considering a private, nonprofit application for designation as the health planning agency for the area.

Four medical groups in Lake, Kane and McHenry counties had withdrawn support of the health agency application because they felt practicing physicians were under-represented on the 30-member health agency board.

BYLAW CHANGES recommended by officials of the Lake, Kane and McHenry county medical societies, and the Crescent Counties Foundation, a medical service review organization, and adopted by the proposed health agency board require:

- At least one practicing physician from each county on the health agency board.

- At least one physician on the membership committee.

- At least three physicians on each sub-area council to the health agency.

- One physician on the executive committee of the health agency board.

- Review and comment on physician nominees by the medical societies on the Crescent Counties Foundation.

The private group hopes to be designated by April 9. Roy Armstrong, a HEW official, indicated that the approval of the medical groups would be necessary for the designation.

A newly-formed coalition of health care providers submitted a list of bylaw changes they wanted at Thursday night's health agency meeting in Barrington.

HEALTH AGENCY board members said the new changes proposed were major structural changes in the health agency, and would require study in committee. The suggestions were taken under advisement by the health agency board.

HEW also had suggested that the board revise the application work program to reflect a $175,000 budget. The application is for $405,000, but HEW has indicated that only $175,000 will be available.

The Lake County Regional Planning Commission voted last week to oppose the private health agency application.

County board members testified to the planning commission that the private health agency would lack accountability. County board chairmen from the three counties had requested the power to appoint 10 of the 30-member board, and half of the membership committee which appoints the other 20 members.

The health agency made provisions for more government representation, but refused other county demands.

ARMSTRONG OF HEW said the federal department was pleased with the way the private group handled the demands from the county boards.

"We felt the health agency board acted in a reasonable and satisfactory manner. We realize there is a break-even point," Armstrong said.

The Lake County HEW committee is looking for a way the county can disannex from the three county area to form its own health planning agency, according to Committee Chairman Mariellen Sabato.

A special meeting of the health agency board will be held at 7 p.m. April 8 at Langendorf Park in Barrington. The purpose of the meeting is to elect officers, revise the work program and budget and revise personnel policies.

Officials vote to join area municipal unit

The Wheeling Township Board of Auditors has voted unanimously to join the Northwest Municipal Conference, a group formerly comprised of villages which has now opened its membership to townships.

The township will pay yearly dues of $282 based on 5 cents for each person living in unincorporated portions of the township.

$70,000 youth budget asked

William Heffernan, chairman of the Wheeling Township Committee on Youth, presented a youth budget of $70,000 for the next fiscal year to the board.

The budget recommends $45,500 for Omni-House; $13,000 for Shelter Inc.; $10,000 for Prospectus; and $1,500 for youth committee clerical and printing use.

Temporary assessor hired

Frank Stewart of 632 N. Hickory Ave., Arlington Heights, has been hired as deputy assessor for three months to help Township Assessor Marshall Theroux comply with new Cook County requirements for handling personal property assessments. Stewart's salary has not been set.

Township assessors must now prepare a file on each business operating in the township, including corporations and unincorporated businesses, and forward to the county an individual data card on each.

Theroux estimated some 3,000 businesses operate in Wheeling Township.

Juvenile court branch urged

A resolution to locate a branch of the Cook County 3rd District Juvenile Court in the Northwest suburbs was unanimously approved by the auditors.

Several villages and townships, including Barrington, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg, have passed similar resolutions asking for a suburban branch of the court, now located in Niles.

Parks seek money for football program

The Wheeling Park District Football Advisory Committee is seeking donations to cover the operating costs of the 1976 tackle football program.

A donation box will be placed in the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank building, 350 E. Dundee Rd., for contributions. Charles LaRocco, park district recreation coordinator, said the program needs about $1,500 to operate on a break-even basis.

LaRocco said more than 200 boys are expected to participate in the program. Registration fees will cover some of the total cost, he said. For further information, call 537-2222.

'Immediate action' urged in air safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pilots and flight controllers tend to ignore storms near the ground they would dodge in the air. Sometimes the results are catastrophic, a federal safety board said Thursday.

Citing four landing approach crashes that killed 246 people, the National Transportation Safety Board said some corrective steps have been taken by the Federal Aviation Administration but many recommendations have been ignored.

"More positive and more immediate actions are necessary," the board said.

It recommended that the FAA adopt 14 specific measures, from more pilot and controller training to installation of equipment to warn of dangerous turbulence near airports.

IT ALSO REVIVED a 1974 recommendation, rejected then by the FAA but favored by the Professional Air Traffic Control Organization, that controllers be allowed to deny landing or takeoff clearances because of storms.

The board's action was prompted by the Eastern Air Lines Boeing 727 crash at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport that killed 113 persons last June 24. The jet, pushed down by storm winds, hit the runway approach lights.

The board noted that pilots detour at least 20 miles around storm cells at cruising altitude, and said that in landing "there appears to be a tendency . . . to let the desire for an uninterrupted flow of traffic interfere with an objective evaluation of the hazard potential of approaches through or under thunderstorms.

"Consequently, approaches are being conducted through these hazardous conditions during what is perhaps the most critical phase of flight."

THE BOARD recommended new storm research and the prompt development of equipment to measure storm violence within 6 miles of major runways and show wind direction and speed within one mile of runways.

Until then, it said, the FAA should require lighted windsocks about 1,000 feet from the end of major runways and instruments to measure surface wind speed at the end of runways.

The board said problems similar to those at JFK were found in a 1972 crash at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., of an Eastern Air Lines DC9 that injured three persons; the 1973 crash at St. Louis of an Ozark Air Lines FH27 that killed 37; and the 1974 crash at Pago Pago, Samoa, of a Pan Am Boeing 707 that killed 96.

Village potential for 'hot growth' attracts banks

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

The growth potential, young residents and availability of open space in Buffalo Grove have made the village an attractive place for development of financial institutions.

With the recent opening of Home Federal Savings and Loan in the Plaza Verde Shopping Center, the village's residents now have a choice of banking at three savings and loans and two commercial banks. Representatives from the institutions say business is great, and growth is the biggest reason.

"We took extensive surveys and we discovered that Buffalo Grove is the hottest growing area in the state," said Raymond Sims, assistant manager at Home Federal.

JIM BELMONT of Irving Federal Savings and Loan, the first to locate in Buffalo Grove three years ago, agreed.

"The business here far exceeded our original projections," Belmont said. "I don't think we'll have the rapid growth we've had in the past few years, but I think we'll have enough to sustain all three savings and loans."

While all the representatives mentioned Buffalo Grove's rapid growth rate as the primary reason for locating there, the vacant land in the village also is a drawing card.

"Most open spaces are dwindling in other cities, but Buffalo Grove still has vacant land for development — it's a real plus," Sims said.

All five institutions reported a big increase in the number of mortgages and agreed that the economy seems to be picking up — at least in Buffalo Grove.

"WE'VE HAD A tremendous growth in the past 60 days," Belmont said. "We've even had to turn down (mortgage) requests from people who live outside the immediate Buffalo Grove area."

"There's definitely a large demand for mortgages," added George Miller of the Bank of Buffalo Grove. "People out here are moving into bigger houses all the time."

Banking business is healthy in the village, but the presidents of the financial institutions said they would like to see a larger commercial or industrial base develop in Buffalo Grove.

Miller said there was an increase in banks in neighboring Wheeling despite the smaller population growth rate, and cited its industrial base as the reason for the banking interest.

Jack Sharp of Buffalo National Bank said he would like to attract some industry to Buffalo Grove, and

Township roads gets 4.5% boost in 1976 budget

The Wheeling Township Highway Dept. budget has been set at $645,263 for fiscal 1976, an increase of approximately 4.5 per cent more than the current year's budget.

The township auditors approved the budget Tuesday. The projected tax rate is approximately 0.095 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation.

The highway budget was compiled with the 10.9 per cent over-all inflation rate during the past year, an anticipated over-all inflation rate of 7 per cent this year and continuing increased costs of petroleum-based

by JILL BETTNER

The capricious whims of the biggest prankster of them all — Old Man Winter — has taught most Northwest suburbanites never to be too smug when the first signs of spring appear.

Like a temperamental star not content to see the curtain come down after a commanding three- or four-month run, he often blusters back for just one more moment of glory and captures center stage with an unexpected blizzard — the bigger the better.

It was exactly one year ago today a sudden and violent storm dumped nearly a foot of white stuff on the Northwest suburbs, snarling traffic and stranding hundreds in offices and shopping centers overnight. Four died as a result of the storm.

IF THE WEATHER HOLDS, with

temperatures hovering around the lower 40s, the odds are that we'll have nothing worse than rain and a few flurries this spring. However, even the forecasters for the National Weather Service refuse to guarantee we won't have at least one more white whopper.

"I wouldn't wager anything on that," said forecaster James Buchanan. "It's really hard to tell. In April, we can still get one or two snows. It would have to get a little bit colder and we would need a low pressure area moving through the Chicago area."

Buchanan said there is no snow in the forecast for at least the next four days, but that's about as far ahead as the agency can predict.

The weather service was right on the button last year with advance warnings of the April 2 storm that started about noon and steadily gained momentum the rest of the afternoon.

TRAVELERS AT O'Hare Airport slept curled up on benches or stretched out on the floor in the terminals. It was more than 24 hours before the airport, closed for only the third time in history, was back in full operation again.

Besides mere inconvenience, however, the storm also caused its share of tragedy. In Wheeling, a three-year-old boy wandered outside at the height of the storm while his brother slept. Hours later the boy was dead of exposure. He was just one of four area persons whose deaths were directly attributed to the blizzard.

The National Weather Service called the blizzard the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967, when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

The Great Storm of '67 was one of those once-in-a-lifetime experiences. Almost everyone affected by the big snow remembers where he was and what he was doing when it hit — and tells his experience every time it snows.

With a little luck during the rest of the fickle month of April, maybe all the out-of-town friends and relatives who know our tales by heart won't have to listen to them again until next fall.

Aftermath of the storm last April 2. Will there be an encore?

Truckers here roll; talks go on

by LEA TONKIN

Chicago area truck drivers are expected to stay on the job today as contract talks continue in Arlington Heights between Teamster union negotiators and industry negotiators.

Labor Sec. William J. Usery Jr., continuing his efforts to reach a national contract agreement, said Thursday that "the time is fast approaching to make a decision on the Taft-Hartley Act." Under Taft-Hartley the President can call for an 80-day cooling off period to halt the strike.

"There still are some wide differences of opinion. I assume if we don't reach an agreement we're in for several days of strikes, but it could change at any time," Usery said. "The overriding issue will soon become to protect the American public."

THE 400,000 TEAMSTERS represented at Arlington Heights haul 60 per cent of the nation's manufactured goods. The auto, steel, beer, bread, food and gasoline industries were likely to be immediately affected.

There was speculation Usery might leave today, bringing an effective end to the current talks and opening the way to federal action.

Meanwhile, an auto industry spokesman said Thursday that a prolonged strike would force a complete shutdown of the auto industry within a week, idling more than 700,000 workers in the United States and Canada.

Interruption of raw materials, particularly steel, and some of the 15,000 parts needed to assemble a modern automobile was felt immediately at some operations. The major effects, however, would not be felt until Monday.

THE STATES OF Michigan and Ohio would be hardest hit by auto plant shutdowns. More than 350,000 auto workers are employed in Michigan and another 125,000 work in Ohio facilities.

Industry analysts warned that a lengthy strike could cripple the industry's slow recovery from a two-year slump.

Automakers plan to build more than 2.4 million cars in the April-June quarter — the most since 1973 — to meet the strengthening spring demand for new cars.

Officials still searching for area bikeways funds

Efforts are continuing among officials in nine Northwest suburbs to gain federal funds to develop an interconnecting bikeways system.

Officials from several of the towns met this week to discuss progress in their effort and it appears the Village of Palatine is leading the way in the program.

Roger Bjorvik, coordination chairman and Palatine representative for the program, said Palatine has completed a rough draft of a preliminary application for funds, a step which all the communities must take before a joint application can be submitted to the federal government.

THE PRELIMINARY application outlines what amount of money the local community will furnish toward development of the program including costs for engineering and actual construction.

The village board and park district of each participant community must approve a preliminary application in order for the program to receive federal funds.

Bjorvik said funds are available under the Federal Aid to Urban Systems grant. Under provisions of the grant, the federal government pays 70 per cent of the program cost. Local government is responsible for the remaining 30 per cent.

The preliminary application would outline the local governments means of funding its share of the total program.

PALATINE SO FAR is the only one of the nine communities to prepare a preliminary application draft, Bjorvik said. Other communities in the program are Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Mount Prospect, Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Elk Grove Village, Des Plaines and Hanover Park.

Bjorvik said Palatine has made a copy of its draft available to the communities so they can use it as a guide in developing their own drafts. Representatives from the communities will meet June 1 at Harper College to review the drafts.

In the meantime, Bjorvik said Palatine will proceed with the next step of the program, getting approval of the application draft from the village board and park district board. Working with Bjorvik on the project are Robert Rudd, village administrative assistant, and Fred Hall, park district director.

When all the village applications are completed and approved, a joint application will be drafted to submit to the Northwest Municipal Conference, administrator for the program. The municipal conference will serve as the applicant to the federal government for funds.

BECAUSE THE municipal conference will submit the application to the federal government, approval of the preliminary drafts by the nine villages is required. Each of the villages is a member of the conference.

Two of the largest increases in the highway budget were the $17,000 appropriation for general insurance, up from $10,000 appropriated last year, and the $19,000 appropriation for the Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund, up from $13,000 last year.

Officials vote to join area municipal unit

The Wheeling Township Board of Auditors has voted unanimously to join the Northwest Municipal Conference, a group formerly comprised of villages which has now opened its membership to townships.

The township will pay yearly dues of $282 based on 5 cents for each person living in unincorporated portions of the township.

$70,000 youth budget asked

William Heffernan, chairman of the Wheeling Township Committee on Youth, presented a youth budget of $70,000 for the next fiscal year to the board.

The budget recommends $45,500 for Omni-House; $13,000 for Shelter Inc.; $10,000 for Prospectus; and $1,500 for youth committee clerical and printing use.

Temporary assessor hired

Frank Stewart of 632 N. Hickory Ave., Arlington Heights, has been hired as deputy assessor for three months to help Township Assessor Marshall Theroux comply with new Cook County requirements for handling personal property assessments. Stewart's salary has not been set.

Township assessors must now prepare a file on each business operating in the township, including corporations and unincorporated businesses, and forward to the county an individual data card on each.

Theroux estimated some 3,000 businesses operate in Wheeling Township.

Juvenile court branch urged

A resolution to locate a branch of the Cook County 3rd District Juvenile Court in the Northwest suburbs was unanimously approved by the auditors.

Several villages and townships, including Barrington, Elk Grove, Palatine and Schaumburg, have passed similar resolutions asking for a suburban branch of the court, now located in Niles.

WHAT'S THE FUTURE of the financial institutions? Can five of them live happily side by side and still maintain a growing clientele?

"Well, that's the $64,000 question," Miller said. "Right now we're fine, but I hope the village doesn't flood the area."

Sharp pointed to the growth rate again and said he thinks the village will be able to support three or four commercial banks within a few years.

'Immediate action' urged in air safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pilots and flight controllers tend to ignore storms near the ground they would dodge in the air. Sometimes the results are catastrophic, a federal safety board said Thursday.

Citing four landing approach crashes that killed 246 people, the National Transportation Safety Board said some corrective steps have been taken by the Federal Aviation Administration but many recommendations have been ignored.

"More positive and more immediate actions are necessary," the board said.

It recommended that the FAA adopt 14 specific measures, from more pilot and controller training to installation of equipment to warn of dangerous turbulence near airports.

IT ALSO REVIVED a 1974 recommendation, rejected then by the FAA but favored by the Professional Air Traffic Control Organization, that controllers be allowed to deny landing or takeoff clearances because of storms.

The board's action was prompted by the Eastern Air Lines Boeing 727 crash at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport that killed 113 persons last June 24. The jet, pushed down by storm winds, hit the runway approach lights.

The board noted that pilots detour at least 20 miles around storm cells at cruising altitude, and said that in landing "there appears to be a tendency . . . to let the desire for an uninterrupted flow of traffic interfere with an objective evaluation of the hazard potential of approaches through or under thunderstorms.

"Consequently, approaches are being conducted through these hazardous conditions during what is perhaps the most critical phase of flight."

THE BOARD recommended new storm research and the prompt development of equipment to measure storm violence within 6 miles of major runways and show wind direction and speed within one mile of runways.

Until then, it said, the FAA should require lighted windsocks about 1,000 feet from the end of major runways and instruments to measure surface wind speed at the end of runways.

The board said problems similar to those at JFK were found in a 1972 crash at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., of an Eastern Air Lines DC9 that injured three persons; the 1973 crash at St. Louis of an Ozark Air Lines FH27 that killed 37; and the 1974 crash at Pago Pago, Samoa, of a Pan Am Boeing 707 that killed 96.

Officials vow to meet needs of senior citizens

Elk Grove Village Community Service officials said Thursday they plan to help fulfill senior citizen needs during the 1976-77 fiscal year.

"We have an influx of senior citizens in the village and we have a moral, ethical obligation to do a great deal of planning for these people," said Richard Penley, community service chairman, during a village board budget session.

Penley said he foresees a senior citizen committee being formed which would function similar to the youth committee.

MARYANN FOOTE, of the community service agency, said transportation and meals brought to the homes of the less mobile elderly are two of the most pressing senior citizen needs. Dissemination of information on services to senior citizens also was described as a need.

The community service group plans to conduct a senior citizen survey to determine what the seniors' needs are.

Trustee Nanci L. Vanderweel said, "We know transportation is their number one problem, but there is no public transportation and chances are for a goodly long time there won't be any transportation for them."

Mrs. Vanderweel said there are about 1,000 senior citizens living in the village.

Elk Grove Village employees soon could be carrying photo identification cards if a police department request is included in the 1976-77 village budget.

The police department has requested $2,000 to purchase equipment that would take the pictures and laminate the identification cards.

Trustee Nanci L. Vanderweel said the project is "desirable" although

THE COMMUNITY service budget request of $32,687 also includes continuation of the "meals on wheels" program, the youth employment service and the referral service to other agencies.

A new program included in the request calls for the cosponsorship with Harper College of a series of programs on family life. The programs, which would be held in the village, would be aimed at strengthening the family unit. Penley said such a program could be invaluable since a third of the children enrolled in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 come from single-parent families.

Village Mgr. Charles A. Willis, in presenting his $78,405 share of the budget request, said he would like to increase the amount of student intern time utilized by the village and possibly return to the practice of hiring two interns. He said the department's work load keeps increasing.

Finance Director George C. Coney said his $570,268 share of the budget request is basically the same as last year. One exception was a $90,000 increase in insurance costs.

Coney is asking the village to go to a new computer system, which would store information on discs rather than cards, at a $451 additional monthly charge. He said the 500,000 cards currently in use could all be put on a single disc the size of a long-playing record. The new system has already tentatively been ordered, because of a six-month delivery delay.

The computer equipment, as with the current equipment, would be rented from IBM Corp. Trustee Theodore J. Stadler, who is employed by IBM Corp., left the room during the computer system discussion.

The good ol' days

CHILDREN ARE TO be seen and not hear — so Chrissy Campe and Diane Petri learned how old-fashioned schools were run during Byrd School's recent colonial day. Youngsters came to school dressed as they would for the log cabin schools. Teachers were the school mams and classrooms were set up with benches. And in one corner the dunce cap sat ready for use.

Truckers here roll; talks go on

by LEA TONKIN

Chicago area truck drivers are expected to stay on the job today as contract talks continue in Arlington Heights between Teamster union negotiators and industry negotiators.

Labor Sec. William J. Usery Jr., continuing his efforts to reach a national contract agreement, said Thursday that "the time is fast approaching to make a decision on the Taft-Hartley Act." Under Taft-Hartley the President can call for an 80-day cooling off period to halt the strike.

"There still are some wide differences of opinion. I assume if we don't reach an agreement we're in for several days of strikes, but it could change at any time," Usery said. "The overriding issue will soon become to protect the American public."

THE 400,000 TEAMSTERS represented at Arlington Heights had 60 per cent of the nation's manufactured goods. The auto, steel, beer, bread, food and gasoline industries were likely to be immediately affected.

There was speculation Usery might leave today, bringing an effective end to the current talks and opening the way to federal action.

Meanwhile, an auto industry spokesman said Thursday that a prolonged strike would force a complete shutdown of the auto industry within a week, idling more than 700,000 workers in the United States and Canada.

Interruption of raw materials, particularly steel, and some of the 15,000 parts needed to assemble a modern automobile was felt immediately at some operations. The major effects, however, would not be felt until Monday.

THE STATES OF Michigan and Ohio would be hardest hit by auto plant shutdowns. More than 350,000 auto workers are employed in Michigan and another 125,000 work in Ohio facilities.

Industry analysts warned that a lengthy strike could cripple the industry's slow recovery from a two-year slump.

Automakers plan to build more than 2.4 million cars in the April-June quarter — the most since 1973 — to meet the strengthening spring demand for new cars.

Don't get too smug—a big snowfall is still possible

by JILL BETTNER

The capricious whims of the biggest prankster of them all — Old Man Winter — has taught most Northwest suburbanites never to be too smug when the first signs of spring appear.

Like a temperamental star not content to see the curtain come down after a commanding three- or four-month run, he often blusters back for just one more moment of glory and captures center stage with an unexpected blizzard — the bigger the better.

It was exactly one year ago today a sudden and violent storm dumped nearly a foot of white stuff on the Northwest suburbs, snarling traffic and stranding hundreds in offices and shopping centers overnight. Four died as a result of the storm.

IF THE WEATHER HOLDS, with

temperatures hovering around the lower 40s, the odds are that we'll have nothing worse than rain and a few flurries this spring. However, even the forecasters for the National Weather Service refuse to guarantee we won't have at least one more white whopper.

"I wouldn't wager anything on that," said forecaster James Buchanan. "It's really hard to tell. In April, we can still get one or two snows. It would have to get a little bit colder and we would need a low pressure area moving through the Chicago area."

Buchanan said there is no snow in the forecast for at least the next four days, but that's about as far ahead as the agency can predict.

The weather service was right on the button last year with advance warnings of the April 2 storm that started about noon and steadily gained momentum the rest of the afternoon.

TRAVELERS AT O'Hare Airport slept curled up on benches or stretched out on the floor in the terminals. It was more than 24 hours before the airport, closed for only the third time in history, was back in full operation again.

Besides mere inconvenience, however, the storm also caused its share of tragedy. In Wheeling, a three-year-old boy wandered outside at the height of the storm while his brother slept. Hours later the boy was dead of exposure. He was just one of four area persons whose deaths were directly attributed to the blizzard.

The National Weather Service called the blizzard the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967, when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

The Great Storm of '67 was one of those once-in-a-lifetime experiences. Almost everyone affected by the big snow remembers where he was and what he was doing when it hit — and tells his experience every time it snows.

With a little luck during the rest of the fickle month of April, maybe all the out-of-town friends and relatives who know our tales by heart won't have to listen to them again until next fall.

Aftermath of the storm last April 2. Will there be an encore?

Morrow decides to run as write-in in Dist. 54

The names of 11 candidates will appear on the ballot in the April 10 school board election in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 but a 12th candidate has started a write-in campaign.

John Morrow, 44, of 141 Grissom, Hoffman Estates, filed incomplete candidate papers on the last day of filing and by law his name cannot appear on the ballot. But Morrow said Thursday he is going to campaign anyway and he hopes to win as a write-in candidate.

"I'm running to win," Morrow said. "Of course I'm unhappy that I'm not on the ballot, but I thought I should go ahead and run anyway. The Dist. 54 board could be doing a lot more in the way of finances, and I think I could help."

MORROW, WHO IS married and has lived in the district since 1972, is director of development at Harper College. He has a bachelor's degree in psychology and a master's degree in education and counseling from Roosevelt University.

Before coming to Harper in 1972, Morrow worked for the Chicago City College System as its fund raiser. He was on Gov. Richard Ogilvie's advisory council on vocational education and on Gov. Daniel Walker's task force on school finances. The task force analyzed the financial situation of education in Illinois and identified sources of funding for school districts, Morrow said.

Morrow said Dist. 54 needs some help with its finances, and because of his background, he believes he could offer that help by "identifying some new sources of funding."

"There is private sector funding and government funding for programs that can be tried out. There's lots of money available for that kind of thing," Morrow said, citing career education as an example.

He said not only would the pilot programs be funded, but if the district decided the programs were worthwhile, money would be available to continue them.

MORROW SAID before the district considers making drastic budget cuts, they should tap some additional sources.

"I think there are other ways of bringing money into this district," he said.

Morrow objected to the way the board handled the February tax increase referendum which was defeated by the voters. He said voters did not have "enough information to decide" on the referendum.

However, Morrow said another referendum should be held because the district does need some additional funds.

"Chances are the state won't give the schools much because I don't think the state has that much money to give," he said. "We can't wait and hope money becomes available from the state. We have to move ahead now and use what money is available from other sources."

Morrow said because he has worked with the Chicago teachers' union he has no objections to the Dist. 54 union. Concerning last fall's teachers' strike, Morrow said he does not believe in court injunctions and would not seek one if teachers went on strike again. He is in favor of third-party mediation when negotiations are deadlocked and also would consider binding arbitration.

Morrow did not have any opinion on teacher salaries. He said he was in favor of building an administration center. Concerning communication between the board and the public, he said the board "could do a lot better in generating interest in the meetings and making people aware of the issues."

Suspended patrolman's pay slated in '76 village budget

by TOM VON MALDER

Nearly $16,000 of the $69,346 being requested for police traffic control in the 1976-77 village budget is the salary of Patrolman William Jaworski, who has been relieved of duty since an April 5, 1975 shooting incident but still receives full pay.

Jaworski has been drawing $1,328 a month pay while the incident is under investigation by Village Atty. Edward C. Hofert. Hofert's investigation, which is to determine whether Jaworski should be reinstated or brought up on departmental charges, has been hampered by a civil suit brought by the victim, Timothy Engelson.

Engelson, 19, of 308 Hi-Lusi Ave., Mount Prospect, was shot in the stomach by Jaworski during a scuffle as Jaworski was investigating a traffic accident. He has filed a $1 million suit charging Jaworski with battery, negligence and willful and wanton misconduct.

HOFERT WAS ABLE to get half a deposition telling Engelson's version of what happened for the first time this week. Last February, Engelson's lawyers refused to permit Hofert to talk with the victim, forcing Hofert to work through the insurance company to obtain the deposition.

"The case is still pending," Hofert said. He said the civil suit complicated his own investigation into whether Jaworski should be reinstated to active duty.

"I'm in the process of completing the investigation," he said. "We want to be perfectly satisfied the man we return to the department is completely satisfactory. Anytime a person is shot it is a serious matter."

No hearing date has been set for the Engelson suit.

Dist. 54 summer school hinges on special ed plan

The fate of summer school will be decided at the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education meeting at 8 p.m. today.

The meeting will be held at Keller Junior High School, 820 Bode Rd., Schaumburg.

Uncertainty over whether the summer school program will be paid for as usual by the state has led the board to consider charging a tuition of $34 per course.

Supt. Wayne Schaible said at a committee meeting Tuesday that other districts are faced with the same problem, but that most of them have decided to "gamble" and offer a free summer school hoping that they will be reimbursed by the state. Schaible said he was not willing to recommend such a gamble to the board. Summer school this year will cost the district about $210,000.

A PARENT POLL indicated 510 children would be sent to summer school regardless of whether parents were required to pay, said Carl Seitzer, assistant superintendent for curriculum. About 3,000 attended last year.

Board members suggested charging half the fee and hoping the state would provide the rest, but Schaible said that under present law, a district cannot file for reimbursement if any tuition has been charged.

Schaible said, however, there have been "discussions" in Springfield about allowing districts to charge some of the fee and reimbursing them for the rest because of the uncertain situation the districts are facing. Whether summer school will be funded probably will not be known for certain until the fall.

The board discussed the possibility of providing only remedial summer school for students who need extra help.

Teachers in the audience, however, said summer school was not "that significant" in helping remedial students. One teacher said it is "not really possible for a student to catch up in six weeks."

THE BOARD also has tentatively approved boundary changes for next year, but is expected to consider them formally at tonight's meeting.

A date for continued discussion of budget cutbacks also will be set tonight, although budget cuts are not on the agenda.

The board cut about $1.1 million out of the budget Tuesday, including the lunch program, $75,000; after-school activities and sports, $30,000; and a reduction in staff services in music, art, physical education, special education and social work at a savings of about $120,000.

Reduction of maintenance and supplies will save about $91,000.

If it is implemented, it should include all village employees and officials, including trustees, she said.

"I find it desirable, if we can find a way of doing it inexpensively," Mrs. Vanderweel said Wednesday. She said village employees currently have identification cards without pictures and residents have no way of knowing if the person carrying the card is the person named on the card.

MRS. VANDERWEEL suggested the money for the equipment be taken from the Civil Defense budget. She also suggested the village study purchasing available park district photo-card equipment.

Paul Swanson, park district recreation superintendent, said the equipment is about 6 years old and has been used for pool passes. He said the park district is planning to purchase newer equipment.

Mrs. Vanderweel said she would support expanding an identification card program, to include village residents, as Mount Prospect has done. "I see no problem if it could service the community and recuperate some of the money," she said.

The Mount Prospect Police Dept. started an identification program in January 1975 and charges $3 for each card made. The cards primarily are designed for senior citizens who need to prove their age for benefits or 19-year-olds who need to show proof of age for drinking beer or wine. The cards are available to all village residents.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS 398-0220

11 hopefuls vie for 3 Dist. 54 seats

There are 11 candidates running for three 3-year terms on the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education in the April 10 election.

Stories by Pam Bigford

THE CANDIDATES: Incumbents Edward Bedard and Gordon Thoren. Newcomers Elizabeth "Beth" Carpenter, Arlene Czajkowski, Claudia Bartholomew, Norman Katz, Leslie Kleiman, Mary Lund, Nick Rizzo, Isolde Smith, Dennis Watts.

ENDORSEMENTS: Republican Organization of Schaumburg Township — Bedard, Thoren and Carpenter (Czajkowski was found qualified); Schaumburg Democratic Organization — Czajkowski, Watts; Schaumburg

Education Assn. Teachers Union — Czajkowski, Kleiman, Watts.

THE ISSUES: A three-part tax rate increase referendum — including a 30-cent increase in the education fund, a 17.5-cent increase in the operations, building and maintenance fund and a $350,000 bond issue to complete an administration center — was defeated by Dist. 54 voters in February.

The question has been raised whether to bring back the referendum, which officials said was needed to offset projected deficits, whether to cut the budget or operate the district in a deficit. The fate of the administration center still has not been determined.

The Dist. 54 board this week tentatively approved cutting the budget by $1.1 million, eliminating the lunch program, intermural sports, and other extra-curricular activities, and other cuts are being considered.

The relationship between the board and its teachers union also has been raised as candidates question the way in which the board handled a strike in the district last fall.

The board voted to stop formal negotiations during the strike, sent letters to teachers stating those on strike were subject to dismissal, closed schools after attempting to keep them open, and unsuccessfully sought a court injunction to force teachers back to school. The board refused mediation and the strike was settled after three days.

Also at issue is whether the administration of the district is satisfactory, the board's relations with the community, the demise of the multiple committee system, which was replaced by the single committee-of-the-whole system and the frequent disagreement of the board, which often splits four to three.

Claudia Bartholomew

Claudia Bartholomew would like to improve communication between the people and the board of education and remind the board members "that they are our representatives."

Mrs. Bartholomew would like to have each board member assigned to a certain number of schools as a sounding board for parents and teachers in each area. She believes this would help provide the feedback that she says is lacking in this year's board-community relationship.

Mrs. Bartholomew believes in providing children with a good educational foundation first and adding the "trills" later.

"I don't feel the kids are getting that good of an education. They (the board) keep trying out new programs. If all we can afford is a good basic education, let's give them that." She said parents should be consulted more about the curriculum.

Mrs. Bartholomew, 39, lives at 1411 S. Algonquin Rd., Schaumburg.

Finances. "Nothing is more important than maintaining a balanced budget," Mrs. Bartholomew said.

Referendum. Mrs. Bartholomew said she is against raising the district's taxes "because we'll still have to cut things. In the meantime, the state is going to raise our taxes too, and they'll be getting money from both ends. If they have it they'll spend it. I would vote against bringing back the referendum. We've had it with taxes."

Administration center. Mrs. Bartholomew favors building a center with the money the district currently has on hand.

Budget cutbacks. Too many unnecessary items have become high priority budget items, Mrs. Bartholomew said.

"The budget should be cut to the bone where it doesn't affect the children personally." Consultants and learning center teachers should be cut, she said. "I don't think learning center teachers can give that many children that much attention."

Teachers' union. "Unions are a way of life today, but each teacher will have to consult his own conscience when it comes to what the union asks," Mrs. Bartholomew said.

Teacher salaries. "We all have to tighten our belts, though I would like to see parity" between the elementary and high school teachers," she said. "Teachers should be reviewed in some way, the same as employees are in any business."

Teachers strike. Mrs. Bartholomew believes "negotiations should never be shut down," even during a strike. She would favor bringing in a neutral third party to help settle a strike, "but once you have that third party, you are committed, so it would be a last step."

Mary Lund

Mary Lund wants to see more "openness" on the part of the board toward the community. She would like to get rid of "the aura" that citizens feel surrounds the board and allow people more freedom to express their opinions.

The committee-of-the-whole system in "intimidating," Mrs. Lund said, and she would like to go back to the standing committee system to increase community input. She said there has been "a lot of rhetoric signifying nothing" from the board in response to citizens.

Mrs. Lund, 30, lives at 1439 S. Mohawk Dr., Schaumburg.

Finances. Mrs. Lund does not approve of deficit spending and would like to see the budget "analyzed and reevaluated."

Referendum. The defeated referendum was "presented poorly" to the public, Mrs. Lund said. She was not convinced of the validity of the administration's five-year forecast and would not like to see another referendum before 1977.

Administration center. Mrs. Lund said she does not believe the public was informed of all the facts about the planned center. She is "all for" the district "trying to get by with what money they have."

Budget cuts. "Administration should be cut first, then supplies, this type of item before cutting curriculum and after-school activities," Mrs. Lund said.

"I am not exceptionally pleased" with the education in the district, she said. "I think the basics should be emphasized. It is the responsibility of the board to examine curriculum and express an opinion." New programs should be studied closely "and not jumped into head-long."

Teachers union. Mrs. Lund does not object to the union, "But I am against the tenure system. Teachers may get by the probationary period who should not have. I would like to see an evaluation of each teacher every three years or so."

Teacher salaries. Elementary teachers should be paid the same as high school teachers, but "realistically it will have to be done gradually," Mrs. Lund said. Pay in Dist. 54 is average compared to others, she said.

Teacher strike. "I am all for leaving the door open in negotiations," even during a strike, Mrs. Lund said. But she would seek a court injunction to return the teachers to class and she would seek their dismissal. She favors mediation, and "if all else failed," she would agree to binding arbitration.

Elizabeth Carpenter

Elizabeth "Beth" Carpenter decided last summer to run for the school board. Her contact with board of education members through community activities as well as her background in education as a former parochial school teacher sparked her interest in running for the board.

Mrs. Carpenter researched how a school board was supposed to run in theory, and didn't always like what she saw at Dist. 54 board meetings. "I don't always see a spirit of cooperation among board members," she said. "They shouldn't get caught up in personalities."

Mrs. Carpenter, 31, of 1361 Maplewood Hanover Park, is a substitute teacher in Dist. 54.

Referendum. "A balanced budget is the only way to go for a school district," Mrs. Carpenter said. "The board should come back with the referendum as fast as they can, in the spring. But they will have to do some explaining, and let people know that the referendum won't be the answer to every problem.

"People should have been made aware of the alternatives (to passing the referendum) in the general sense. It should have been said that class size would have to be raised, mobiles closed, kids bused, and the lunch program cut," Mrs. Carpenter said.

Administration center. "There is money that can be saved by putting the administration all under one roof," Mrs. Carpenter said. "The control would also be tighter."

Budget cuts. "This district has enjoyed an affluent time. Some things previously considered benefits are now taken for granted. We need to get the kids to have a good self-image and to teach them their basic skills," Mrs. Carpenter said.

Mrs. Carpenter said, however, that music, art and physical education "are absolute musts — they develop the personality of the child. The bottom line is to treat the kids like individuals." The Individually Gifted Education program is "excellent," she said.

Elizabeth Carpenter

Teachers union. Mrs. Carpenter said unions "serve to broaden your scope, keep you up on your profession."

Teacher salaries. The pay of teachers in Dist. 54 is "comparable, maybe somewhat higher" than teachers elsewhere. Having parity between the elementary school teachers and high school teachers would be "asking one of the districts to give up their right to negotiate."

Nick Rizzo

Nick Rizzo decided not to use his degree in education to become a teacher, but he believes his education would help him on the board to relate to school matters. My business experience would be helpful on the financial side, he said.

Rizzo said the community has "a lot of questions" on topics like the strike, the referendum and budget cuts "that aren't getting enough answers. There's too much rhetoric going on at the board meetings and not enough finding out what the real problems are."

Rizzo, 26, of 1828 Stockton, Hoffman Estates, is a real estate counselor.

Finances. "I agree with the conservative position the district has taken in the past," Rizzo said. "I want to stay out of a deficit situation if at all possible. But if it becomes necessary to borrow money to give the proper high quality education, then we should look at all avenues."

Referendum. "I honestly don't know if we need more money," Rizzo said. "I don't mean to accuse, but there may be money hidden in the depths of the accounting system. It warrants investigation by an outside party at this point."

"If there is a need, we should definitely have another referendum," Rizzo said. "The board failed to make the people aware of the issues" in the last referendum. Rizzo is in favor of parallel budgeting, giving the public the opportunity to see what the district could afford with the extra money, and how it would look without the money.

Administration center. "The administration is being handicapped in its function by being split up," Rizzo said. He would like to look into whether an architect could be found who could draw up plans for a building that would meet the district's funds and needs.

Budget cuts. "I don't think you will see any improvement by cutting programs," Rizzo said. "It's fine to cut out waste, but it's ludicrous to say that you can cut athletics and learning resource center teachers because they're line items."

Teachers' union. "Unions aren't perfect. They're set up to benefit the teachers, not the children," Rizzo said.

Teacher salaries. "I'd like to see us draw the best teachers to this area, and you normally have to pay the best to get them," Rizzo said.

Leslie Kleiman

Leslie Kleiman is a teacher in Elgin who believes her educational experience would be an asset to the board.

Mrs. Kleiman wants to involve the community in board matters and improve the committee-of-the-whole system, which she calls "threatening" to the public. She believes the board should pay as much attention to curriculum evaluation as to finances.

Mrs. Kleiman, 26, of 463 Newcastle Rd., Hoffman Estates, is a learning disabilities teacher.

Finances. Mrs. Kleiman favors maintaining a balanced budget. "Deficit spending is unrealistic for a school district," she said.

Referendum. A referendum should be held again "because we need the money," Mrs. Kleiman said. "But the board had better inform the public what will happen to programs if it does not pass."

Budget cuts. Mrs. Kleiman does not favor any cuts that affect educational programs, like learning resource teachers and the Individually Guided Education programs. She believes the trend toward individualized education is very important, as is making sure the district's students are well-rounded. Cuts would have to be made in items such as "travel, after-school activities, and some consultants." She would like to see the gifted, environmental and learning center programs expanded if more funds become available.

Teachers' union. Mrs. Kleiman said unions "are necessary types of things." She belongs to the Elgin teachers' union but said if she were elected to the board, she would be able to view her union and the Dist. 54 union as "two separate entities. I have to look at it objectively."

Teacher salaries. Teachers in Dist. 54 receive "an average salary compared to other districts," Mrs. Kleiman said.

Leslie Kleiman

Teachers' strike. "Some kind of impasse procedure has to be developed" to prevent strikes in the future, Mrs. Kleiman said. She said she was in favor of a neutral third party entering negotiations which had come to a standstill.

Mrs. Kleiman said she would not cut off negotiations with striking teachers, but would push to start negotiations early so they do not continue into September. She said she would not seek a court injunction against teachers and would not seek to dismiss them.

Dennis Watts

Dennis Watts believes "the community has lost confidence" in the board of education. He said he has to "get involved to see what I would like to see done."

Watts' educational background in industrial relations and his business experience would be assets to the board, he said. He would like to improve communication between the board and the community by having board members "go to the people" by attending meetings of community organizations.

Watts, 33, of 221 Quincy Ct., Schaumburg, works in data processing.

Watts said he also would like to reevaluate a study done several years ago for the district by Northern Illinois University on splitting the district in two along village lines. He said he realizes there are many problems involved, but would like to look at the study again because "one of the problems in Dist. 54 is its size. It's hard for the board to listen" to such a large number of residents.

Finances. "Finances seem outside local power now. I believe full funding will happen no matter (which gubernatorial candidate) is elected in the fall," Watts said. He said he is in favor of a balanced budget but does not object to borrowing "on a temporary basis." He said he would rather borrow temporarily than cut programs now "and have to reconstruct 12 months later if we get full funding."

Budget cuts. Watts said he is a "fundamentalist" who believes in stressing the basics. While he calls the basic education in Dist. 54 "outstanding," he would like to see more emphasis placed on noncollege-oriented subjects such as home economics and industrial arts. "Less than half of the kids who are graduating today are going to college. They have to make a living too," he said.

Teachers union. Because of his industrial relations background, Watts said he would "volunteer" to work with the teachers union. He said teachers have the right to "address their problems" through a union.

Teacher salaries. While Watts favors paying teachers in the elementary and high school levels the same salaries, he said this year "we cannot afford to completely close that gap. But we can take it in steps."

Dennis Watts

Teacher strike. Watts said he believes "wholeheartedly" in the bargaining process. He said "the door should always be kept open" and cutting off negotiations "under any conditions" even during a strike "is not acceptable." He said "at the point of complete impasse before the teachers strike" he would favor binding arbitration with a mutually agreed-upon arbitrator.

Arlene Czajkowski

Arlene Czajkowski, who was narrowly defeated in school elections last year, said she is running again because she is "still interested in the board and wants to make sure the children are getting the best possible education for their parents' tax dollars."

Mrs. Czajkowski, 44, lives at 727 Crest Ave., Roselle.

Finances. Mrs. Czajkowski is not in favor of deficit spending. "Once you dig a hole, it only gets deeper and harder to get out of," she said.

Referendum. "The last referendum was poorly planned," Mrs. Czajkowski said. As president of the PTA Council, she said she told the board that there were "a lot of unanswered questions. When people asked what the alternatives to passing the referendum were, they didn't have an answer."

Mrs. Czajkowski would like to see the referendum brought back "not hastily, but only after it's been well researched." She said it should be better explained that the board does not necessarily have to use the entire amount of the tax increase if finances improve.

Administration center. The district should make every effort to build an adequate center with the $700,000 it has, Mrs. Czajkowski said. "We need an administration center. We're such a large district that administration would be much easier" if the administrators were under one roof, she said.

Budget cuts. The first cut to be made should be the lunch program, said Mrs. Czajkowski, who would prefer to return to the parent-paid lunch program where most of the children went home to lunch.

"The education programs are last on the list" of cuts Mrs. Czajkowski said. "Maybe there are some positions that if we are really pinched we don't need," she said, such as some consultants, the environmentalist and career awareness consultant. The Individually Guided Education program might also be an area to cut, she said.

Teachers union. "Collective bargaining is fine," Mrs. Czajkowski said. "We're much too large a district to say to the teachers, 'This is what you get.'"

Teacher salaries. Teachers in Dist. 54 are "doing well" in their salaries, Mrs. Czajkowski believes. "Parity would be nice, but it's an economic fact of life that we can only do so much with the money that's available."

Isolde Smith

Isolde Smith has been involved in education through PTA groups throughout the country and feels capable of handling the district's finances and forming opinions with an open mind.

Raised in Germany and coming to the U.S. as a teen-ager, Mrs. Smith firmly believes that "the opportunity for everyone to get an equal education is the best thing the U.S. has going for it." She wants the community to be more involved in school affairs, and wants to open direct lines of communication from the board to the community.

Mrs. Smith, 41, of 327 Langley Dr., Schaumburg, is a master tailor.

Referendum. Mrs. Smith wants a balanced budget in Dist. 54, and she is in favor of a tax increase referendum for the education and operations, building and maintenance funds "as soon as possible."

"The last referendum was presented very badly," she said. "It was not made plain why the money was needed. We've been led to believe this district is well-off. Then there was no information on why we are having this financial crisis." She objected to being informed about the referendum through "notes crumpled in the kids lunch bags" and thought direct mail would have been more effective.

Administration center. "The building is desperately needed. You can't run a district of this size from trailers put together," Mrs. Smith said. If, after more evaluation, the district believes it needs more money to build a good center, she would approve a referendum to provide it.

Budget cuts. Mrs. Smith believes district programs are "well-designed, and I would not cut them." She would not cut the lunch program, but would work on using community volunteers as lunchroom supervisors and in as many other capacities as possible.

Isolde Smith

She agrees with most of the budget cuts proposed by the administration since they do not directly affect educational programs.

Teachers union. "Teachers have the right to be represented as one voice through a union," Mrs. Smith said.

Teacher salaries. "The increase in the cost of living is constantly on our minds as well as on the teachers'," Mrs. Smith said. "But the teachers' negotiations are so tough that they pretty well get what they want."

Norman Katz

Norman Katz believes his background in finance and construction is needed on the Dist. 54 board which is faced with revenue problems and a constant need for new schools. Before entering private practice as a tax consultant, he was chief executive of his own steel company.

Katz, 35, of 2150 Smethwick, Hoffman Estates, is a Certified Public Accountant and a financial and tax consultant.

Katz said the administration and board should be "more responsive" to the needs of teachers, parents and children. He would like to tighten the district's belt by reducing waste and making budget predictions more accurate.

• Finances. Katz said the district is projecting its future revenues too conservatively. He believes pressure on the state legislature will lead to school districts receiving their full share of state aid in the fall.

• Referendum. Katz would like to hold another referendum "as soon as possible because in spite of what (the state does) the money is clearly needed."

Katz said he would present the district's needs to the public differently than the present board did in February. His approach would be to "come out and say that we need more money to provide higher salaries, more Individually Guided Education programs and improved programs." He said he does not approve of "scare tactics."

• Budget cuts. Cuts should not be made until after the district knows how much state aid it will receive this year, Katz said.

• Teachers union. Katz said he has no objections to the teachers union as long as the teachers "place the interests of the children above their own interests."

• Teacher salaries. "Teachers have told me that they want to be professional but can't afford it," Katz said. "I have said that I will help them get higher salaries if they will help find the money by reducing waste." He said teachers are "underpaid" because they are "not making enough" compared to other persons with their education.

• Teachers strike. If the union calls another strike, Katz said he will "speak out for merit pay" for teachers and ask for "performance criteria" to evaluate their teaching abilities. He said he would not cut off negotiations during a strike.

Gordon Thoren

Incumbent board member Gordon Thoren said he is running for reelection because of "personal concern for the make-up of the board."

Thoren said input from the teachers is "super" but he does not like "the certain effort" he sees by the union to put certain candidates on the board. "I don't think excessive influence of teachers on the board is good."

Thoren, 38, of 577 Edgefield Ln., Hoffman Estates, is a systems project manager for Allstate Insurance Co.

• Finances: "I disagree 100 per cent with deficit financing and don't want to see that happen to our school district."

• Referendum. Taxes for education are going to go up, "somehow, somewhere" either through taxes on property or state taxes, Thoren said. He would like to go for a referendum "before the end of the year only after identifying what programs will be cut" if the referendum loses. "If we do get beat, we'll have at least one full year to do some sound planning."

• Budget cuts. "There are things we can probably do without and still provide a quality education," Thoren said. He named resource center teachers, the lunch program, Individually Guided Education program, less money for special education, foreign languages and after-school activities. "I do not recommend that we unload these things, but that we do look at them first" before cutting any educational programs, he said.

• Administration center. Thoren said it is in "the long-range best interest" of the district to have the administration together under one roof, and would favor another referendum. "The amount of money it would cost each taxpayer would be minimal and the investment would be worth it." Thoren said he wouldn't object to checking whether another architect could draw up plans for a large enough building for $700,000, but said he felt it was "unlikely" these efforts would be successful.

• Teachers union. "The union leadership and the IEA (Illinois Education Assn., state-wide teacher union to which the Dist. 54 teachers belong) advisers led the masses into the confrontation we had last fall," Thoren said. "I can't think of anything positive the union has done for the educational processes of our district."

• Teacher salaries. "I think the teachers are adequately compensated for the time and effort they're putting in," Thoren said.

said he would have to take the blame for "dooming" the center by putting it on the ballot in February with the two funds. He said people voted no to higher taxes and so voted no "right down the line." He said the district should not build an inadequate center just because $700,000 is available.

• Budget cuts. Bedard said the district did not use the excess money it had in the 1950s and 1960s "to improve the basic educational programs. We burdened the elementary school program with a lot of claptrap . . . and we wonder why the test scores go down. So now we're out of money and Johnny can't read."

Bedard said "it's easy to cut programs like the lunch program" but cuts of that nature will not make much difference in the budget. The first major cuts he would make would be career education, industrial arts and home economics, and foreign languages.

• Teachers union and strike. "A lot of face saving goes on in the first strike," Bedard said. "It might not be so emotional on both sides" if it happened again, he said. If the teachers struck again, Bedard said he would not stop negotiations. "I would be in favor of talking, but I'd raise the ante," he said by withdrawing the board's last salary proposal. He said he would seek a court injunction against the teachers and dismiss striking teachers.

Mediation by a neutral third party would not make either side move unless they wanted to, Bedard said.

Asked why the strike occurred last fall, Bedard said "the decision (to strike) was made before" either side presented a salary proposal. He said "the rhetoric of publications put out by the SEA (union) months before the strike" showed "anybody who read them that they were pumping for a strike."

Edward Bedard

Edward Bedard said he is running for reelection "50 per cent for the campaign and 50 per cent for the next three years."

With the financial problems facing the district this year, Bedard said the election of school board members "is too important not to discuss the issues." He said he wants to get the community to make decisions by selecting candidates with whom they agree.

Bedard, 40, of 350 Pierce Rd., Hoffman Estates, is a manufacturing representative for Bedard Equipment and Sales Co.

• Finances. Deficit financing is "suicide," Bedard said. "If you don't do balanced budgeting then you are estimating you are going to get enough money next year to pay off" what the district borrowed, he said.

• Referendum. "I am personally convinced that we would have needed cuts even if we had gotten that referendum because I don't believe we are going to get full funding" from the state, Bedard said.

• Administration center. Bedard

'Immediate action' urged in air safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pilots and flight controllers tend to ignore storms near the ground they would dodge in the air. Sometimes the results are catastrophic, a federal safety board said Thursday.

Citing four landing approach crashes that killed 246 people, the National Transportation Safety Board said some corrective steps have been taken by the Federal Aviation Administration but many recommendations have been ignored.

"More positive and more immediate actions are necessary," the board said.

It recommended that the FAA adopt 14 specific measures, from more pilot and controller training to installation of equipment to warn of dangerous turbulence near airports.

IT ALSO REVIVED a 1974 recommendation, rejected then by the FAA but favored by the Professional Air Traffic Control Organization, that controllers be allowed to deny landing or takeoff clearances because of storms.

The board's action was prompted by the Eastern Air Lines Boeing 727 crash at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport that killed 113 persons last June 24. The jet, pushed down by storm winds, hit the runway approach lights.

The board noted that pilots detour at least 20 miles around storm cells at cruising altitude, and said that in landing "there appears to be a tendency . . . to let the desire for an uninterrupted flow of traffic interfere with an objective evaluation of the hazard potential of approaches through or under thunderstorms.

"Consequently, approaches are being conducted through these hazardous conditions during what is perhaps the most critical phase of flight."

THE BOARD recommended new storm research and the prompt development of equipment to measure storm violence within 6 miles of major runways and show wind direction and speed within one mile of runways.

Until then, it said, the FAA should require lighted windsocks about 1,000 feet from the end of major runways and instruments to measure surface wind speed at the end of runways.

The board said problems similar to those at JFK were found in a 1972 crash at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., of an Eastern Air Lines DC9 that injured three persons; the 1973 crash at St. Louis of an Ozark Air Lines FH227 that killed 37; and the 1974 crash at Pago Pago, Samoa, of a Pan Am Boeing 707 that killed 96.

Summer school here in jeopardy

Summer school will not be offered in Schaumburg Township Dist. 34 unless administrators recommend a special education program within the next few weeks.

School board members Thursday night rejected both tuition-based and free summer programs.

Their action was based on uncertainty over whether the summer school program would be paid by the state.

PAST SUMMER SCHOOL sessions have been fully funded by the state.

Prior to the vote, Karen Wilsie, 609 Bryant Tr., Roselle, asked board members to consider the "unique needs" of physically handicapped students in making their decision.

Mrs. Wilsie said she was appearing on behalf of a number of parents whose children become "prisoners in their own homes" because they can not participate in regular summer activities.

Stressing the need for year round education for handicapped children, Mrs. Wilsie said, "Please don't use these children as financial pawns and don't let them atrophy over the summer."

"PHYSICALLY HANDICAPPED children have no option, it's summer school or regression," she said.

Supt. Wayne Schaible told the school board that Atty. Frank Hines has said summer school must be offered to all or no children in the district and special education classes would constitute discrimination against the remainder of the enrollment.

The board earlier considered charging a tuition of $34 per course because of uncertainty of full state funding for the program estimated to cost about $208,000.

Schaible said present law does not allow a school district to file for state reimbursement if any tuition has been charged.

HOFFMAN ESTATES residents are asked to notify the park district if they notice "suspicious" activity in the village's parks. The plea from Parks Director Allen Binder comes in the wake of $1,000 worth of vandalism at Cottonwood Park, Hassell Road and Parkview Lane.

Truckers here roll; talks go on

by LEA TONKIN

Chicago area truck drivers are expected to stay on the job today as contract talks continue in Arlington Heights between Teamster union negotiators and industry negotiators.

Labor Sec. William J. Usery Jr., continuing his efforts to reach a national contract agreement, said Thursday that "the time is fast approaching to make a decision on the Taft-Hartley Act." Under Taft-Hartley the President can call for an 80-day cooling off period to halt the strike.

"There still are some wide differences of opinion. I assume if we don't reach an agreement we're in for several days of strikes, but it could change at any time," Usery said. "The overriding issue will soon become to protect the American public."

THE 400,000 TEAMSTERS represented at Arlington Heights haul 60 per cent of the nation's manufactured goods. The auto, steel, beer, bread, food and gasoline industries were likely to be immediately affected.

There was speculation Usery might leave today, bringing an effective end to the current talks and opening the way to federal action.

Meanwhile, an auto industry spokesman said Thursday that a prolonged strike would force a complete shutdown of the auto industry within a week, idling more than 700,000 workers in the United States and Canada.

Interruption of raw materials, particularly steel, and some of the 15,000 parts needed to assemble a modern automobile was felt immediately at some operations. The major effects, however, would not be felt until Monday.

THE STATES OF Michigan and Ohio would be hardest hit by auto plant shutdowns. More than 350,000 auto workers are employed in Michigan and another 125,000 work in Ohio facilities.

Industry analysts warned that a lengthy strike could cripple the industry's slow recovery from a two-year slump.

Automakers plan to build more than 2.4 million cars in the April-June quarter — the most since 1973 — to meet the strengthening spring demand for new cars.

Citizen aid asked to curb park vandalism

Hoffman Estates Park District Director Allen Binder has asked for cooperation from residents living near parks to help curb vandalism.

Binder has sent out correspondence to many residents asking them "to contact police officials if they hear or witness anything suspicious" around park facilities.

The letter was prompted by damage last weekend in Cottonwood Park, Hassell Road and Parkview Lane, where vandals "completely shattered" a $1,000 timberform structure, he said.

"WE DON'T KNOW exactly how they did it, but it looks as though whoever smashed the structure used axes or sledgehammers," Binder said. "We found over four cases of empty beer cans at Cottonwood."

The Cottonwood Park incident is the first "serious act of vandalism to hit the park district since October" when the district bus was damaged and its windows smashed, Binder said.

"We usually get a spree of vandalism in the park during the months of April and March," Binder said. "What we want to do is make the public aware that these things are going on and urge them to contact the police if they know of any vandalism."

Binder said the park district doesn't have $1,000 "here and there" to spend on acts of vandalism.

"It's the parks now. But it may be homes next," Binder said.

Don't get too smug—a big snowfall is still possible

by JILL BETTNER

The capricious whims of the biggest prankster of them all — Old Man Winter — has taught most Northwest suburbanites never to be too smug when the first signs of spring appear.

Like a temperamental star not content to see the curtain come down after a commanding three- or four-month run, he often blusters back for just one more moment of glory and captures center stage with an unexpected blizzard — the bigger the better.

It was exactly one year ago today a sudden and violent storm dumped nearly a foot of white stuff on the Northwest suburbs, snarling traffic and stranding hundreds in offices and shopping centers overnight. Four died as a result of the storm.

IF THE WEATHER HOLDS, with

temperatures hovering around the lower 40s, the odds are that we'll have nothing worse than rain and a few flurries this spring. However, even the forecasters for the National Weather Service refuse to guarantee we won't have at least one more white whopper.

"I wouldn't wager anything on that," said forecaster James Buchanan. "It's really hard to tell. In April, we can still get one or two snows. It would have to get a little bit colder and we would need a low pressure area moving through the Chicago area."

Buchanan said there is no snow in the forecast for at least the next four days, but that's about as far ahead as the agency can predict.

The weather service was right on the button last year with advance warnings of the April 2 storm that started about noontime and steadily gained momentum the rest of the afternoon.

TRAVELERS AT O'Hare Airport slept curled up on benches or stretched out on the floor in the terminals. It was more than 24 hours before the airport, closed for only the third time in history, was back in full operation again.

Besides mere inconvenience, however, the storm also caused its share of tragedy. In Wheeling, a three-year-old boy wandered outside at the height of the storm while his brother slept. Hours later the boy was dead of exposure. He was just one of four area persons whose deaths were directly attributed to the blizzard.

The National Weather Service called the blizzard the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967, when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

The Great Storm of '67 was one of those once-in-a-lifetime experiences. Almost everyone affected by the big snow remembers where he was and what he was doing when it hit — and tells his experience every time it snows.

With a little luck during the rest of the fickle month of April, maybe all the out-of-town friends and relatives who know our tales by heart won't have to listen to them again until next fall.

Aftermath of the storm last April 2. Will there be an encore?

Village apartment survey urged

Hoffman Estates Finance Committee Chairman William Cowin has asked the village administration to prepare a survey of apartment complexes to determine whether there is a need for a new census.

Cowin said Monday night a new census will give a better idea of how much revenue the village can expect.

The last village-wide census was taken in 1974, when apartment complexes "were about 40 per cent filled," Cowin said. Today occupancy is near the 90 per cent mark, he added.

"What I would like to find out is whether we would like a census done within the next six months or should we wait until next year?" he asked.

Village staff will conduct a survey of area apartment houses and determine how much of an increase there has been in the past year and a half.

Other items Cowin asked the staff to evaluate are property taxes, road and bridge taxes, and fees for building permits.

School reschedules 'Charlie's Aunt'

The British comedy "Charlie's Aunt" will be presented today and Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Conant High School, 700 E. Cougar Tr., Hoffman Estates, instead of at 8 p.m. as was previously planned.

Morrow to wage write-in campaign

The names of 11 candidates will appear on the ballot in the April 10 school board election in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 but a 12th candidate has started a write-in campaign.

John Morrow, 44, of 141 Grissom, Hoffman Estates, filed incomplete candidate papers on the last day of filing and by law his name cannot appear on the ballot. But Morrow said Thursday he is going to campaign anyway and he hopes to win as a write-in candidate.

"I'm running to win," Morrow said. "Of course I'm unhappy that I'm not on the ballot, but I thought I should go ahead and run anyway. The Dist. 54 board could be doing a lot more in the way of finances, and I think I could help."

MORROW, WHO IS married and has lived in the district since 1972, is director of development at Harper College. He has a bachelor's degree in psychology and a master's degree in education and counseling from Roosevelt University.

Before coming to Harper in 1972, Morrow worked for the Chicago City College System as its fund raiser. He was on Gov. Richard Ogilvie's advisory council on vocational education and on Gov. Daniel Walker's task force on school finances. The task force analyzed the financial situation of education in Illinois and identified sources of funding for school districts, Morrow said.

Morrow said Dist. 54 needs some help with its finances, and because of his background, he believes he could offer that help by "identifying some new sources of funding."

"There is private sector funding and government funding for programs that can be tried out. There's lots of money available for that kind of thing," Morrow said, citing career education as an example.

He said not only would the pilot programs be funded, but if the district decided the programs were worthwhile, money would be available to continue them.

MORROW SAID before the district considers making drastic budget cuts, they should tap some additional sources.

"I think there are other ways of bringing money into this district," he said.

Morrow objected to the way the board handled the February tax increase referendum which was defeated by the voters. He said voters did not have "enough information to decide" on the referendum.

However, Morrow said another referendum should be held because the district does need some additional funds.

"Chances are the state won't give the schools much because I don't think the state has that much money to give," he said. "We can't wait and hope money becomes available from the state. We have to move ahead now and use what money is available from other sources."

Morrow said because he has worked with the Chicago teachers' union he has no objections to the Dist. 54 union. Concerning last fall's teachers' strike, Morrow said he does not believe in court injunctions and would not seek one if teachers went on strike again. He is in favor of third-party mediation when negotiations are deadlocked and also would consider binding arbitration.

Palatine leads search for federal urban systems grant

Suburban officials still seek bikeways funding

Efforts are continuing among officials in nine Northwest suburbs to gain federal funds to develop an inter-connecting bikeways system. Officials from several of the towns met this week to discuss progress in their effort and it appears the Village of Palatine is leading the way in the program.

Roger Bjorvik, coordination chairman and Palatine representative for the program, said Palatine has completed a rough draft of a preliminary application for funds, a step which all the communities must take before a joint application can be submitted to the federal government.

THE PRELIMINARY application outlines what amount of money the local community will furnish toward development of the program including costs for engineering and actual construction.

The village board and park district of each participant community must approve a preliminary application in order for the program to receive federal funds.

Bjorvik said funds are available under the Federal Aid to Urban Systems grant. Under provisions of the grant, the federal government pays 70 per cent of the program cost. Local government is responsible for the remaining 30 per cent.

The preliminary application would outline the local governments means of funding its share of the total program.

PALATINE SO FAR is the only one of the nine communities to prepare a preliminary application draft, Bjorvik said. Other communities in the program are Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Mount Prospect, Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Elk Grove Village, Des Plaines and Hanover Park.

Bjorvik said Palatine has made a copy of its draft available to the communities so they can use it as a guide in developing their own drafts. Representatives from the communities will meet June 1 at Harper College to review the drafts.

In the meantime, Bjorvik said Palatine will proceed with the next step of the program getting approval of the application draft from the village board and park district board. Working with Bjorvik on the project are Robert Rudd, village administrative assistant, and Fred Hall, park district director.

When all the village applications are completed and approved, a joint application will be drafted to submit to the Northwest Municipal Conference, administrative for the program. The municipal conference will serve as the applicant to the federal government for funds.

BECAUSE THE municipal conference will submit the application to the federal government, approval of the preliminary drafts by the nine villages is required. Each of the villages is a member of the conference.

The April 17 trip to see "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" at Drury Lane North has been canceled by the Hoffman Estates Park District.

The trip scheduled for May 27 will feature visits to House on the Rock, Little Norway and the Cave of the Mounds.

Further information on the tour may be obtained by calling the district office 845-7400.

11 hopefuls vie for 3 Dist. 54 seats

There are 11 candidates running for three 3-year terms on the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education in the April 10 election.

THE CANDIDATES: Incumbents Edward Bedard and Gordon Thoren. Newcomers Elizabeth "Beth" Carpenter, Arlene Czajkowski, Claudia Bartholomew, Norman Katz, Leslie Kleiman, Mary Lund, Nick Rizzo, Isolde Smith, Dennis Watts.

Stories by Pam Bigford

Education Assn. Teachers Union — Czajkowski, Kleiman, Watts.

THE ISSUES: A three-part tax rate increase referendum — including a 30-cent increase in the education fund, a 17.5-cent increase in the operations, building and maintenance fund and a $350,000 bond issue to complete an administration center — was defeated by Dist. 54 voters in February.

The question has been raised whether to bring back the referendum, which officials said was needed to offset projected deficits, whether to cut the budget or operate the district in a deficit. The fate of the administration center still has not been determined.

The Dist. 54 board this week tentatively approved cutting the budget by $1.1 million, eliminating the lunch program, intermural sports, and other extra-curricular activities, and other cuts are being considered.

The relationship between the board and its teachers union also has been raised as candidates question the way in which the board handled a strike in the district last fall.

The board voted to stop formal negotiations during the strike, sent letters to teachers stating those on strike were subject to dismissal, closed schools after attempting to keep them open, and unsuccessfully sought a court injunction to force teachers back to school. The board refused mediation and the strike was settled after three days.

Also at issue is whether the administration of the district is satisfactory, the board's relations with the community, the demise of the multiple committee system, which was replaced by the single committee-of-the-whole system and the frequent disagreement of the board, which often splits four to three.

Claudia Bartholomew

Claudia Bartholomew would like to improve communication between the people and the board of education and remind the board members "that they are our representatives."

Mrs. Bartholomew would like to have each board member assigned to a certain number of schools as a sounding board for parents and teachers in each area. She believes this would help provide the feedback that she says is lacking in this year's board-community relationship.

Mrs. Bartholomew believes in providing children with a good educational foundation first and adding the "frills" later.

"I don't feel the kids are getting that good of an education. They (the board) keep trying out new programs. If all we can afford is a good basic education, let's give them that." She said parents should be consulted more about the curriculum.

Mrs. Bartholomew, 39, lives at 1411 S. Algonquin Rd., Schaumburg.

Finances. "Nothing is more important than maintaining a balanced budget," Mrs. Bartholomew said.

• Referendum. Mrs. Bartholomew said she is against raising the district's taxes "because we'll still have to cut things. In the meantime, the state is going to raise our taxes too, and they'll be getting money from both ends. If they have it they'll spend it. I would vote against bringing back the referendum. We've had it with taxes."

• Administration center. Mrs. Bartholomew favors building a center with the money the district currently has on hand.

• Budget cutbacks. Too many unnecessary items have become high priority budget items, Mrs. Bartholomew said.

"The budget should be cut to the bone where it doesn't affect the children personally." Consultants and learning center teachers should be cut, she said. "I don't think learning center teachers can give that many children that much attention."

• Teachers' union. "Unions are a way of life today, but each teacher will have to consult his own conscience when it comes to what the union asks," Mrs. Bartholomew said.

• Teacher salaries. "We all have to tighten our belts, though I would like to see parity" between the elementary and high school teachers," she said. "Teachers should be reviewed in some way, the same as employees are in any business."

• Teachers strike. Mrs. Bartholomew believes "negotiations should never be shut down," even during a strike. She would favor bringing in a neutral third party to help settle a strike, "but once you have that third party, you are committed, so it would be a last step."

Elizabeth Carpenter

Elizabeth "Beth" Carpenter decided last summer to run for the school board. Her contact with board of education members through community activities as well as her background in education as a former parochial school teacher sparked her interest in running for the board.

Mrs. Carpenter researched how a school board was supposed to run in theory, and didn't always like what she saw at Dist. 54 board meetings. "I don't always see a spirit of cooperation among board members," she said. "They shouldn't get caught up in personalities."

Mrs. Carpenter, 31, of 1581 Maplewood, Hanover Park, is a substitute teacher in Dist. 54.

• Referendum. "A balanced budget is the only way to go for a school district," Mrs. Carpenter said. "The board should come back with the referendum as fast as they can, in the spring. But they will have to do some explaining, and let people know that the referendum won't be the answer to every problem.

"People should have been made aware of the alternatives (to passing the referendum) in the general sense. It should have been said that class size would have to be raised, mobiles closed, kids bused, and the lunch program cut," Mrs. Carpenter said.

• Administration center. "There is money that can be saved by putting the administration all under one roof," Mrs. Carpenter said. "The control would also be tighter."

• Budget cuts. "This district has enjoyed an affluent time. Some things previously considered benefits are now taken for granted. We need to get the kids to have a good self-image and to teach them their basic skills," Mrs. Carpenter said.

Mrs. Carpenter said, however, that music, art and physical education "are absolute musts — they develop the personality of the child. The bottom line is to treat the kids like individuals." The Individually Gifted Education program is "excellent," she said.

Elizabeth Carpenter

• Teachers union. Mrs. Carpenter said unions "serve to broaden your scope, keep you up on your profession."

• Teacher salaries. The pay of teachers in Dist. 54 is "comparable, maybe somewhat higher" than teachers elsewhere. Having parity between the elementary school teachers and high school teachers would be "asking one of the districts to give up their right to negotiate."

Leslie Kleiman

Leslie Kleiman is a teacher in Elgin who believes her educational experience would be an asset to the board.

Mrs. Kleiman wants to involve the community in board matters and improve the committee-of-the-whole system, which she calls "threatening" to the public. She believes the board should pay as much attention to curriculum evaluation as to finances.

Mrs. Kleiman, 26, of 463 Newcastle Ln., Hoffman Estates, is a learning disabilities teacher.

• Finances. Mrs. Kleiman favors maintaining a balanced budget. "Deficit spending is unrealistic for a school district," she said.

• Referendum. A referendum should be held again "because we need the money," Mrs. Kleiman said. "But the board had better inform the public what will happen to programs if it does not pass."

• Budget cuts. Mrs. Kleiman does not favor any cuts that affect educational programs, like learning resource teachers and the Individually Guided Education programs. She believes the trend toward individualized education is very important, as is making sure the district's students are well-rounded. Cuts would have to be made in items such as "travel, after-school activities, and some consultants." She would like to see the gifted, environmental and learning center programs expanded if more funds become available.

• Teachers' union. Mrs. Kleiman said unions "are necessary types of things." She belongs to the Elgin teachers' union but said if she were elected to the board, she would be able to view her union and the Dist. 54 union as "two separate entities. I have to look at it objectively."

• Teacher salaries. Teachers in Dist. 54 receive "an average salary compared to other districts," Mrs. Kleiman said.

Leslie Kleiman

• Teachers' strike. "Some kind of impasse procedure has to be developed" to prevent strikes in the future, Mrs. Kleiman said. She said she was in favor of a neutral third party entering negotiations which had come to a standstill.

Mrs. Kleiman said she would not cut off negotiations with striking teachers, but would push to start negotiations early so they do not continue into September. She said she would not seek a court injunction against teachers and would not seek to dismiss them.

Arlene Czajkowski

Arlene Czajkowski, who was narrowly defeated in school elections last year, said she is running again because she is "still interested in the board and wants to make sure the children are getting 'the best possible education for their parents' tax dollars."

Mrs. Czajkowski, 44, lives at 727 Crest Ave., Roselle.

• Finances. Mrs. Czajkowski is not in favor of deficit spending. "Once you dig a hole, it only gets deeper and harder to get out of," she said.

• Referendum. "The last referendum was poorly planned," Mrs. Czajkowski said. As president of the PTA Council, she said she told the board that there were "a lot of unanswered questions." When people asked what the alternatives to passing the referendum were, they didn't have an answer.

Mrs. Czajkowski would like to see the referendum brought back "not hastily, but only after it's been well researched." She said it should be better explained that the board does not necessarily have to use the entire amount of the tax increase if finances improve.

• Administration center. The district should make every effort to build an adequate center with the $700,000 it has, Mrs. Czajkowski said. "We need an administration center. We're such a large district that administration would be much easier" if the administrators were under one roof, she said.

• Budget cuts. The first cut to be made should be the lunch program, said Mrs. Czajkowski, who would prefer to return to the parent-paid lunch program where most of the children went home to lunch.

"The education programs are last on the list" of cuts Mrs. Czajkowski said. "Maybe there are some positions that if we are really pinched we don't need," she said, such as some consultants, the environmentalist and career awareness consultant. The Individually Guided Education program might also be an area to cut, she said.

• Teachers union. "Collective bargaining is fine," Mrs. Czajkowski said. "We're much too large a district to say to the teachers, 'This is what you get.'"

• Teacher salaries. Teachers in Dist. 54 are "doing well" in their salaries, Mrs. Czajkowski believes. "Parity would be nice, but it's an economic fact of life that we can only do so much with the money that's available."

Mary Lund

Mary Lund wants to "see more 'openness' on the part of the board toward the community. She would like to get rid of 'the aura' that citizens feel surrounds the board and allow people more freedom to express their opinions."

The committee-of-the-whole system in "intimidating," Mrs. Lund said, and she would like to go back to the standing committee system to increase community input. She said there has been "a lot of rhetoric signifying nothing" from the board in response to citizens.

Mrs. Lund, 30, lives at 1439 S. Mohawk Dr., Schaumburg.

• Finances. Mrs. Lund does not approve of deficit spending and would like to see the budget "analyzed and reevaluated."

• Referendum. The defeated referendum was "presented poorly" to the public, Mrs. Lund said. She was not convinced of the validity of the administration's five-year forecast and would not like to see another referendum before 1977.

• Administration center. Mrs. Lund said she does not believe the public was informed of all the facts about the planned center. She is "all for" the district "trying to get by with what money they have."

• Budget cuts. "Administration should be cut first, then supplies, this type of item before cutting curriculum and after-school activities," Mrs. Lund said.

"I am not exceptionally pleased" with the education in the district, she said. "I think the basics should be emphasized. It is the responsibility of the board to examine curriculum and express an opinion." New programs should be studied closely "and not jumped into head-long."

• Teachers union. Mrs. Lund does not object to the union. "But I am against the tenure system. Teachers may get by the probationary period who should not have. I would like to see an evaluation of each teacher every three years or so."

• Teacher salaries. Elementary teachers should be paid the same as high school teachers, but "realistically it will have to be done gradually," Mrs. Lund said. Pay in Dist. 54 is average compared to others, she said.

• Teacher strike. "I am all for leaving the door open in negotiations," even during a strike, Mrs. Lund said. But she would seek a court injunction to return the teachers to class and she would seek their dismissal. She favors mediation, and "if all else failed," she would agree to binding arbitration.

Nick Rizzo

Nick Rizzo decided not to use his degree in education to become a teacher, but he believes his education would help him on the board to relate to school matters. My business experience would be helpful on the financial side, he said.

Rizzo said the community has "a lot of questions" on topics like the strike, the referendum and budget cuts "that aren't getting enough answers. There's too much rhetoric going on at the board meetings and not enough finding out what the real problems are."

Rizzo, 26, of 1828 Stockton, Hoffman Estates, is a real estate counselor.

• Finances. "I agree with the conservative position the district has taken in the past," Rizzo said. "I want to stay out of a deficit situation if at all possible. But if it becomes necessary to borrow money to give the proper high quality education, then we should look at all avenues."

• Referendum. "I honestly don't know if we need more money," Rizzo said. "I don't mean to accuse, but there may be money hidden in the depths of the accounting system. It warrants investigation by an outside party at this point."

"If there is a need, we should definitely have another referendum," Rizzo said. "The board failed to make the people aware of the issues" in the last referendum. Rizzo is in favor of parallel budgeting, giving the public the opportunity to see what the district could afford with the extra money, and how it would look without the money.

• Administration center. "The administration is being handicapped in its function by being split up," Rizzo said. He would like to look into whether an architect could be found who could draw up plans for a building that would meet the district's funds and needs.

• Budget cuts. "I don't think you will see any improvement by cutting programs," Rizzo said. "It's fine to cut out waste, but it's ludicrous to say that you can cut athletics and learning resource center teachers because they're line items."

• Teachers' union. "Unions aren't perfect. They're set up to benefit the teachers, not the children," Rizzo said.

• Teacher salaries. "I'd like to see us draw the best teachers to this area, and you normally have to pay the best to get them," Rizzo said.

Dennis Watts

Dennis Watts believes "the community has lost confidence" in the board of education. He said he has to "get involved to see what I would like to see done."

Watts' educational background in industrial relations and his business experience would be assets to the board, he said. He would like to improve communication between the board and the community by having board members "go to the people" by attending meetings of community organizations.

Watts, 33, of 221 Quincy Ct., Schaumburg, works in data processing.

Watts said he also would like to reevaluate a study done several years ago for the district by Northern Illinois University on splitting the district in two along village lines. He said he realizes there are many problems involved, but would like to look at the study again because "one of the problems in Dist. 54 is its size. It's hard for the board to listen" to such a large number of residents.

• Finances. "Finances seem outside local power now. I believe full funding will happen no matter (which gubernatorial candidate) is elected in the fall," Watts said. He said he is in favor of a balanced budget but does not object to borrowing "on a temporary basis." He said he would rather borrow temporarily than cut programs now "and have to reconstruct 12 months later if we get full funding."

• Budget cuts. Watts said he is a "fundamentalist" who believes in stressing the basics. While he calls the basic education in Dist. 54 "outstanding," he would like to see more emphasis placed on noncollege-oriented subjects such as home economics and industrial arts. "Less than half of the kids who are graduating today are going to college. They have to make a living too," he said.

• Teachers union. Because of his industrial relations background, Watts said he would "volunteer" to work with the teachers union. He said teachers have the right to "address their problems" through a union.

• Teacher salaries. While Watts favors paying teachers in the elementary and high school levels the same salaries, he said this year "we cannot afford to completely close that gap. But we can take it in steps."

Dennis Watts

• Teacher strike. Watts said he believes "wholeheartedly" in the bargaining process. He said "the door should always be kept open" and cutting off negotiations "under any conditions" even during a strike "is not acceptable." He said "at the point of complete impasse between the teachers strike" he would favor binding arbitration with a mutually agreed-upon arbitrator.

Isolde Smith

Isolde Smith has been involved in education through PTA groups throughout the country and feels capable of handling the district's finances and forming opinions with an open mind.

Raised in Germany and coming to the U.S. as a teen-ager, Mrs. Smith firmly believes that "the opportunity for everyone to get an equal education is the best thing the U.S. has going for it." She wants the community to be more involved in school affairs, and wants to open direct lines of communication from the board to the community.

Mrs. Smith, 41, of 327 Langley Dr., Schaumburg, is a master tailor.

• Referendum. Mrs. Smith wants a balanced budget in Dist. 54, and she is in favor of a tax increase referendum for the education and operations, building and maintenance funds "as soon as possible."

"The last referendum was presented very badly," she said. "It was not made plain why the money was needed. We've been led to believe this district is well-off. Then there was no information on why we are having this financial crisis." She objected to being informed about the referendum through "notes crumpled in the kids lunch bags" and thought direct mail would have been more effective.

• Administration center. "The building is desperately needed. You can't run a district of this size from trailers put together," Mrs. Smith said. If, after more evaluation, the district believes it needs more money to build a good center, she would approve a referendum to provide it.

• Budget cuts. Mrs. Smith believes district programs are "well-designed, and I would not cut them." She would not cut the lunch program, but would work on using community volunteers as lunchroom supervisors and in as many other capacities as possible.

Isolde Smith

She agrees with most of the budget cuts proposed by the administration since they do not directly affect educational programs.

• Teachers union. "Teachers have the right to be represented as one voice through a union," Mrs. Smith said.

• Teacher salaries. "The increase in the cost of living is constantly on our minds as well as on the teachers'," Mrs. Smith said. "But the teachers' negotiations are so tough that they pretty well get what they want."

'Immediate action' urged in air safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pilots and flight controllers tend to ignore storms near the ground they would dodge in the air. Sometimes the results are catastrophic, a federal safety board said Thursday.

Citing four landing approach crashes that killed 246 people, the National Transportation Safety Board said some corrective steps have been taken by the Federal Aviation Administration but many recommendations have been ignored.

"More positive and more immediate actions are necessary," the board said.

It recommended that the FAA adopt 14 specific measures, from more pilot and controller training to installation of equipment to warn of dangerous turbulence near airports.

IT ALSO REVIVED a 1974 recommendation, rejected then by the FAA but favored by the Professional Air Traffic Control Organization, that controllers be allowed to deny landing or takeoff clearances because of storms.

The board's action was prompted by the Eastern Air Lines Boeing 727 crash at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport that killed 113 persons last June 24. The jet, pushed down by storm winds, hit the runway approach lights.

The board noted that pilots detour at least 20 miles around storm cells at cruising altitude, and said that in landing "there appears to be a tendency . . . to let the desire for an uninterrupted flow of traffic interfere with an objective evaluation of the hazard potential of approaches through or under thunderstorms.

"Consequently, approaches are being conducted through these hazardous conditions during what is perhaps the most critical phase of flight.

THE BOARD recommended new storm research and the prompt development of equipment to measure storm violence within 5 miles of major runways and show wind direction and speed within one mile of runways.

Until then, it said, the FAA should require lighted windsocks about 1,000 feet from the end of major runways and instruments to measure surface wind speed at the end of runways.

The board said problems similar to those at JFK were found in a 1972 crash at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., of an Eastern Air Lines DC9 that injured three persons; the 1973 crash at St. Louis of an Ozark Air Lines FH227 that killed 37; and the 1974 crash at Pago Pago, Samoa, of a Pan Am Boeing 707 that killed 96.

Fire chief urges guard be present at large meetings

Rolling Meadows Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty has proposed the city adopt an assembly ordinance that would require the posting of a fire guard at large meetings.

"The fire guard's job would be more than just determining that the crowd does not exceed the capacity of the meeting area," Fogarty said.

Fogarty has asked the city police and fire committee to consider recommending to the full city council adoption of an assembly ordinance.

"I would like to see such an ordinance on the city books before graduation exercises start this summer," he said.

FOGARTY SAID Rolling Meadows and Sacred Heart High School officials have been cooperative and do not oppose the assembly ordinance.

He said the proposed ordinance is not just aimed at high schools, but would apply to any facility in which large groups of people would gather.

"I am using the high schools as an example mainly because of the large turnout for graduation exercises," Fogarty said.

Fogarty said he is working with school officials and members of the police and fire committee "to come up with an ordinance that will ensure public safety and yet not be too restrictive."

The chief said he has not determined how large a gathering would require a fire guard. "We are attempting to determine that figure and also who would pay for the guard service," Fogarty said.

"WE MAY REQUEST that a guard be present for every 800 or 200 or 3,000 people; I'm not sure what figure," he said.

Fogarty said public safety can be threatened even when the capacity of a gathering place is not exceeded. "The fire guard would make sure no smoking rules are enforced and that exits and aisles are not blocked as so often happens," Fogarty said.

Fogarty said merely posting a building capacity limit is not enough of a safety factor.

Robert Hoese, Rolling Meadows High School principal, said Thursday he does not oppose an assembly ordinance.

"We are concerned about safety and have always had a good relationship with the city departments and will continue that relationship," he said.

"Our only concern is that the ordinance, if it is too restrictive, could become an expensive problem for us," he said.

"We are also waiting for the ordinance to be reviewed by the fire and police committee to find out if we are going to be required to have a fire guard for 500 people or 3,000 or for our own school nighttime activities," Hoese said.

City one of first to give new test to cop applicants

Thomas Scanlan, chairman of the Rolling Meadows board of fire and police commissioners, says the city is one of the first communities in the Northwest suburban area to take advantage of a new entrance examination for police.

"The selection of competent law enforcement personnel has long been a sensitive area for administrators. This new examination process is a giant step forward in the fair selection of qualified personnel," Scanlan said this week.

by LEA TONKIN

Chicago area truck drivers are expected to stay on the job today as contract talks continue in Arlington Heights between Teamster union negotiators and industry negotiators.

Labor Sec. William J. Usery Jr., continuing his efforts to reach a national contract agreement, said Thursday that "the time is fast approaching to make a decision on the Taft-Hartley Act." Under Taft-Hartley the President can call for an 80-day cooling off period to halt the strike.

"There still are some wide differences of opinion. I assume if we don't reach an agreement we're in for several days of strikes, but it could change at any time," Usery said. "The overriding issue will soon become to protect the American public."

THE 400,000 TEAMSTERS represented at Arlington Heights haul 60 per cent of the nation's manufactured goods. The auto, steel, beer, bread, food and gasoline industries were likely to be immediately affected.

There was speculation Usery might leave today, bringing an effective end to the current talks and opening the way to federal action.

Meanwhile, an auto industry spokesman said Thursday that a prolonged strike would force a complete shutdown of the auto industry within a week, idling more than 700,000 workers in the United States and Canada.

Interruption of raw materials, particularly steel, and some of the 15,000 parts needed to assemble a modern automobile was felt immediately at some operations. The major effects, however, would not be felt until Monday.

THE STATES OF Michigan and Ohio would be hardest hit by auto plant shutdowns. More than 350,000 auto workers are employed in Michigan and another 125,000 work in Ohio facilities.

Industry analysts warned that a lengthy strike could cripple the industry's slow recovery from a two-year slump.

Automakers plan to build more than 2.4 million cars in the April-June quarter — the most since 1973 — to meet the strengthening spring demand for new cars.

Don't get too smug—a big snowfall is still possible

by JILL BETTNER

The capricious whims of the biggest prankster of them all — Old Man Winter — has taught most Northwest suburbanites never to be too smug when the first signs of spring appear.

Like a temperamental star not content to see the curtain come down after a commanding three- or four-month run, he often blusters back for just one more moment of glory and captures center stage with an unexpected blizzard — the bigger the better.

It was exactly one year ago today a sudden and violent storm dumped nearly a foot of white stuff on the Northwest suburbs, snarling traffic and stranding hundreds in offices and shopping centers overnight. Four died as a result of the storm.

IF THE WEATHER HOLDS, with

temperatures hovering around the lower 40s, the odds are that we'll have nothing worse than rain and a few flurries this spring. However, even the forecasters for the National Weather Service refuse to guarantee we won't have at least one more white whopper.

"I wouldn't wager anything on that," said forecaster James Buchanan. "It's really hard to tell. In April, we can still get one or two snows. It would have to get a little bit colder and we would need a low pressure area moving through the Chicago area."

Buchanan said there is no snow in the forecast for at least the next four days, but that's about as far ahead as the agency can predict.

The weather service was right on the button last year with advance warnings of the April 2 storm that started about noon and steadily gained momentum the rest of the afternoon.

TRAVELERS AT O'Hare Airport slept curled up on benches or stretched out on the floor in the terminals. It was more than 24 hours before the airport, closed for only the third time in history, was back in full operation again.

Besides mere inconvenience, however, the storm also caused its share of tragedy. In Wheeling, a three-year-old boy wandered outside at the height of the storm while his brother slept. Hours later the boy was dead of exposure. He was just one of four area persons whose deaths were directly attributed to the blizzard.

The National Weather Service called the blizzard the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967, when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

The Great Storm of '67 was one of those once-in-a-lifetime experiences. Almost everyone affected by the big snow remembers where he was and what he was doing when it hit — and tells his experience every time it snows.

With a little luck during the rest of the fickle month of April, maybe all the out-of-town friends and relatives who know our tales by heart won't have to listen to them again until next fall.

Aftermath of the storm last April 2. Will there be an encore?

City one of first to give new police entrance test

of a three-year study conducted by the Industrial Relations Center of the University of Chicago under John Furcon.

The project was funded by the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission for $120,000 and required the cooperation of the Illinois Assn. of Chiefs of Police and the Illinois Assn. of Boards of Fire and Police Commissioners.

Scanlan said Illinois recently became the first state to have available on a state-wide basis the validated entrance examination for police officers which will predict their on-the-job behavior.

THE TEST was developed by the Bureau of Testing Services, police service evaluation division, which is affiliated with the Illinois Assn. of Boards of Fire and Police Commissioners.

Scanlan said the association recently announced the formation of the bureau of testing services, a non-profit organization, to distribute the test and service communities across the nation.

"We are very glad to be able to use the new test in the city's May 22 police examination," Scanlan said.

Scanlan said the board of fire and police commissioners will hold written examinations to establish an eligibility list for the police department.

"We have a blank list at this point and must begin testing so we can obtain candidates for the department," Scanlan said.

Officials still seek bikeway funds

Efforts are continuing among officials in nine Northwest suburbs to gain federal funds to develop an interconnecting bikeways system.

Officials from several of the towns met this week to discuss progress in their effort and it appears the Village of Palatine is leading the way in the program.

Roger Bjorvik, coordination chairman and Palatine representative for the program, said Palatine has completed a rough draft of a preliminary application for funds, a step which all the communities must take before a joint application can be submitted to the federal government.

THE PRELIMINARY application outlines what amount of money the local community will furnish toward development of the program including costs for engineering and actual construction.

The village board and park district of each participant community must approve a preliminary application in order for the program to receive federal funds.

Bjorvik said funds are available under the Federal Aid to Urban Systems grant. Under provisions of the grant, the federal government pays 70 per cent of the program cost. Local government is responsible for the remaining 30 per cent.

The preliminary application would outline the local governments means of funding its share of the total program.

PALATINE SO FAR is the only one of the nine communities to prepare a preliminary application draft, Bjorvik said. Other communities in the program are Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Mount Prospect, Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Elk Grove Village, Des Plaines and Hanover Park.

Bjorvik said Palatine has made a copy of its draft available to the communities so they can use it as a guide in developing their own drafts. Representatives from the communities will meet June 1 at Harper College to review the drafts.

In the meantime, Bjorvik said Palatine will proceed with the next step of the program, getting approval of the application draft from the village board and park district board. Working with Bjorvik on the project are Robert Rudd, village administrative assistant, and Fred Hall, park district director.

When all the village applications are completed and approved, a joint application will be drafted to submit to the Northwest Municipal Conference, administrator for the program. The municipal conference will serve as the applicant to the federal government for funds.

BECAUSE THE municipal conference will submit the application to the federal government, approval of the preliminary drafts by the nine villages is required. Each of the villages is a member of the conference.

'Aquarists' in love with exotic fish

by DIANE MERMIGAS
Most people who love fish go to extremes. They either gush over Friday fish fry specials or resort to raising something like 10,000 exotic pet fish.

Then there are people like Troy Benson who does both.

Benson is president of the Suburban Aquarists Society, a Mount Prospect-based group of about 100 area residents many of whom are fanatics about raising and breeding fish, and most of them have no reservations about eating fish as part of a regular diet.

SOME OF THE more enthusiastic members name each of their pet fish and talk to them when it's feeding or tank cleaning time. Others display their prize pets in odd-shaped fish bowls built into coffee tables, lamps or room dividers.

The organization started in 1961, has become a focal point for those with a diversified interest in fish collections.

Most of Benson's 10,000 pet fish for instance are angel and catfish which are kept in about 25 tanks placed throughout the first floor of his home. One of the largest tanks holds 160 gallons of water and is 8 feet long and 2 feet high, he said.

It's a chore raising that many fish — feeding them two to five times each day (depending on the kind of fish), cleaning the water every day, and completely cleaning the tanks every six months.

SOMETIMES THE tanks burst from the pressure and both fish and water end up on the living room floor, he said. It is a necessity to constantly watch the tanks, the water, and the fish for a change in conditions or a change in their health.

So why even bother with the hobby? Why not just raise one or two common goldfish in a bowl and be satisfied?

"It's a challenge to grow and breed them. It's a good hobby and it's fun for the kids. I came home one day about 20 years ago from a fishing trip with some live fish and tried to keep them going for a while," Benson said.

"When they got too big, I just got some little ones and one thing led to another. I guess they make quiet, easy going pets," he said.

AND IF THERE'S one thing Benson knows for sure about fish after all this, it's that they are anything but dumb.

"You can train a fish to do tricks. I hold food out over them tanks and they jump out of the water, even over a stick or through a hoop, to grab it," Benson said.

"They can see me coming down the stairs into the room to feed them," he said. "They stick their noses to the glass and wag their fins back and forth wildly. They know what's going on."

Benson is hardly alone in his doing over fish. Fish lovers from the Northwest suburbs Chicago as far north-west as Rockford and as far south-west as Downers Grove, meet monthly to exchange tales.

THE GROUP meets every fourth Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Mount Prospect Country Club, 600 S. See-Gwen Ave. and requests a family membership of $10 a year ($8 for senior and $4 for junior members).

A lecture or movie pertaining to fish is always followed by the auctioning of members' fish at the monthly events.

The society offers a host of year-round social activities which include an area-wide fish auction that usually attracts more than 200 persons and provides an exchange of at least 3,000 fish, Benson said.

Most of the members exchange fish and work together on breeding techniques. Others merely study fish without every raising any.

MEMBERS WHO raise or breed fish can spend from about $80 to several thousands of dollars in one year for supplies and equipment, he said.

"A fish can cost you from about 10 cents for the common, dimstore goldfish to about $300,000 for an Oriental Koi fish that has identical scale patterns on either of its sides," Benson said.

It can be a hobby or it can be a full time job, but it is tied with photography as the most popular pastime in this country today, he said.

The hobby is as pleasurable for senior citizens as it is for teens whose interest can eventually lead them to a lifetime profession.

KEITH PETERSON, 15, of Des Plaines, said he has filled 12 tanks with fish in four years, and plans to major in ichthyology, the study of fish, in college.

He can identify everything from a quick reproducing guppy to a Lion fish with poisonous spines. He can tell you if a fish is cannibalistic or if its life expectancy is 10 or 20 years.

What Keith can't explain as easily is why he dreams about working in a Florida fish farm, researching and breeding fish.

Village panel OKs Fotomat store

The Arlington Heights Village Board's public health and safety committee has recommended that Fotomat Corp. be permitted to construct a store in the parking lot of the Surrey Ridge Shopping Center.

If the building is vacated by Fotomat, it should be removed within 90 days, the committee's recommendation to the village board said.

In a related action, the committee directed the village administration to develop a list of maintenance improvements needed at the shopping center.

The Surrey Ridge Homeowners Assn. which recently complained about the maintenance of the center, will be asked to assist the village in establishing a list of priorities for improving the appearance of the center.

Help asked to end parks vandal woes

Hoffman Estates Park District Director Allen Binder has asked for co-operation from residents living near parks to help curb vandalism.

Binder has sent out correspondence to many residents asking them to contact police officials if they hear or witness anything suspicious around park facilities.

The letter was prompted by damage last weekend in Cottonwood Park, Hassell Road and Parkview Lane where vandals "completely shattered" a $1,000 timberform structure, he said.

"WE DON'T KNOW exactly how they did it, but it looks as though whoever smashed the structure used axes or sledgehammers," Binder said. "We found over four cases of empty beer cans at Cottonwood."

The Cottonwood Park incident is the first "serious act of vandalism to hit the park district since October" when the district bus was damaged and its windows smashed, Binder said.

We usually get a spree of vandalism in the park during the months of April and March," Binder said. "What we want to do is make the public aware that these things are going on and urge them to contact the police if they know of any vandalism."

Binder said the park district doesn't have $1,000 "here and there" to spend on acts of vandalism.

"It's the parks now. But it may be homes next," Binder said.

'Immediate action' urged in air safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pilots and flight controllers tend to ignore storms near the ground they would dodge in the air. Sometimes the results are catastrophic, a federal safety board said Thursday.

Citing four landing approach crashes that killed 246 people, the National Transportation Safety Board said some corrective steps have been taken by the Federal Aviation Administration but many recommendations have been ignored.

"More positive and more immediate actions are necessary," the board said.

It recommended that the FAA adopt 14 specific measures, from more pilot and controller training to installation of equipment to warn of dangerous turbulence near airports.

IT ALSO REVIVED a 1974 recommendation, rejected then by the FAA but favored by the Professional Air Traffic Control Organization, that controllers be allowed to deny landing or takeoff clearances because of storms.

The board's action was prompted by the Eastern Air Lines Boeing 727 crash at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport that killed 113 persons last June 24. The jet, pushed down by storm winds, hit the runway approach lights.

The board noted that pilots detour at least 20 miles around storm cells at cruising altitude, and said that in landing "there appears to be a tendency . . . to let the desire for an uninterrupted flow of traffic interfere with an objective evaluation of the hazard potential of approaches through or under thunderstorms.

"Consequently, approaches are being conducted through these hazardous conditions during what is perhaps the most critical phase of flight."

THE BOARD recommended new storm research and the prompt development of equipment to measure storm violence within 6 miles of major runways and show wind direction and speed within one mile of runways.

Until then, it said, the FAA should require lighted windsocks about 1,000 feet from the end of major runways and instruments to measure surface wind speed at the end of runways.

The board said problems similar to those at JFK were found in a 1972 crash at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., of an Eastern Air Lines DC9 that injured three persons; the 1973 crash at St. Louis of an Ozark Air Lines FH27 that killed 37; and the 1974 crash at Pago Pago, Samoa, of a Pan Am Boeing 707 that killed 96.

Business permit crackdown nets 74 tickets today

Citations will be issued today to 74 Palatine businessmen who failed to purchase their 1976 business licenses by the March 31 deadline.

Robert Rudd, village administrative assistant, said there was a 35 per cent compliance rate with the village business license ordinance which he termed "about average."

Businessmen receiving citations will be required to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court in approximately 30 days. Rudd said the village will ask the court to issue a fine and require the businessmen to purchase the licenses.

Officials still seek funding for bikeways

Efforts are continuing among officials in nine Northwest suburbs to gain federal funds to develop an interconnecting bikeways system.

Officials from several of the towns met this week to discuss progress in their effort and it appears the Village of Palatine is leading the way in the program.

Roger Bjorvik, coordination chairman and Palatine representative for the program, said Palatine has completed a rough draft of a preliminary application for funds, a step which all the communities must take before a joint application can be submitted to the federal government.

THE PRELIMINARY application outlines what amount of money the local community will furnish toward development of the program including costs for engineering and actual construction.

The village board and park district of each participant community must approve a preliminary application in order for the program to receive federal funds.

Bjorvik said funds are available under the Federal Aid to Urban Systems grant. Under provisions of the grant, (Continued on Page 3)

He added that he expects several of the businessmen to obtain the license before the court date.

Under the ordinance, which was adopted last year, fines for not obtaining a business license range from $25 to $500.

Nearly 30 businessmen who failed to obtain their 1976 business license recently were fined $15 at the discretion of the court and required to obtain the license.

Rudd said business license application forms and notices of a March 1 deadline were sent to 500 businesses within the village in mid-February. Those were followed with past due notices that were sent out on March 15, warning businessmen that unless they complied with the license requirement by March 31, they would be subject to a penalty.

Rudd said none of the 1976 business licenses have been obtained under formal protest in contrast to 1975 when several businessmen filed letters of protest causing the village board to draft a new fee schedule.

Business license fees now range from $35 to $225. The administration has budgeted $30,000 in business license revenue in the proposed 1976-77 budget.

The business license fees are designed to cover the village's cost of providing police, fire and other municipal services to the business community.

Truckers here roll; talks go on

by LEA TONKIN

Chicago area truck drivers are expected to stay on the job today as contract talks continue in Arlington Heights between Teamster union negotiators and industry negotiators.

Labor Sec. William J. Usery Jr., continuing his efforts to reach a national contract agreement, said Thursday that "the time is fast approaching to make a decision on the Taft-Hartley Act." Under Taft-Hartley the President can call for an 80-day cooling off period to halt the strike.

"There still are some wide differences of opinion. I assume if we don't reach an agreement we're in for several days of strikes, but it could change at any time," Usery said. "The overriding issue will soon become to protect the American public."

THE 400,000 TEAMSTERS represented at Arlington Heights haul 60 per cent of the nation's manufactured goods. The auto, steel, beer, bread, food and gasoline industries were likely to be immediately affected.

There was speculation Usery might leave today, bringing an effective end to the current talks and opening the way to federal action.

Meanwhile, an auto industry spokesman said Thursday that a prolonged strike would force a complete shutdown of the auto industry within a week, idling more than 700,000 workers in the United States and Canada.

Interruption of raw materials, particularly steel, and some of the 15,000 parts needed to assemble a modern automobile was felt immediately at some operations. The major effects, however, would not be felt until Monday.

THE STATES OF Michigan and Ohio would be hardest hit by auto plant shutdowns. More than 350,000 auto workers are employed in Michigan and another 125,000 work in Ohio facilities.

Industry analysts warned that a lengthy strike could cripple the industry's slow recovery from a two-year slump.

Automakers plan to build more than 2.4 million cars in the April-June quarter — the most since 1973 — to meet the strengthening spring demand for new cars.

"THE OVERRIDING issue will soon become to protect the American public," U.S. Labor Sec. William Usery said Thursday. Usery briefed reporters on Teamster-trucking company talks in Arlington Heights.

Don't get too smug—a big snowfall is still possible

by JILL BETTNER

The capricious whims of the biggest prankster of them all — Old Man Winter — has taught most Northwest suburbanites never to be too smug when the first signs of spring appear.

Like a temperamental star not content to see the curtain come down after a commanding three- or four-month run, he often blusters back for just one more moment of glory and captures center stage with an unexpected blizzard — the bigger the better.

It was exactly one year ago today a sudden and violent storm dumped nearly a foot of white stuff on the Northwest suburbs, snarling traffic and stranding hundreds in offices and shopping centers overnight. Four died as a result of the storm.

IF THE WEATHER HOLDS, with

temperatures hovering around the lower 40s, the odds are that we'll have nothing worse than rain and a few flurries this spring. However, even the forecasters for the National Weather Service refuse to guarantee we won't have at least one more white whopper.

"I wouldn't wager anything on that," said forecaster James Buchanan. "It's really hard to tell. In April, we can still get one or two snows. It would have to get a little bit colder and we would need a low pressure area moving through the Chicago area."

Buchanan said there is no snow in the forecast for at least the next four days, but that's about as far ahead as the agency can predict.

The weather service was right on the button last year with advance warnings of the April 2 storm that started about noon and steadily gained momentum the rest of the afternoon.

TRAVELERS AT O'Hare Airport slept curled up on benches or stretched out on the floor in the terminals. It was more than 24 hours before the airport, closed for only the third time in history, was back in full operation again.

Besides mere inconvenience, however, the storm also caused its share of tragedy. In Wheeling, a three-year-old boy wandered outside at the height of the storm while his brother slept. Hours later the boy was dead of exposure. He was just one of four area persons whose deaths were directly attributed to the blizzard.

The National Weather Service called the blizzard the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967, when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

The Great Storm of '67 was one of those once-in-a-lifetime experiences. Almost everyone affected by the big snow remembers where he was and what he was doing when it hit — and tells his experience every time it snows.

With a little luck during the rest of the fickle month of April, maybe all the out-of-town friends and relatives who know our tales by heart won't have to listen to them again until next fall.

Aftermath of the storm last April 2. Will there be an encore?

The Conant High School concert and symphonic bands will present a spring concert at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the school, 700 E. Cougar Tr., Hoffman Estates. Tickets will be available at the door for $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

the federal government pays 70 per cent of the program cost. Local government is responsible for the remaining 30 per cent.

The preliminary application would outline the local governments means of funding its share of the total program.

PALATINE SO FAR is the only one of the nine communities to prepare a preliminary application draft. Bjorvik said. Other communities in the program are Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Mount Prospect, Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Elk Grove Village, Des Plaines and Hanover Park.

Bjorvik said Palatine has made a copy of its draft available to the communities so they can use it as a guide in developing their own drafts. Representatives from the communities will meet June 1 at Harper College to review the drafts.

In the meantime, Bjorvik said Palatine will proceed with the next step of the program, getting approval of the application draft from the village board and park district board. Working with Bjorvik on the project are Robert Rudd, village administrative assistant, and Fred Hall, park district director.

When all the village applications are completed and approved, a joint application will be drafted to submit to the Northwest Municipal Conference, administrator for the program. The municipal conference will serve as the applicant to the federal government for funds.

BECAUSE THE municipal conference will submit the application to the federal government, approval of the preliminary drafts by the nine villages is required. Each of the villages is a member of the conference.

Changes must be in writing

Village acts to simplify budget talks

Palatine trustees will be asked to submit proposals for changes in the proposed 1976-77 budget on official change recommendation sheets.

Trustee Richard W. Fonte, chairman of the administration, legislation and finance committee, said he is distributing the sheets so trustees will have a formal procedure for presenting their change proposals to the board.

At the board's first budget review session last week, Fonte suggested the budget be examined in total and asked that trustees with specific recommendations for changes submit their suggestions in writing. The form to be distributed will simplify that written process, he said.

FONTE ASKED for written proposals after Trustees Bryan P. Coughlin and Fred Zajonc charged that $1 million could be cut from the budget by reducing staff.

The change recommendation sheets will simplify the process because they will provide a form for identifying items by the page on which they appear in the budget, the item program number and a space for the proposed increase or decrease, Fonte said.

Fonte said he has asked that the forms be returned to him by April 12 so they can be reviewed by his committee that night during a regularly scheduled meeting.

The board is scheduled to complete its third and final budget review session April 11.

The trustee said although all departments will have been reviewed by April 12, trustees will still be able to comment on proposed expenditures which have not received final determination, including such items as a special census.

THE PROPOSED budget is more than $7.89 million, about 9 per cent higher than the 1975-76 budget. The board already has approved budgets for the administration, finance, health, civil defense and fire departments.

Cuts were made in several of these departments and the others were approved unchanged.

Yet to be reviewed are the village clerk's budget and the public works department. The board also must complete review of the police department budget.

The board must approve the budget before the start of the fiscal year, which begins May 1.

Experimental theater talk

Experimental theater in Chicago is the topic of Friday's session of the "Who is Chicago?" artists' lecture-performance series at Oakton Community College.

Members of the Wisdom Bridge Theater Co. will perform selected scenes from their current production, "The Wizard of ID," and discuss Chicago's climate for experimental theater from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in Building 3, Room 308 on the Oakton campus, 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove.

All sessions are open to the public. For information, call 967-5120, ext. 241.

Help asked to end parks vandal woes

Hoffman Estates Park District Director Allen Binder has asked for cooperation from residents living near parks to help curb vandalism.

Binder has sent out correspondence to many residents asking them "to contact police officials if they hear or witness anything suspicious" around park facilities.

The letter was prompted by damage last weekend in Cottonwood Park, Hassell Road and Parkview Lane, where vandals "completely shattered" a $1,000 timberform structure, he said.

"WE DON'T KNOW exactly how they did it, but it looks as though whoever smashed the structure used axes or sledgehammers," Binder said. "We found over four cases of empty beer cans at Cottonwood."

The Cottonwood Park incident is the first "serious act of vandalism to hit the park district since October" when the district bus was damaged and its windows smashed, Binder said.

"We usually get a spree of vandalism in the park during the months of April and March," Binder said. "What we want to do is make the public aware that these things are going on and urge them to contact the police if they know of any vandalism."

Binder said the park district doesn't have $1,000 "here and there" to spend on acts of vandalism.

"It's the parks now. But it may be home next," Binder said.

City census next week of annexed land

Des Plaines will begin a special census next week of recently-annexed areas that is expected to make the city eligible for more than $2,000 annually in additional tax revenue.

City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach said the special census probably will begin Tuesday after officials from the U.S. Census Bureau test and train prospective census takers. The census, which will cost an estimated $1,470, is expected to take about a week.

Mrs. Rohrbach said four or five of the 10 persons that applied will be hired as census takers. They will be paid 13 cents a name.

CITY OFFICIALS estimate the city has added about 2,000 residents since the 1970 census when the city's population was 57,239.

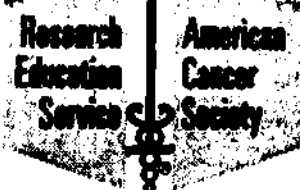

Most of the city's additional population is in a residential area near Oakton and Elmhurst roads, several apartment complexes near Elmhurst and Algonquin roads, two trailer parks on Rand Road and a trailer park near Mount Prospect and Higgins roads.

The additional funds would come to the city in the form of state income taxes, state motor fuel taxes and possibly federal revenue-sharing funds. The funds are disbursed to the city based on its population. The population figures, however, must be verified by a federal census.

City Comptroller Duane Blietz said if the population is verified, the city would receive about $21,000 in additional state income tax and about $21,000 in motor fuel taxes.

Mrs. Rohrbach said if the census goes as planned, the results should be available by July.

City officials rejected a proposal to delay the census until the summer so that college students home for vacation could be counted. Michael Richardson, city director of planning and zoning, said the effect of students would be minimal.

Actress to head workshop

Jan Bina, Chicago actress and radio personality, will lead a five-week segment of the Artists' Workshop at Oakton Community College, 7900 N. Nagle Ave., Morton Grove.

The series gives students and interested community members the opportunity to meet Chicago-area artists, dramatists, musicians and writers to discuss each medium.

The sessions, free to the public, are held from 11 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays. For information, call 967-5120, ext. 241.

Teacher, program cuts due Saturday

Budget ax soon to fall in Dist. 15

The Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education will decide Saturday what items to cut from the 1976-77 budget.

The board is considering eliminating 39 teachers, closing Cardinal Drive School, and cutting special services and instructional programs to prevent a $2.2 million deficit in the coming year.

The board will meet as a committee-of-the-whole at 9 a.m. Saturday to vote on budget cuts proposed by the administration. The meeting will be at Plum Grove Junior High School gymnasium, 26 W. Old Plum Grove Rd., Rolling Meadows.

ABOUT 200 PARENTS and teachers attended Dist. 15 budget hearings Tuesday at Palatine Hills Junior High School, 1100 N. Smith Rd., Palatine, to protest proposed cutbacks.

Several parents objected to proposed cuts in the special education program. The board is considering reducing the number of learning disabilities teachers, speech therapists and diagnostic reading teachers.

"If two self-contained learning disabilities classes are cut, that will bring hyperactive, disruptive children back into the regular classroom with teachers who are unprepared to teach these children," one parent said.

Several parents of children attending Cardinal Drive School, 2300 Cardinal Dr., Rolling Meadows, voiced their concern over the proposed closing of that school. The board is considering closing Cardinal Drive because of the high cost of renovating the building for safety.

THE BOARD also has received recommendations from Dist. 15 teachers on what budget items to cut.

In a poll taken earlier this month of nearly 500 of Dist. 15's 616 teachers, 342 teachers disagreed with the administration proposal to eliminate 39 teaching jobs.

The majority of the teachers also objected to the proposed cuts in special education programs.

The board plans to consider the teacher and parent opinions in its Saturday decision on budget cuts. Board members Tuesday said they will discuss additional sources of revenue for the district to help prevent a deficit.

Festival brings money—and friends—for St. Colette

by JERRY THOMAS

When the St. Colette's parish festival committee members meet, they need a room as big as a ballfield.

More than 600 persons volunteered to present the annual parish festival that represents the major fund-raising effort for the Rolling Meadows parish.

Ask anyone who has ever chaired a carnival or festival committee and he'll tell you there are usually six workers in a committee of 15 persons — and you're a lucky devil of a chairman if you can find 15 volunteers.

At St. Colette's, it's a different story.

NOT ONLY HAS the parish been successful in recruiting more than 600 workers from within the parish and outside community, but the festival itself is very well attended, and a definite money-maker.

"Making money for the parish may have been how it all started three years ago, when the festival was first thought of, but it's become much more than that," John Rock said. Rock, one of the first chairmen of the event and a city alderman, still is involved as a finance officer for the festival.

Rock said he accepted the cochairmanship with Bob Ubrich the year the festival was proposed and "had no idea what they were talking about, or I probably would not have done it." Rock said he attended "lots of festivals in other parishes that year and decided after seeing what went on that I'd better get busy recruiting volunteers."

"WOULD YOU BELIEVE we got about 500 volunteers and almost the whole community came out to help," he added. "We made money that year and more important, we made friends, and the festival has gotten bigger and better every year," Rock said.

In order to prepare for the four-

'Good Times' tonight at St. Colette

"Let The Good Times Roll," a parish festival at St. Colette Catholic Parish, 3900 Meadows Dr., Rolling Meadows, offers four evening of entertainment at 7:30 p.m. today and Saturday and April 9 and 10.

Food and refreshments are available in a cabaret atmosphere that features five lively new shows.

Tickets may be obtained in advance at $5 per person at the Meadows Pharmacy, 3407 Kirchoff Rd., Central Pharmacy, 675 W. Central Rd., or by phoning Ald. John Rock 259-0114. Tickets also may be obtained for $6 at the door.

This year the festival includes an "All You Can Eat Spaghetti Dinner." The dinner includes spaghetti with meat sauce, garlic bread, dessert and a beverage which will be served in the school basement from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

Adult price is $2 and for children under 12, $1. A festival ticket is not needed to attend the dinner, which will be served all four nights of the festival.

night performance, the parish closes its school for spring vacation April 1-11.

Fire Dept. Lt. Ted Loesch, who is both chairman and performer in one of the shows this year, said one year preparation for the event involved tearing out brick walls that separated classrooms.

"Now we take down removable partitions between classrooms to transform them into cabarets, where four of the five shows are performed," he said.

ADDITIONAL CLASSROOMS are called holding rooms and are used to entertain guests who are waiting to view a show. Entertainment and drinks are available in the "holding rooms."

Loesch said, "When I was in Canada, fishing, my wife signed me up as chairman of a show. I've been a barber, fireman, carpenter, electrician and glazier and here I was, faced with putting on a large-scale theatrical production. I was terrified and talentless," he added.

"Since then I've found out it's been fun and sometime a panic or disappointment, like when your lead singer leaves town a couple of days before the show," he said.

Loesch recruited the Rev. Brian Simpson of the parish, who also is the fire department chaplain, to act in the show as one of the calypso dancers.

"WE ARE ALL amateurs — housewives, city officials young people in the community and guys who do other things for a living and get together to put on the festival," Loesch said.

"I think it's one of the greatest things that happened to St. Colette's," James Niesen said. Niesen, also a former room chairman, talked about how the festival idea began three years ago.

"I was on the school board and a member of the finance committee when we decided the parish needed extra money. We asked people for fund-raising ideas and that's how the festival got its start," Niesen said.

"IT'S BROUGHT the parish money. Last year's festival netted the parish about $20,000 in funds. The money goes into a general fund to help defray expenses of operating the school or any other expense money is needed for. But I think at this point that the best result of the festival is the fact that it makes us all work together," he added.

"As this year's preparation for the festival go into final dress rehearsal, over-all festival chairmen Tony Tarchynski and Ron Weber hope for even a greater money maker.

They say the festival already has succeeded in its other goal — that of bringing the community together.

Veeery interesting — the way Barb Suchecki plays the part.

After the show is over Carol Johnson's pictures will still tell the story.

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Most people who love fish go to extremes. They either gush over Friday fish fry specials or resort to raising something like 10,000 exotic pet fish.

Then there are people like Troy Benson, who does both.

Benson is president of the Suburban Aquarists Society, a Mount Prospect-based group of about 100 area residents, many of whom are fanatics about raising and breeding fish, and most of them have no reservations about eating fish as part of a regular diet.

SOME OF THE more enthusiastic members name each of their pet fish and talk to them when it's feeding or tank-cleaning time. Others display their prize pets in odd-shaped fish bowls built into coffee tables, lamps or room dividers.

The organization, started in 1961, has become a focal point for those with a diversified interest in fish collections.

Most of Benson's 10,000 pet fish, for instance, are angel and calfish which are kept in about 25 tanks placed throughout the first floor of his home. One of the largest tanks holds 160 gallons of water and is 8 feet long and 2 feet high, he said.

It's a chore raising that many fish — feeding them two to five times each day (depending on the kind of fish), cleaning the water every day, and completely cleaning the tanks every six months.

SOMETIMES THE tanks burst from the pressure and both fish and water end up on the living room floor, he said. It is a necessity to constantly watch the tanks, the water and the fish for a change in conditions or a change in their health.

So why even bother with the hobby? Why not just raise one or two common goldfish in a bowl and be satisfied?

"It's a challenge to grow and breed them. It's a good hobby and it's fun for the kids. I came home one day about 20 years ago from a fishing trip with some live fish and tried to keep them going for a while," Benson said.

"When they got too big, I just got some little ones and one thing led to another. I guess they make quiet, easy going pets," he said.

AND IF THERE'S one thing Benson knows for sure about fish after all this, it's that they are anything but dumb.

"You can train a fish to do tricks. I hold food out over their tanks and they jump out of the water, even over a stick or through a hoop, to grab it," Benson said.

"They can see me coming down the stairs into the room to feed them," he said. "They stick their noses to the glass and wag their fins back and forth wildly. They know what's going on."

Benson is hardly alone in his dotting over fish. Fish lovers from the Northwest suburbs, Chicago, as far northwest as Rockford and as far south as Downers Grove, meet monthly to exchange tales.

THE GROUP meets every fourth Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Mount Prospect Country Club, 600 S. See-Gwen Ave., and requests a family membership of $10 a year ($8 for senior and $4 for junior members).

A lecture or movie pertaining to fish is always followed by the auctioning of members' fish at the monthly events.

The society offers a host of year-round social activities which include an areawide fish auction that usually attracts more than 200 persons and provides an exchange of at least 3,000 fish, Benson said.

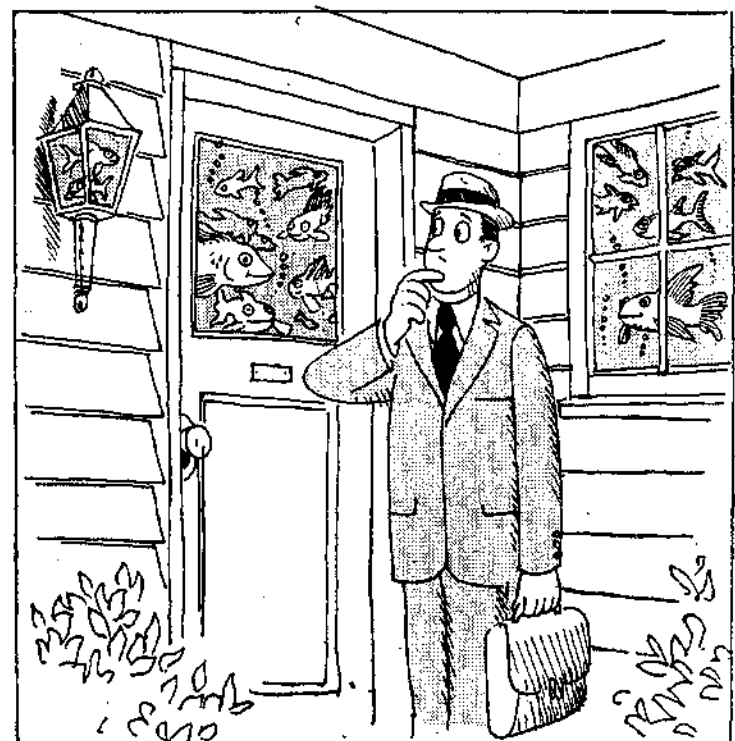

Most of the members exchange fish and work together on breeding techniques. Others merely study fish without every raising any.

MEMBERS WHO raise or breed fish can spend from about $80 to several thousands of dollars in one year for supplies and equipment, he said.

"A fish can cost you from about 10 cents for the common, dimstore goldfish to about $300,000 for an Oriental Koi fish that has identical scale patterns on either of its sides," Benson said.

It can be a hobby or it can be a full-time job, but it is tied with photography as the most popular pastime in this country today, he said.

The hobby is as pleasurable for senior citizens as it is for teens whose interest can eventually lead them to a lifetime profession.

'Immediate action' urged in air safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pilots and flight controllers tend to ignore storms near the ground they would dodge in the air. Sometimes the results are catastrophic, a federal safety board said Thursday.

Citing four landing approach crashes that killed 246 people, the National Transportation Safety Board said some corrective steps have been taken by the Federal Aviation Administration but many recommendations have been ignored.

"More positive and more immediate actions are necessary," the board said.

It recommended that the FAA adopt 14 specific measures, from more pilot and controller training to installation of equipment to warn of dangerous turbulence near airports.

IT ALSO REVIVED a 1974 recommendation, rejected then by the FAA but favored by the Professional Air Traffic Control Organization, that controllers be allowed to deny landing or takeoff clearances because of storms.

The board's action was prompted by the Eastern Air Lines Boeing 727 crash at New York's John F. Kennedy Airport that killed 113 persons last June 24. The jet, pushed down by storm winds, hit the runway approach lights.

The board noted that pilots detour at least 20 miles around storm cells at cruising altitude, and said that in landing "there appears to be a tendency . . . to let the desire for an uninterrupted flow of traffic interfere with an objective evaluation of the hazard potential of approaches through or under thunderstorms.

"Consequently, approaches are being conducted through these hazardous conditions during what is perhaps the most critical phase of flight."

THE BOARD recommended new storm research and the prompt development of equipment to measure storm violence within 6 miles of major runways and show wind direction and speed within one mile of runways.

Until then, it said, the FAA should require lighted windsocks about 1,000 feet from the end of major runways and instruments to measure surface wind speed at the end of runways.

The board said problems similar to those at JFK were found in a 1972 crash at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., of an Eastern Air Lines DC9 that injured three persons; the 1973 crash at St. Louis of an Ozark Air Lines FH227 that killed 37; and the 1974 crash at Pago Pago, Samoa, of a Pan Am Boeing 707 that killed 96.

$4 garbage fee to offset village 1976-77 budget

Revenue derived from imposing a direct garbage charge on Mount Prospect residents is expected to offset an anticipated $440,000 deficit in the village's proposed $9.6 million 1976-77 budget.

The additional money also will allow programs previously cut from the budget to be reinstated.

The total deficit was projected earlier this year because of a $187,000 deficit in the library budget and an additional $255,000 needed if village employees receive a 6 per cent salary increase.

Trustee Edward B. Rhea, Jr. said Thursday the $4 monthly charge with the 75-cent quarterly billing rate collected from approximately 15,500 garbage customers will save about $725,000 in village expenditures next year.

$300,000 plan to clear creek starts Monday

Work is expected to begin Monday on the $300,000 McDonald Creek flood-control project, Mount Prospect officials said Wednesday.

Village officials met with representatives of the Illinois Division of Water Resources, and the green light was given to start work on the project, expected to take four to six months to complete. The estimated date of completion on McDonald Creek is Aug. 16. Hongi Cartage Co., Chicago Heights, was awarded the construction contract.

The project, designed to curtail flooding problems caused by the Des Plaines River, includes plans for removing brush, trees and other obstructions along the creek to permit dredging and widening of the channel from Foundry Road to the river. The creek now varies in width along that route.

IF THE CHARGE goes into effect May 1, as expected, it should alleviate at least part of an immediate shortage of village operating funds expected to last through August.

"We simply don't have the revenue to do what we have to do," Rhea said referring to the cash flow problem. "It is a short-run situation caused by a quirk in the way revenue is coming in." Rhea said the bulk of the money is not received until September when taxes are collected.

Despite the additional monies made available through the direct garbage charge, the village will have to resort to short-term borrowing. "The additional revenue will certainly reduce the amount needed to be borrowed, though. I would guess we'll have to borrow close to $200,000 in May," Rhea said.

While trustees earlier this week, in a 4-3 vote, defeated a move to cut $75,000 in personnel, many have said programs previously deleted from the budget may now be reinstated because of the direct garbage charge.

MOUNT PROSPECT senior citizens price items to be sold at their annual rummage sale from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday at the Mount Prospect Community new senior citizen center to be located in the old Mount Prospect Public Library, 14 E. Busse Ave. The seniors will move in the building later this year.

Chicago area truckers roll as pact talks continue

by LEA TONKIN

Chicago area truck drivers are expected to stay on the job today as contract talks continue in Arlington Heights between Teamster union negotiators and industry negotiators.

Labor Sec. William J. Usery Jr., continuing his efforts to reach a national contract agreement, said Thursday that "the time is fast approaching to make a decision on the Taft-Hartley Act." Under Taft-Hartley the President can call for an 80-day cooling off period to halt the strike.

"There still are some wide differences of opinion. I assume if we don't reach an agreement we're in for several days of strikes, but it could change at any time," Usery said. "The overriding issue will soon become to protect the American public."

THE 400,000 TEAMSTERS represented at Arlington Heights haul 60 per cent of the nation's manufactured goods. The auto, steel, beer, bread, food and gasoline industries were likely to be immediately affected.

There was speculation Usery might leave today, bringing an effective end to the current talks and opening the way to federal action.

Meanwhile, an auto industry spokesman said Thursday that a prolonged strike would force a complete shutdown of the auto industry within a week, idling more than 700,000 workers in the United States and Canada.

Interruption of raw materials, particularly steel, and some of the 15,000 parts needed to assemble a modern automobile was felt immediately at some operations. The major effects, however, would not be felt until Monday.

THE STATES OF Michigan and Ohio would be hardest hit by auto plant shutdowns. More than 350,000 auto workers are employed in Michigan and another 125,000 work in Ohio facilities.

Industry analysts warned that a lengthy strike could cripple the industry's slow recovery from a two-year slump.

Automakers plan to build more than 2.4 million cars in the April-June quarter — the most since 1973 — to meet the strengthening spring demand for new cars.

Don't get too smug—a big snowfall is still possible

by JILL BETTNER

The capricious whims of the biggest prankster of them all — Old Man Winter — has taught most Northwest suburbanites never to be too smug when the first signs of spring appear.

Like a temperamental star not content to see the curtain come down after a commanding three- or four-month run, he often blusters back for just one more moment of glory and captures center stage with an unexpected blizzard — the bigger the better.

It was exactly one year ago today a sudden and violent storm dumped nearly a foot of white stuff on the Northwest suburbs, snarling traffic and stranding hundreds in offices and shopping centers overnight. Four died as a result of the storm.

IF THE WEATHER HOLDS, with

temperatures hovering around the lower 40s, the odds are that we'll have nothing worse than rain and a few flurries this spring. However, even the forecasters for the National Weather Service refuse to guarantee we won't have at least one more white whopper.

"I wouldn't wager anything on that," said forecaster James Buchanan. "It's really hard to tell. In April, we can still get one or two snows. It would have to get a little bit colder and we would need a low pressure area moving through the Chicago area."

Buchanan said there is no snow in the forecast for at least the next four days, but that's about as far ahead as the agency can predict.

The weather service was right on the button last year with advance warnings of the April 2 storm that started about noontime and steadily gained momentum the rest of the afternoon.

TRAVELERS AT O'Hare Airport slept curled up on benches or stretched out on the floor in the terminals. It was more than 24 hours before the airport, closed for only the third time in history, was back in full operation again.

Besides mere inconvenience, however, the storm also caused its share of tragedy. In Wheeling, a three-year-old boy wandered outside at the height of the storm while his brother slept. Hours later the boy was dead of exposure. He was just one of four area persons whose deaths were directly attributed to the blizzard.

The National Weather Service called the blizzard the worst since Jan. 26 and 27, 1967, when 23 inches fell on the Chicago area.

The Great Storm of '67 was one of those once-in-a-lifetime experiences. Almost everyone affected by the big snow remembers where he was and what he was doing when it hit — and tells his experience every time it snows.

With a little luck during the rest of the fickle month of April, maybe all the out-of-town friends and relatives who know our tales by heart won't have to listen to them again until next fall.

Aftermath of the storm last April 2. Will there be an encore?

Roads hike budget 4.5% in township

The Wheeling Township Highway Dept. budget has been set at $645,263 for fiscal 1976, an increase of approximately 4.5 per cent more than the current year's budget.

The township auditors approved the budget Tuesday. The projected tax rate is approximately 0.085 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation.

The highway budget was compiled with the 10.9 per cent over-all inflation rate during the past year, an anticipated over-all inflation rate of 7 per cent this year and continuing increased costs of petroleum-based products such as patch and seal coat materials.

Two of the largest increases in the highway budget were the $17,000 appropriation for general insurance, up from $10,000 appropriated last year, and the $19,000 appropriation for the Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund, up from $13,000 last year.

Highway Comr. Arthur E. Olsen Jr., said the insurance increase reflected higher insurance rates which "have nearly doubled in a year." He said the retirement fund increase was caused by more of the department's employees nearing eligibility.

The budget includes planned expenditures for resurfacing a half mile of Wheeling Road, a two-inch resurfacing of Daryl, Salk and Park streets and installing a traffic signal at the corner of Wolf and Willow roads.

The township will pay a fourth, the Village of Wheeling a fourth and the state will pay half the installation cost.

Story hours planned

Special preschool story hours will be held in the children's department of the Mount Prospect Public Library, 14 E. Busse Ave., next week in observance of National Library Week.

The schedule for the extra story hours is: Monday, 1:30 p.m.; Tuesday, 10 a.m.; Wednesday, 10 a.m.; and April 9, 1:30 p.m.

Children attending the special story hours should be at least 3 years old.

Teachers consider get-tough policy

by PAM BIGFORD

Elementary school teachers who are members of the North Suburban Unified Bargaining Council (NSUBC) will meet Wednesday to complete a platform for teacher contract bargaining which may include teachers refusing to begin school in September if their contracts have not been settled.

The bargaining coalition, associated with the statewide Illinois Education Assoc., represents about 2,400 teachers in 15 north suburban districts. Northwest suburban affiliates include unions in Prospect Heights Dist. 23, River Trails Dist. 26, Mount Prospect Dist. 57, Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 and the Northwest Suburban Special Education Organization. The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 union will consider membership Friday.

CLAIRE HYMAN, NSUBC chairman, said the members will vote on a proposition of "no contract — no work," meaning that teachers whose contracts are not settled by September would refuse to begin the school year until they have a contract.

Teachers beginning the school year without a contract has not been uncommon in the Northwest suburbs, though bargaining usually begins in February or March.

Of the member districts, Dist. 23 settled in October; Dist. 26 signed its contract in December; Dist. 57 settled in September after school began; and Dist. 59 reached an 11th-hour agreement the day before school started. NSUBC is bargaining for its first contract this year. Dist. 21 did not settle until after school began in September.

Lil Floros

Bicentennial flower logo

A giant bed of flowers forming the Mount Prospect Bicentennial logo will soon grow in front of the Public Safety Building, 112E. Northwest Hwy. The Mount Prospect Garden Club is handling the project.

The design will cover 18 by 22 feet with red and white begonias and blue ageratum making the pattern. The plot will be raised and slanted to provide easy viewing by passing motorists on Northwest Highway.

Tony Tyznik, director of famed Morton Arboretum, adapted the logo design for flowers.

The village public works department will provide the digging, grading and transplantation of large shrubs for the garden club. Planting will be done in May. The flowers are expected to be in full bloom for the Independence Day celebration on July 4.

The decorative planting is planned to be a continuing effort by the club for the next five years.

The Mount Prospect Lions Club and the village, through the Bicentennial commission, has provided funds for this project.

The Mount Prospect Garden Club, by the way is seeking new members. Anyone interested in joining the group should call Carol Alcoe, 230-6406.

BICENTENNIAL messages soon will appear on sidewalks in downtown Mount Prospect and at local shopping centers. The Mount Prospect Bicentennial Commission authorized commercial artist Ralph Pretzel to prepare five stencils for the project. These have been delivered to the public works department and are to be painted on walkways.
